MALTA—was formed from Stillwater, March 3, 1802, and a part of Saratoga was annexed March 28, 1805. It lies upon the w. bank of Saratoga Lake, s. E. of the center of the co. Its surface is chiefly an undulating upland, 60 to 80 feet above Saratoga Lake, and broken by the deep gullies of small streams. The streams are Kayaderosseras Creek, forming the n. boundary, Ballston Outlet Creek, an inlet, and Anthonys Kil, the outlet of Round Lake, and Drummonds Brook, flowing into Saratoga Lake. Round Lake, in the s. E., is nearly circular, and I mi. in diameter. A swampy region covering an area of several hundred acres lies in the N. E. part of the town, at the mouth of the Kayaderosseras. The soil is principally a light, sandy loam, with clay and muck in the lowlands. Dunning Street, (Malta p. o., ) near the center of the town, contains I church and 17 houses. Maltaville, (p.o.,) in the s. part, Malta Ridge, in the N, and Halls Corners, are hamlets. MILTON—was formed from Ballston, March 7, 1792, and a part of Greenfield was taken off in 1793. It lies a little s, of the center of the co. Its surface is moderately hilly in the N., and undulating in the s., with a slight inclination toward Kayaderosseras Creek, which flows s.E. through the center of the town. This stream has a rapid fall and furnishes a valuable waterpower. Kayawese Creek, from the w., is its principal tributary. In the n. part are limestone ridges, extensively quarried for building stone and lime. The Saratoga mineral spring region extends through the s. E. part. The soil is generally a sandy loam. Ballston Spa, (Ballston p.o.,) the co. seat, was incorp. March 21, 1807. It is situated on Kayaderosseras Creek, in the s. E. corner of the town. It contains the co. buildings, 2 seminaries, 5 churches, 2 printing offices, and several manufacturing establishments. Pop. 2,285, of which I,941 are in this town. MORDAU<sup>8</sup>—was taken from Northumberland, March 28, 1805. A part was annexed to Corinth in 1848. It lies in the great bend of the Hudson, in the N.E. corner of the co. The w. part of the town is occupied by the rocky and precipitons peaks of the Palmertown Mt. Range. The central and E. portions are undulating and broken by the narrow ravines of small streams. The Hudson River forms the N., the E., and a part of the w. boundary of the town. Upon its course are numerous rapids and waterfalls,9 The Snook Kil and its tributaries drain the s. part of the town. The soil is generally a light, yellow, sandy loam, but in the s. and w. are tracts of clay and gravel. South Glens Falls, (p.v.,) on the Hudson, opposite Glens Falls, contains several manufacturing establishments;10 pop. 513. Fortsville, (p. v.,) in the central part, contains 25 houses. Clarks Corners, Reynolds Corners, and State Dam are hamlets. Morean Station is a p. o., situated on the R. & W. R. R. Settlements are said to have been made before the Revolution; but their history is only a vague tradition. 11 The first church (Bap.) was built in 1795.12

SARATOGA<sup>8</sup>—was formed as a district, March 24, 1772, and as a town, March 7, 1788, Easton (Washington co.) was taken off in 1789, a part of Greenfield in 1793, Northumberland in 1798, a part of Malta in I805, and Saratoga Springs in I819. It lies upon the Hudson, near the center of the E. border of the co. A range of high, rounded, and sometimes terraced hills extends N. and s. through the central and w. parts. These hills rise 450 feet above the Hudson and slope in every direction. Narrow allowial flats bordered by high clay bluffs extend along the Hudson. Saratoga Lake forms a portion of the w. boundary. Fish Creek, the outlet of the lake, flowing through the N. part of the town, is the principal stream; and upon it are several fine mill sites. The other streams are small brooks. The soil x, of Fish Creek is light and sandy, and in the remaining parts of the town it is a gravelly and clavey loam. Three mineral springs, known as "Quaker Springs," issue from the Hudson River slate, in a ravine a little s. E. of the center of the town. Schuylerville, 10 (p. v..) incorp. The business of the village is principally connected with the enter tainment of strangers during the fashionable watering season. The springs are on that part of the Kayaderosseras Patent that fell to the share of Rip Van Dam. Sir Wm. Johnson is said to have been the first white person who ever used the Saratoga waters for medicinal purposes. In 1767 he was brought to the place on a litter, and, after remaining several days, he was able to return on foot. His example was followed, and the visits of invalids soon became of frequent occurrence. In 1773, Derick Scowton made the first clearing and erected a hut. He was followed soon after by George Arnold and Saml. Norton.<sup>5</sup> In 1783, Gen. Schuyler cut a road through from Fish Creek, and spent several weeks here, living in a tent. The next year he erected a framed house, (the first in town,) and annually afterward until his death he spent a part of the summer here with his family.6 Several prominent men have resided in the village. 1 High Rock Spring, the first discovered of these, was so named ] from a pyramidal mound of calcareous tufa  $3\frac{1}{8}$  feet high and  $24\frac{1}{2}$ feet in diameter at the base which has been formed around it.

An aperture I foot in diameter opens from the top of the rock downward, in which the water generally rises  $1\frac{1}{2}$  feet above the surface of the ground. It is said that the water once overflowed the top; but at an early day the rock was cracked by the fall of a tree, and the water sunk to its present level. Congress Spring was discovered in 1792, by a hunting party, and named in compliment to John Taylor, one of the number, who had been a member of the Continental Congress. The present spring was obtained by sinking a well in the hed of the stream near the original fountain. The Columbia Spring, a few rods s, w, of the latter, is chalybeate, and constantly boiling from the escape of gas. It was opened in 1806, by G. Putnam. The Homilton Spring, 50 rods N. E. of Congress, was discovered by G. Putnam, and brought into use by Dr. Clarke. The Pavilion Fountain. opened in 1839, has a smart, jungent taste. The ladine Spring, situated a few rods N. of High Rock, was opened in 1839. The water contains a large proportion of iodine and very little iron. This spring has sometimes been called the Walton Spring, from Henry Walton, a large proprietor of lands in the vicinity. WILTON—was formed from Northumberland, April 20, 1818. It lies a little N.E. of the center of the eo. The Palmertown Mts., with their steep, rocky slopes and broken, forest-covered summits, extend across the N. W. corner. The center and s. W. are gently undulating, or broken by low ridges. The principal streams are Snook Kil and Bog Meadow and Cold Brooks. The soil in the E. and S. E. is a yellow, sandy loam resting on elay, and in some places swampy. At the foot of the Palmertown Mts. is a belt of productive gravel and clay loam. A heavy growth of white and yellow pine originally covered the plains, but little woodland now remains. Near Emersons Corners is a spring of acidulous and earbonated water, and in the s. part of the town is a sulphur spring. Wilton (p. v.) contains 20 houses; and Emersons Corners, in the N. part of the town, is a hamlet. The first settlement was made in 1774 or '75, by Rowland Perry and his sons Samuel, John, Benj., Absalom, Roswell, Artemas, Rowland, and Joseph, from Dutchess co. 14 Near the mill pond on Snook Kil are traces of Indian occupation; pestles, broken pottery, and flint arrow heads have been found in abundance. The census reports 4 churches in town, 15

Upon these streams are several fine cascades.
 This spring is called the White Sulphur Spring. A few years since, a hotel and bathing house were erected here, and a small steamer was put upon the lake. The building was burned 2 or 3 years after, and the enterprise was abandoned.

SCHENECTADY COUNTY.

This county was formed from Albany, March 7, 1809. It is centrally distant 20 mi, from Albany, and contains 221 sq. mi. The greater part lies between Mohawk River and Schoharie Creek,-one town only lying N. of the Mohawk. The surface consists of the Mohawk Valley and an upland, generally much broken by ridges and isolated hills, 200 to 350 feet above the river. The highlands are the northern continuation of the Helderbergh and Schoharie Mts. The underlying rock is generally the shales of the Hudson River group, which crop out in the valleys and the bottoms of the In portions of Glenville and Duanesburgh this rock is underlaid by birdseye limestone, from which are obtained both lime and stone for building. The greater part of the surface is covered with a thick deposit of drift, consisting principally of elay in the w. part and sand in the E. The rocks crop out on the banks of the streams and form the declivities of the steeper hills. The soil in the w. part is a tenacious, clayey loam, underlaid by hardpan on the hills, and in the E. a light, unproductive sand. The valley of the Mohawk consists of a deep, rich alluvinm, well adapted to tillage, and extensively devoted to the cultivation of broomcorn.1

The principal streams are Mohawk River, Schoharie Creek, and Normans Kil, and their branches. The valleys of these streams are generally bordered by the steep declivities of the uplands, rising to a height of about 300 feet. Many of the smaller streams have worn deep gullies in the loose drift deposits, giving to the surface a very broken character. small streams are mostly dry in summer. The fine allovial flats near Schenectady, extending 5 mi. w. on the s. side of the river, were called by the first settlers the "Bouwlandt." A tract 2 mi. in extent, N. of the river, was called the "Maulwyck;" and a tract on both sides, 4 mi. w. of the city, was known as the "Weestina." A region immediately about Schenectady was called "Oron-nygh-wurrie-gughre;" the hills s. were known as the "Yan-ta-puch-a-berg;" and those on both sides of the river above the city were called "Tou-ar-e-u-ne." The streams of "Woestina" were " Verf Kil," Zantzee Kil, and "Righelbrigh Kil." The valleys are best adapted to tillage and the hills to pasturage.9 Manufactures are chiefly limited to the city of Schenectady.10 In Glenville are about a dozen broom factories, employing 450 persons.

The county seat is located at Schenectady City. The courthouse and clerk's office are both situated on Union St.: the former contains the courtroom, jail, sheriff's and supervisors' rooms, 12 and the latter the clerk's and surrogate's offices. The poorhouse is located on a farm of H6 acres, on the Albany Road, just E. of the city. It has, on an average, about 75 inmates, and the farm yields a revenue of $1,200. There are 5 newspapers published in the co.13

1 One-half of the entire broomcorn crop of the State is raised | within this co. A considerable portion of the broomcorn land is annually overflowed, rendering it continually fertile; and many tracts have produced this crop alone for many years.

  11 By the terms of the act making Schenectady the co. seat, the courthouse was to be built at the expense of the city. The first county officers were Gerrit S. Veeder, First Judge; Peter V. Veeder, Clerk; Jas. V. S. Riley, Sheriff; and Wm. J.
- Teller, Surrogate. 12 The first courts were held in the City Hall, and afterward
- in the West College. 18 The following is a nearly complete list of the newspapers in
- the co.: Western Spectator was issued prior to 1807.
- The Schenectady Cabinet was commenced in Jan. 1809, by Isasc Riggs. In 1850 it passed into the bands of S. S. Riggs, who continued it until 1857.
- The Western Budget was issued a short time in 1809. The Mohawk Advertiser was pub. in 1810 by R. Schermerhorn. The Floriad, 8vo, mo., was published in 1811.

- The Schenectady Gazette was published in 1812, by Ryer Schermerhoin
- The Schenertady County Whig was issued in 1830, by C. G. and A. Palmer, and was continued until 1834.

  The Schenectuly Standard was published in 1831, by T. J.
- Sutherland. The Schenectudy Democrat was begun in 1828, by C. G. and A.
- Palmer. T. W. Flagg became its publisher in 1837, and the same year it was changed to The Reflector and Schenectady Democrat.
- has been successively published by G. Yates, E. H. Kiacaid, and A. A. Keyser, and is now published by Fred. W. Hoffman
- The Censor was published in 1834, by the students of Union College. The Purthenon, mo., was published in 1846-47 by the college students.
- The Mohamker was published in 1835, by Riggs & Norris, The Protestant Sentinel was commenced in 1835, by Rev. John
- Maxon, and continued 2 years, The Wreath was started in 1835, by W. H. Burleigh, and con- tinued I year.

  Freedom's Sential was issued during the campaign of 1840, by Stephen S. Riggs.
- The Antiquarian and General Review, mo., was started in 1845, by Rev. W. Arthur, and continued 2 years.
- The Scroll, mo., was published a short time in 1849.

  The Schenectady Pemocrat was founded in 1852, by W. M. Colb cred and W. N. Clark. In 1857 it was sold to A. J. Thompson, and in April, 1859, to C. Thay r.

The great flat upon the Mohawk w. of "Fort Orange," and where the city of Schenectady now stands, was bought of the natives in July, 1661, in the name of Arent Van Corlaer; and settlement was commenced during the same year. It was under the charge of 5 commissioners until Nov. 1, 1684, when Gov. Dougan grauted a patent confirming previous rights and extending the territory. On the night between the 8th and 9th of Feb. 1690, N.S., the settlement—then consisting of about 80 houses-was surprised by a party of about 300 French and Indians, and nearly every house was burned. Sixty-three persons were killed, and 27 were carried to Canada as prisoners. The night was intensely cold, and the nearest place of refuge was Albany, to which a few escaped after much suffering.4 In 1702 R. Schermerhorn became sole trustee; and in 1705 a new patent was issued, conferring certain township privileges. On the 23d of Oct. 1765, the place was created a borough, with the rights and immunities incident to these corporations.<sup>5</sup> From 1726 to the Revolution the township of Scheneetady sent a representative to the General Assembly. During the war the village was fortified and garrisoned at the public expense, and many families from the Upper Mohawk sought protection here from the incursions of the tories and Indians.<sup>6</sup> For several years after 1779 a large number of friendly Oneida and Tuscarora families, driven from their homes by the hostile tribes, were supported in this vicinity at the expense of the General Government. At the return of peace the settlement shared in the general prosperity. A new impulse was given to business by the improvements effected by the Western Inland Navigation Co., which enabled large boats to make longer voyages. Upon the completion of the Erie Canal the Mohawk navigation was entirely superseded. For several years after the completion of the R.R. from Albany in 1831, large quantities of merchandise were sent here to be shipped on the caual, saving the delay of the circuitous reute and numerous locks on the eanal between Schenectady and Troy.8 In 1832 a R. R. was built to Saratoga, in 1835, to Utiea, and in 1843, to Troy. In 1849 several plank roads were built, which since have been mostly abandoned.

DUANESBURGH<sup>9</sup>—was erected as a township, by patent, March 13, 1765, and it was first recognized as a town March 22, 1788. It lies in the s. w. corner of the co. Its surface consists of an upland, broken by the narrow valleys and gullies of small streams. Schoharie Creek forms a portion of its w. boundary, and Normaus Kil flows through the s. part. hills that border upon these streams are steep, and in some places rocky. principal streams are Corrys Brook, Chuctenunda Creek, and Bozen Kil. Maria Pond and Weatherstons Lake are 2 small bodies of water in the N. E. part, about 250 feet above the canal. The soil is principally a stiff, clay loam, with a slight intermixture of gravel. It is best adapted to pasturage. Duanesburgh (p. v.) contains about a dozen houses, Quaker Street<sup>10</sup> (p. v.) 30, Mariaville<sup>11</sup> (p. v.) 20, and Bramans Corners (p. v.) 18. Eatous Corners is a hamlet. Large tracts in this town were purchased by different parties between 1736 and 1770,12 but no active measures of settlement were taken till about the time of its organization in 1765. During that year Duane, who had become an extensive proprietor, con-

The Smartener, Anadar, and the tract was surveyed in 1664. The inhabitants of Fort Orange, wishing to monopolize the Indian trade, presented to the settlers, before the land was received trade, presented to the settlers, before the land was received from the surveyor, a written pledge to abstain from trading with the Indians. A remonstrance against this injustice was aigned by the following early settlers, viz.: A. Van Corlaer, Philip Hendrickson, Sanders Lendertsen Glen, Simon Volkrartsen, Pieter Soghmaekelyk, Teunis Cornelissen. Marte Cornelise, Willem Teller, Bastiaen De Winter for Catalym, widow of Aren Andries de Voss, Pieter Jacobse Borshoom, Pieter Danielse Van Olinda, Jan Barentse Wemp, and Jacques Cornelise. Their resistance occasioned several years' delay in the survey of the lands.

The boats employed, called "Durham boats," were propelled up stream by setting poles, and were fleated down by the current.

Named from James Duane, the principal proprietor. It was first joined with Schoharie, as "the united district of Duanes-hurgh and Schoharie." It was made a separate district, March 24. Mr. Duane took an active part in public affairs during the Revolution and the earlier years of the State Government, and was a liberal benefactor of the town.

tracted with 20 Germans from Penn., of whom 16 came on and made a permanent settlement. The first church (Christs Ch., Prot. E.) was formed Aug. 3, 1795, and the church edifice was erected by Judge Duane. Rev. David Belden was the first rector.2

GLENVILLE<sup>3</sup>—was formed from Schenectady, April 14, 1820. It is the only town in the co. N. of the Mohawk. The central and w. parts are occupied by rugged and wooded hills abruptly rising from the valley of the river to a height of 300 feet. The E. part is nearly level. The streams are Crabbs Kil, Changh-ta-noon-da, Aalplaats,4 and Jan Wemps Creeks, and Verf Kil. The soil among the hills is a stiff clay, underlaid by hardpan, with an occasional outcrop of slate; and in the E. part it is a sandy and gravelly loam. The Mohawk intervales are very fertile, and are chiefly devoted to the culture of broomcorn. Glenville (p. v.) contains 2 churches and 20 houses, Scotia<sup>5</sup> (p. v.) 2 churches and 266 inhabitants, Reesville 12 houses and a broom factory, and High Mills 13 houses, 1 grist and 2 saw mills, and woolen factory. Hoffmans Ferry<sup>6</sup> (p. o.) is a hamlet and R. R. station. East Glenville and Town Center are p. offices. Bridges connect this town with Schenectady and Niskayuna. Settlements were made about 1665, and were among the earliest in the co.<sup>7</sup> The Sanders House, in this town, was spared by the enemy when Schenectady was destroyed.8 There are 5 churches in town.9

NISKAYUNA<sup>10</sup>—was formed from Watervliet, (Albany co.,) March 7, 1809. A part of Schenectady was annexed in 1853. It lies upon the Mohawk, in the E. part of the co. Its surface is mostly upland, terminating in steep bluffs upon the river valley. The intervales are very rich and productive. A strip of land about 1 mi. wide, extending back from the summits of the bluffs, has a hard, clay soil, and a considerable portion of it is swampy and unfit for cultivation. Further s. the soil is sandy. Watervliet Center (p, o) is within the limits of this town. Niskayuna is a hamlet in the s. E. corner. The first settlements were made about 1640.11 The canal crosses the Mohawk into this town upon a magnificent stone aqueduct.<sup>12</sup> There is I church (Ref. Prot. D.) in town.

PRINCETOWN<sup>13</sup>—was formed from Schenectady, March 26, 1798. It lies a little w. of the center of the co. Its surface consists of a broken upland, gently descending toward the s. E. The streams are Normans Kil in the s, and Zantzee Kil in the N.14 The soil is a heavy clay loam, underlaid by hardpan, and is best adapted to grazing. Princetown (p. o.) is a hamlet. The town was chiefly conveyed to Geo. Ingoldsby and Aaron Bradt, in 1737. Wm. Corry afterward became owner, and formed a settlement, which was long known as "Corrysbush." The town was thinly settled at the time of the Revolution. The Princetown Academy, a Presb. institution, was opened here, on an extensive scale, in 1853, and was discontinued in 1856. There are a Presb. and a Ref. Prot. D. church in town.

ROTTERDAM-was formed from Schenectady, April 14, 1820. A part of the city was annexed in 1853. It lies near the center of the co., upon the s. bank of the Mohawk. The surface consists of a broken, hilly region in the N. w., a level intervale extending from the center toward the s., and a high plain in the E. The soil upon the w. hills is a tough clay, underlaid by shale, which frequently crops out. The central valley or plain, 5 mi. in extent, was called by the Dutch the "Bouwlandt." The soil is a deep alluvinm. The E. plateau is sandy and barren. Rotterdam, Mohawkville, and Factoryville are hamlets.15 Settlements were first made about 1661. The first church was organized Aug. 29, 1800; Rov. Thes. Romeyn was the first paster. 17 lands which retarded their settlement.

There are in town 5 other churches: Cameronian, Bap., Univ., Presh., and Quaker.

The house of Van Otto stood on the site of the one now occupied by Simon Veeder. Revolution there were families living in town by the names of Delemont, Van Pelten, and Braugham.

SCHENECTADY CITY—was patented, with certain municipal rights, Nov. 4, 1684; chartered as a borough Oct. 23, 1765; incorp. as a district, March 24, 1772, as a town, March 7, 1788, and as a city, March 26, 1798. Princetown was set off in 1798, Rotterdam and Glenville in 1820, and parts of Niskayuna and Rotterdam in 1853.1 It is situated on the Mohawk, and on the borders of one of the finest intervales in the State. A considerable amount of trade is carried on in the city by means of the canal and the railroads that center here; but the people are more largely engaged in manufactures.2 The engine houses and repair shops of the N. Y. C. R. R. Co. are very extensive; and one of the largest locomotive manufactories in the country is located here.3

This city is especially noted as the seat of Union College. This institution was incorp, by the regents, Feb. 25, 1795, and received its name from the cooperation and union of several religious denominations in its foundation.4 A fund was first raised by private subscription to erect the necessary buildings and to defray the expenses of opening the school; and this was increased by the avails of several lotteries authorized by the legislature, by grants of land and money from the State, and by private donations. The total amount received from the State, np to 1822, for permanent investment, was $331,612 13. In a will dated Dec. 28, 1855, Dr. Nott, the president of the college, bequeathed to the trustees $555,000 for specific purposes and an additional fund for miscellaneous expenses.<sup>7</sup> The funds thus bequeathed were derived from the profits of certain investments of college funds, and amounts from other sources, which had been employed for the purpose of creating a fund for the endownent of the institution. The first college building was erected in the city; but in 1814 a tract of land upon an eminence E. of the city was purchased, and the two principal buildings were erected.9 The site commands an extensive view of the city, the river, and the valley. The faculty of the college now consists of a president, 12 professors, I lecturer, and 3 tutors. The total number of students is 420, and has not materially varied from this number for a great number of years, the junior and senior classes being invariably larger than those that preceded them. A considerable number of students derive aid from the State fund, which is extended to students of limited means without reference to the profession they intend to follow. The college has received from E.C. Delavan, Esq., a magnificent donation of minerals and shells, known as the "Wheatley Collection," which was purchused for this purpose at a cost of $10,000. Departments of Civil Engineering and Analytical Chemistry have been organized, and the facilities which they afford are of the most ample kind.

The Public Schools are under 8 commissioners, elected once in 2 years. There were, in 1857, 9 school districts, employing 3 male and 22 female teachers. The number of children between 4 and 21, was 3065, of whom 1729, or 56 per cent., attended the public schools. 10

The first settlement was made in 1661, as already noticed. As this was an advance frontier settlement, the compact part, at an early period, was enclosed by palisades. In 1690 the enclosure spelled Schenectada. The city under its first charter, contained an area of 128 sq. mi.; but the successive changes which have been made have reduced it to a plat of 250 acres.

2 The manufacturing establishments of the city consist of the 1851, with a capital of $150,000, all of which is actively em ployed. When in full operation, they employ 600 hands, and can turn out I locomotive every 5 days.

4 Rev. Wm. Andreas opened the first grammar school, in 1771; and before the close of the year he proposed to change it to an academy. The Consistory of the Ref. I'rot, D. church erected a small academy in 1785. The Schenectady Academy was incorp Jan. 29, 1793, and was merged in the college in 1795. Rev. John Plair Smith was the first President. He was succeeded in June, 1799, by Rev. Jonathan Edwards, who remained until his death in Aug. 1801. Rev. Jonathan Maxey was next elected president, and continued till 1804, when he resigned, and was succeeded by Rev.

Eliphialet Nott, the present venerable president of the College.

5 In 1779, the inhabitants of the northern part of the State petitioned for the incorp. of a college, but without success. The petition was renewed in 1791, but did not succeed. In 1794 another effort was made, and a subscription of $7935 was raised from 99 persons in Albany, and of $3425 from 231 persons in Schenectady, for an endowment. This sum was afterward largely increased by subscription. The location was fixed at [ 7 The items of this bequest are as follows:— $225,000 for 9 professorships, with a salary of $1500 each.

$60,000 for 6 assistant professorships, at $600 each,

$60,000 for an astronomical observatory. $20,000 for 60 anxiliary scholarships, of $10 and $12 per term. $60,000 for 60 prize scholarships for undergraduates, of $15 and $18 per term; in certain cases to be increased to $24 $45,000 for 9 scholarships for graduates or fellows, of $300 each.

$20,000 for a cemetery.

$10,000 for apparatus, $5,000 for textbooks.

$50,000 for an eclectic library. $5,000 for a geological and mineralogical cabinet, $5,000 for a historical cubinet.

$10,000 for a lecture fund.

The miscellaneous fund was left discretionary with the trustees to fill deficiencies and extend the operation of any of the foregoing objects. At the time of this gift the greater part of the fainds were invested in real estate in Greenpoint village, opposite N.York City, 6 This building, formerly known as "West College," was solo to the city, and, with an adjoining building, accommodates the 10 departments of the public schools of the city.

was in form of an oblong reetangle, with gates at the ends. The people, however, felt so secure that the gates were habitually left open, and no guard was kept; and hence it was easily entered by the enemy on the memorable 9th of Feb. 1690, N.S. The lives of 60 old persons and children were spared from the massacre. The settlement recovered slowly from the disaster, and not until the close of King William's War did it receive any considerable accessions. A new fort was built in May, 1690, which was garrisoned for many years. Another fort was built in 1735, and another in 1780.1 The old fort stood at the intersection of Ferry and Front Sts. The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was organized in 1684, and the building was erected on the s. end of Church St. in 1685. It was burned in 1690;2 and a new building was erected, about 1702, on the site of the present church, corner of Union and Church Sts. St. George's Church (Prot. E.) was organized, in 1735, by Rev. H. Barclay, incorp. in 1766, and an edifice erected in 1768. The first mail was brought to the town April 3, 1763. The first English school was opened, under the care of Rev. Henry Barclay, in 1710.6 The Vale Cemetery Association was formed Feb. 25, 1858.7 The population of the city has slowly and steadily increased, although, from the setting off of portions of its territory, the census reports for some periods show an apparent decrease.8

SCHOHARIE COUNTY.

This county was formed from Albany and Otsego, April 6, 1795.1 A small part of Greene was annexed in 1836. It is an interior eo., lying s. E. of the center of the State, is centrally distant 35 mi. from Albany, and contains 675 sq. mi. Its surface is an upland, broken by mountains in the s. and by hills in the center and N. A northerly branch of the Catskill Mts. lies along the s. border, the highest summits of which are 3,000 ft. above tide. From them irregular spurs extend northward, occupying the greater part of the co. Many of the summits along the E. and w. borders are 800 to 1,000 ft. above the valleys and about 2,000 ft. above tide. In the N. the hills are generally rounded and are arable to their summits; but in the center and s. the declivities are steep and in many places precipitous. The high ridge along the E. border, and extending into Albany co., is known as the Hellebark Mts.

The hills derive their general features from the rocks that underlie them. The extreme N. part of the eo. is terraced like the limestone region farther w. Toward the s. the hills become more steep; and in the shaly region they are broken by deep, irregular ravines. In many places the hills bordering upon the streams are 1,000 ft. high and in places very steep. Schoharie Creek flows N. E. through the co., a little E. of the center. It receives as tributaries Foxes Creek, Stony Brook, Little Schoharie Creek, Keysers, Platter, and Manor Kils from the E., and Cripplebush, Cobles, Line, Panther, West, and Mine Kils from the w. West and Punch Kils are tributaries of Cobles Kil. Charlotte River, a brauch of the Susquehanna, takes its rise in the w. part, and Catskill Creek in the s. E. part, having its source in a marsh called the Vlaic. Utsyanthia2 and Summit Lakes, two small ponds, are the only bodies of water in the eo. The former is 1,900 ft. and the latter 2,150 ft. above tide.

The rocks in the co., commencing upon the N. border and appearing successively toward the s., are those belonging to the Hudson River group, Clinton group, Onondaga salt group, Helderbergh series, Hamilton group, Portage and Chemung group, and the Catskill group. The limestones are cavernous; and the minerals which they afford are particularly interesting to mineralogists.3 Drift is scattered over the co. to a limited extent. Waterline is found, but is not now manufactured.

The soils are principally derived from the disintegration of the underlying rocks. In the N. the soil is a productive, clay loam, and in the center and s. it is a clay and sandy loam, the latter predominating upon the s. hills. The alluvial flats along Schoharie Creek are unusually fertile.

The co. is eminently an agricultural region. Spring grains are largely produced. Hops are cultivated in the w. part, and broomcorn upon the Schoharie Flats. Dairying is the principal business in the s. part. Very little manufacturing is done, except such as is customary in an agricultural region.

The county seat is located at the village of Schoharie.4 The courthouse is a fine edifice built of blue limestone, located near the center of the village. The jail is a stone building, situated in rear of the courthouse. The clerk's office is a small, fireproof building, upon the courthouse lot, nearly in front. The poorhouse is located upon a farm of 160 acres in Middleburgh, 5 mi. s. w. of the courthouse. The average number of inmates is 60, supported at a weekly cost of 75 cents each. This institution seems to be well managed and much above the average of similar institutions in the State.

The Albany & Susquehauna R. R. is located along the valleys of Schoharie Creek and Cobles been written Shoary, Skehary, Schughherre, &c.

2 Utsyanthia was the N. E. corner of the Hardenburgh Patent, and a distinguished landmark in early records.

The co. affords an unusual variety of fossils peculiar to the respective geological formations.

The first courts were held in a wagon house of Johannis Ingold, and prisoners were at first sent to the Albany jail. The first meeting of the Judges, Justices, and Supervisors was held Dec. 16, 1795, and it was decided to fix the site for co. buildings 2 mi. w. of their present location. The location was changed before the buildings were creeted. The first buildings were creeted soon after, and were burned in 1847. The first court-house was built under the direction of Joest Borst, jr., Jacob Lawyer, Peter Snyder, John H. Shafer, and Win. Phrall. com-Lawyer, Feter Suder, John H. Shaier, and Wh. About thirty years previous to the advent of the whites, a number of Indians belonging to the Mohawks, Mohieaus, Delawares, Tuscaroras, and Oneidas united together, formed the Schoharie tribe, and took up their abode along Schoharie Creek.<sup>8</sup> Their principal chief was Ka-righ-ondon-tee, who had been a prisoner of the French in Canada and had married a Mohawk woman. This tribe was subordinate to the Six Nations. They could bring into the field about 600 warriors, and in the wars that ensued they steadily esponsed the cause of the British. At an early period, with the aid of the Colonial Government, they erected several strongholds to protect themselves from the attacks of the Canada Indians. A band of 200 Indians remained in the valley, at peace with the settlers, until the commencement of the Revolution. Efforts were made to induce them to remain neutral during the war; but the offers of the British were so tempting that at last they took up arms against their neighbors. Previous to this a pestilence had swept off the greater part of the tribe, though the whites were not in the least affected by it.

The first white settlement was made by a colony of German Palatinates, in 1711. These people had previously settled at East and West Camp, on the Rudson. Their number is estimated at 600 to 700. They settled in 7 clusters, or villages, each under a leader or head man, from whom the dorf, or village, was usually named. The Dutch soon after began a settlement at "Troomwisland," on the w. side of the creek, 2 or 3 mi. above the German settlement.<sup>5</sup> The Palatinates at first did not secure a patent for the lands they occupied, and a short time after their settlement Nicholas Bayard appeared as agent of the British Government, and offered to give the settlers deeds for their lands; but he was assailed by a mob and was obliged to flee for his life. Upon reaching Schenectady he sent back word that for an ear of corn each he would give a clear title to the lands occupied by each; but this offer was rejected. He returned to Albany and sold the tract to 5 persons at that place.6 A sheriff, named Adams, was sent to arrest some of the trespassers: but no sooner was his business known than he was assailed by a mob and ridden upon a rail. For a considerable time after this outrage none of the German settlers dared visit Albany; but after a time they ventured to do so, and were at once arrested and thrown into jail. They were at length released on making a written acknowledgment of the outrage they had perpetrated.7 The settlers at length sent an embassy, consisting of Conrad Weiser, —— Casselman, and another, to England to petition the king for redress. The ship that took them out carried also a statement of the out rages, and the ambassadors were at once imprisoned; but after a time they were set at liberty and permitted to return. Weiser was so chagrined at the result of the controversy that soon after, with about 60 families, he emigrated to Tulpehocton, Berks co., Penn. Other families removed to German Flats and others to Stone Arabia.<sup>8</sup> Peter Vrooman, with several Dutch families, perma-

at "Froomanstand," in the present town of Fulton.

<sup>4</sup> Six of these leaders were Conrad Weiser, Hartman Winteker, John Hendrick Kneiskern, Elias Garlock, Johannes George after, is supposed to have been the seventh. "Weisers Darf" occupied the present site of Middleburgh Village, and had some 40 dwellings, like the others, built rudely of logs and earth and covered with bark and grass. "Hartmans Dorf" was 2 mi, below, and had 65 dwellings. "Funs Dorf," or "Brunne Dorf," or "Funutain Town," was near the courthouse. "Smiths Dorf" was a mi farther N. "Foxs Dorf" was still farther down, about a mi, from Smiths. "Garlocks Dorf" was 22 mi, below; and "Kneiskerns Dorf" 2 or 3 mi, still farther N. Among these early settlers, besides those above named, were families named Keyser, Bonck, Richard, Richtmeyer, Warner, Weaver, Zimmer, Mattiez, Zeh, Bellinger, Borst, Schooleraft, Crysler, Casselman, Newkirk, Earhart, Brown, Settle, Merckley, Snyder, Ball,

6 Adam Vrooman, from Schenectady, obtained a patent for 1,100 acres, Aug. 25, 1714. His tract was afterward found to contain 1,400 acres. It embraced the flats along the creek in the present town of Fulton, except Wilder Hook, at which place was an Indian castle and settlement. His soo Peter, for whom it was bought, built a house, planted com, and the first winter left the premises in charge of a man named Timax, and a negro man and his wife. Truax was murdered, and the negro and his wife were arrested, tried at Albany, and burned alive; but years after, one Moore, a resident of "Wisers Dorf," confessed that he and the negro man committed the deed, and that the woman was innocent.—Simms's Schoharis, p. 56.

Robert Livingston, je., John Schuyler, and Henry Wichman. They received a patent. Nov. 3, 1714, for 10,000 acres, which was designed to include the flats from "Froomurstand" to Montgomery co, line; but on being surveyed by Lewis Morris, jr., and Andrus Cocyman, it was found that the flats on Fox Creek and at the month of Cobles Kil were not included, and these lands were secured by the surveyors. In a short time Morris and Cocyman joined interest with the five proprietors, and the company became known as the "Seven Partners," Find suits for partition and settlement were adjusted in 1819, '25, '26, '28, and '29, '7 After this time a large number of settlers took leaves of the proprietors, thus abandoning their claims to the lands.

8 Among those who removed to the Mohawk was Elias Garlock, the first and long the only magistrate in Sch harle.

&lt;sup>9</sup> Among these were families named Swartz, Ecker, Hagadem, Feeck, and Becker. Lawrence Schoolcraft made the first cider in the Scholarie settlements; — Brown, in 1752, was the first wagon maker. John Mattice Junk taught the first German school at the Camps, about 1749; and schools were taught in Scholarie seen after. Dutch schools were taught at "Proomaniziond" at an early period; and about 1760. English was first trught in schools in this region. John Ecker was the first blacksmith. The settlers of the valley resorted to Schenectady to mill, or used stump mortars, until many years after, when a mill was built on Mill Creek, near Fox Creek, by Simeon Laratway. Bolting cloths were first used in this co. about 1760. John Lawyer was the first merchant among the Germans.

nently located upon his patent in 1727. The German and Dutch races long remained distinct, The Dutch were generally wealthier than the more hardy and laborious Germans, and preferred to contract marriages with those of their own class in the older Dutch settlements. They often kept slaves, while the Germans seldom had further assistance than such as their own households, of both sexes, might afford. The Germans, by intermarriage, became a "family of cousins;" and they were united by many ties of common interest. Industry and frugality gradually brought them to a level, and long acquaintance has almost entirely obliterated these hereditary distinctions of society. Upon the approach of the Revolution, a part of the people espoused the cause of the British; but the majority were ardent patriots. In many cases members of the same family were engaged on opposite sides, and the struggle assumed all the horrors of a civil war, aggravated by Indian barbarities. A Council of Safety was organized in 1774, of which Johannes Ball was chairman. During the war several conflicts took place within the limits of the co., and the people were continually exposed to the attacks of small scalping parties of the Indians.

At the close of the war a large number of families removed to Canada, and their property was eonfiscated.<sup>2</sup> Several tories and Indians who had been active during the war returned at its close and were waylaid and shot. Others, warned by these examples, fled the country.3 Since that period little of especial interest has occurred in the history of the co. In 1845 and '46, in common with the surrounding regions, this co. partook largely in the anti-rent excitement,though no actual violence took place within its limits. Within the last ten years, a mania for building large seminaries, far beyond the wants of the people, has spread through the co. The speculation has proved a ruinous one, and the entire amount of capital invested in the enterprises

BLENHEIM!—was formed from Schoharie, March 17, 1797. Jefferson was taken off in 1803, and a part of Gilboa in 1848. It is an interior town, lying s. w. of the center of the co. Its surface is a hilly upland, broken by the deep ravines of the streams. Schoharie Creek flows N. through the E. part, receiving West Kil and several smaller streams from the w. A wide alluvial flat extends along its conrse. The streams generally are bordered by steep hills rising to a height of 300 to 500 ft. The soil is principally a clayey loam. Patchin Hollow, (North Blenheim p.o.,) upon Schoharie Creek, contains 2 churches, a tannery, and 44 houses. The first settlements were made by Dutch and Palatinates, before 1761; but the settlers were driven out during the Revolution. The present race of settlers came mostly from New England, soon after the close of the war. Rev. Stephen Fenn was the first preacher.3

BROOME'-was formed March 17, 1797, as "Bristol." Its name was changed April 6, 1808. These springs have a high reputation for the cure of cutaneous disorders, and are a place of resort during the summer. As ana lyzed by Dr. Chi ton, a pint of the water is found to contain,

..... 6 98 Sulphate of lini Chlorid of sodium...... 0.14 Chlorid of in greshim...... 0.15 ..... 0 14 10.06 Sulphuretted hydrogen gas,-1 cubic inch.

The waters flowing over vegetable substances incrust them with white and flocculent sulphur. The gas from the sulphur spring quickly tarmshes silver, even in the pocket. In the neighborhood is a chalyheate spring. The vicinity derives interest from caves containing stalactites and beautiful crystals of sulphate of time. A quarter of a mile below the spring, is a fine ca-cade. A copious spring of common water gushes from the ricks a short distance above, in volume sufficient to turn a mill.—God. 1st Inst., p. 89; Beck's Mineralogy of N. F., p. 143; Summ's Schoharve, p. 643.

10 Col. R. was afterward at Sackets Harbor as a Col. of drafted militia in Gen. Richard Dodge's brigade. Calvin Pike, William Vanderwerker, Conrad. Fritche, Abraham, and John Mereness, John Malick, and Peter Courment were early settlers, and were obliged to fice to Schoharie or Fort Hunter for safety during the war. Wm. Beekman kept the first store; John Hutt built the first sawmill, Omeo Lagrange the first gristmill, John Hutt the first clothing works, and Frederick & Crouck the first tunnery. The town comprises a part of Frederick Young's Patent of 20,000 ston, of 8.000 acres; a part of Johan D. Gress' Tract; a tract granted to Boate a part of Johan D. Gress' Tract; a tract granted to Johannes Lawyer, jr., Jacob Boist, and others, of 7.000 acres, Aug. 14, 1761; and a great leave of 1.000 acres, Aug. 14, 1761; and 1 acres, granted Oct. 11, 1752; a tract granted to Brudt & Living-7.000 acres, Aug. 14, 1761; and a small part of the New Dorlach Patent. The first owners of New Dorlach Patent were Michael, Johannes Johannes Jost, and Jacob B. Boist, Johann Braun, Wm. ### SCHUYLER COUNTY.

This county was formed from Stenben, Chemung, and Tompkins, April 17, 1854. It lies upon both sides of the s. extremity of Seneca Lake; is centrally distant 160 mi. from Albany, and contains 352 sq. mi. Its surface is mostly an undulating and hilly upland, divided into two distinct ridges by the deep valley of Seneca Lake and its inlet. The highest summits are 600 to 1,000 ft. above Seneca Lake and 1,200 to 1,600 ft. above tide. A bluff 100 to 300 ft. high extends along the shores of the lake, too steep for profitable cultivation; but farther inland the hills are bordered by long and gradual slopes and are generally arable to their very summits. The extreme s. part of the co. assumes a more hilly and broken character. Catharines Creek, flowing into the head of Seneca Lake, is the principal stream. Its course is through a deep, narrow, and winding valley bordered by steep hillsides 400 to 600 ft. high. Upon it are numerous falls, affording abundance of water-power; and near its mouth is a marshy region of considerable extent. Meads Run, a tributary of Chemung River, drains the s. w. corner, and Cayuta Creek the s. E. corner. The other streams are small creeks and brooks, mostly discharging their waters into Seneca Lake. A few streams take their rise along the N.E. border and flow into Caynga Lake. Little and Mud Lakes, two smaller sheets of water along the w. border, discharge their waters through Mnd Creek into Conhocton River. Cayuta Lake is a fine sheet of water, in the E. part of the co. Hector Falls, upon a small stream flowing into Seneca Lake from the E., is one of the finest cascades in the State. The rocks of this co. mostly belong to the Portage and Cheming groups,—the former occupying the N. and the latter the s. part of the co. In the deep valley along the shore of Seneca Lake, in the extreme n. part of the co., are found outcrops of Genesce slate. The only good building stone in the co. is the thin-bedded sandstone separating the thick beds of shale. In many places these rocks are covered deeply with drift deposits. The soil upon the highlands is clayey and gravelly, principally derived from the disintegration of the shales; and in many places this is underlaid by hardpan. In the valleys the soil is a gravelly loam intermixed with alluvium.

Agriculture forms the leading and almost the sole occupation of the people. Spring grains are extensively grown, and stock and wool growing and dairying are largely carried on. The climate and soil are both better adapted to pasturage than to tillage. Fruit is becoming an important article of culture, and all kinds adapted to the climate succeed well. A limited amount of manufacturing is carried on at Watkins and Hayana.

In 1854, commissioners appointed to locate the co. buildings fixed upon Havana as the county seat.<sup>2</sup> The action of the commissioners was resisted by the Board of Supervisors, and by them the county seat was located at Watkins, at the head of Seneca Lake. A courthouse was erected at each village; subsequently the courts decided against the action of the commissioners, and, April 13, 1857, an act was passed by the legislature confirming the location of the county seat at Havana. At their annual meetings in the fall of 1857 and 1858 the Board of Supervisors passed resolutions changing the location to Watkins, and at this place the co. offices are at present located. The buildings erected at each place for a courthouse, and for a clerk's office and jail at Havana, are fine buildings, embodying nearly all modern improvements. The buildings at Havana were erected at a cost of $15,000. No poorhouse has yet been established.

The public works in the co. arc the Chemung Canal, extending from the head of Seneca Lake s. through the valley of Catharines Creek, uniting with Chemung River at Elmira; the Elmira, Jefferson & Canandaigna R. R., extending along the w. shore of Seneca Lake to Watkins; and the Chemung R. R., extending s. from Watkins along Catharines Creek to Elmira. These roads are both leased to the N. Y. & E. R. R. Co.

In 1779, Sullivan's army marched through the defiles along Catharines Creek, closely pursuing the Indians, who were flying from the fatal battle of "Newtown," (now Elmira.) So great was the terror of the Indians that they neglected to defend the passes, and the American army marched unmolested through the only place where successful resistance was practicable. Upon the conclusion of peace, many of the soldiers belonging to the army returned to this region and located upon land which had been first brought to their notice during their march against the Indians. The first settlements in the co. were made on Catharines Creek, near the present site of Havana, in 1788, and on the shores of Seneca Lake, in 1790. The town of Hector belonged to the Military Tract; the towns of Catharines, Dix, and Reading, to the Watkins and Flint Purchase; and Tyrone and Orange, to the Phelps and Gorham Purchase.

1 Named from Gen. Philip Schuyler.

These commissioners were Delos De Wolf, of Oswego, Edward Dodd, of Washington, and Vivus W. Smith, of Onondaga.

Two weekly newspapers are now published in the co.1

CATHARINES2—was formed from "Newtown," (now Elmira, Chemung eo.,) March 15, 1798. Catlin and Veteran (Chemung eo.) were taken off in 1823. A part of Newfield (Tompkins co.) was annexed June 4, 1853, and a part was added to Caynta, April 17, 1854. It lies upon the s. border of the co., E. of the center. Its surface is a hilly upland, broken by the deep valleys of the streams. Catharines Creek, along the w. border, flows in a deep ravine 300 to 700 feet below the summits of the hills. Cayuta Lake lies in the N. E. part; and its outlet, Cayuta Creek, flows s. into the Susquehanna. The soil is principally a gravelly loam mixed with clay. Havana. (p. v.,) upon Catharines Creek, on the line of Dix, 3 mi, from Seneca Lake, was incorp. May 13, 1836. It contains a courthouse, jail, clerk's office, the People's College, 3 churches, a newspaper office, 3 flouring mills, and several manufacturing establishments.4 It is a canal village and a station upon the Chemung R. R. Pop. I,290. Odessa, (p. v.,) near the center of the town, contains 2 churches, a gristmill, several sawmills, and 40 dwellings; and Catharines, (p. v.,) in the s. part, 2 churches and 25 dwellings. Alpine, (p. v.,) on the s. E. border, and Cayntaville, (p. o.,) on the N. E. border, are partly in this town. Silas Wolcott and -Wilson settled at Havana in 1788.5 The first religious meeting was held at the house of Mr. P. Bowers, by a Presbyterian minister, in 1794.6 (For the new town of Montour, see p. 612.)

CAYUTA—was formed from Speneer, (Tioga eo.,) March 20, 1824. Parts of Catharines and Erin (Chemung co.) were annexed in 1854. The town was transferred from Tioga to Tompkins co. March 22, 1822. It is the s. E. corner town in the co. Its surface is a hilly upland. Cayuta Creek flows s. E. through the town, in a narrow valley bordered by steep hillsides 300 to 600 ft. high, The soil is a clayer and gravelly loam. Cayuta (West Cayuta p. o.) contains 15 dwellings; Alpine, (p.v.,) on the N. line of the town, a flouring mill, sawmill, chair factory, and 25 The first settlement was made in the valley of the Cayuta, near West Cayuta, in 1801, by Capt. Gabriel Ogden, Rev. David Janes, and Jos. Thomas,—the first two from Tioga eo., and the last from Athens, Penn.' The first religious services were held by Rev. Mr. Janes, (Bap.,) at his own house, in 1802. No churches are reported.

SENECA COUNTY.

This county was formed from Cayuga, March 29, 1804. A part of Tompkins was taken off in 1817, and a part of Wayne in 1823. It lies w. of the center of the State, centrally distant 156 mi. from Albany, and contains 420 sq. mi. It occupies the greater part of the land which lies between Seneca and Cayuga Lakes, and extends several mi. N. of Seneca Lake Outlet. A high ridge enters the co. from Tompkins and occupies nearly one-fourth of its surface. The summit of the extreme s. portion of this ridge in this co. is 700 to 800 feet above Seneca Lake and 1,100 to 1,250 feet above tide. Toward the n. it gradually declines to the level of Seneca Lake. The ridge is bordered in some places by steep declivities and in others by gradual slopes, and in the s. part of the co. generally terminates in high bluffs on the shores of the lakes. At the foot of Seneca Lake the bluffs, on an average, are about 20 feet high; but toward the s. they gradually rise to an elevation of 100 to 150 feet. At the foot of Cayuga Lake the shore is low and shelving; but in Romulus a bluff shore commences, which gradually increases in height until on the s. border of the co. it attains an elevation of 150 to 200 feet. From the summits of the bluffs to the central summit of the ridge the land generally rises in beautiful, smooth, gradual slopes, broken in a few places by sharp declivities of a terrace-like formation. From Ovid toward the N. the land abruptly descends about 200 feet, and then by gradual slopes to the level of Seneca River. The region immediately N. of Seneca Lake Outlet and w. of the Cayuga Lake Outlet is level, and some of it is marshy. In the N. w. corner of the co. is a great number of alluvial ridges, composed principally of gravel. These ridges extend in a n. and s. direction and are 30 to 50 feet high. Their declivities are generally very abrupt toward the N., E., and w., but more gradual toward the s.

The geological formation of the eo. is very simple. The rocks overlie each other in parallel layers slightly dipping toward the s. The lowest rocks that crop out in the co. are those of the Onondaga salt group, including both the red shales and gypsum. They are found along Seneca River, where the gypsum is extensively quarried. Next above these are heavy, compact masses of the corniferous limestone, occupying a belt of country 2 to 3 mi. wide s. of Seneca River. The intermediate waterlime and Onondaga limestone strata are developed in this co. only in very thin and scarcely noticeable layers. The corniferous limestone furnishes a building stone of great excellence and is extensively quarried. Next in order come the Marcellus and Hamilton shales, occupying a broad belt through the co. and extending nearly to the summits of the ridges; the Tully limestone, a layer of only a few feet in thickness, but valuable from the quantity and quality of lime manufactured from it; and the Genesee slate, a dark, shaly rock which crowns the summits of the southern hills. These rocks throughout the co. are covered with a deep deposit of drift, consisting of clay, sand, gravel, and hardpan, and crop out only along the shores of the lakes, the narrow ravines of the streams, and the steep declivities of the ridges. In the n.w. corner of the co. this drift is arranged in ridges with narrow valleys scooped out between them.1

The principal stream is Seneca River, forming the ontlet of Seneca Lake. It has a course of about 14 mi. between the two lakes, and in that distance falls 60 feet. The falls are principally at Waterloo and Seneca Falls, furnishing an excellent water-power at each place, but much the greater at the latter. From Cayuga Lake, Seneca River flows N. E. through a marshy region and forms a portion of the E. boundary of the co. Clyde River, a tributary of the Seneca, flows through a portion of the marshy region in the N. E. corner. The other streams are all small brooks and creeks, and for the most part are rapid torrents flowing in deep gulfs worn in the shaly rocks. They are frequently interrupted by waterfalls, are nearly dry in summer, and are subject to severe freshets.

Seneca Lake, the w. border of which forms the greater part of the w. boundary of the co., is 35 mi. long and 1 to 4 mi. broad. It is 216 feet above Lake Ontario and 447 feet above tide. It occupies a deep valley between the hills, and it varies in depth from 300 to 630 feet. Its shores are generally bold; and from their summits the land slopes gently and gracefully upward to a height of 200 to 700 feet above its surface, furnishing some of the most quiet and beautiful scenery in the State. This lake is never entirely frozen over. Cayuga Lake occupies a parallel valley on the E. border of the co., and is 38 mi. long and 1 to 3½ mi. wide. It is 60 feet below Seneca, and its greatest depth is 346 feet. Near the foot the lake is very shallow, and a large extent of land, immediately adjoining and lying along the course of its ontlet, is swampy.\(^1\) Further s, the shores are bluff and the country is of the same general character as that hordering upon Seneca Lake.

The soil is generally of a very excellent quality. The sandy and gravelly loam of the drift deposits is well adapted to either grain raising or grazing. The lower portions of the ridges are enriched by the disintegration of the rocks above, making the soil very productive. The lowlands bordering upon Seneca River are clayey and in many places mixed with disintegrated gypsum and limestone. North of the river have been found extensive marl deposits of great agricultural value. North of the foot of Seneca Lake is a sandy region once considered worthless; but upon trial the soil has been found susceptible of being made productive at little expense. The marshy regions w. of Cayuga Outlet are covered with thick deposits of marl and muck. Measures have been instituted to drain these marshes; if successful a new and exceedingly fertile region will be added to the productive lands of the State.

The co. is a half-shire, the co. seats being located respectively at Ovid and Waterloo.<sup>2</sup> The courthouse and clerk's office at Ovid are brick buildings, sitnated in the E. part of the village. The combined courthouse and jail at Waterloo is a brick building, situated near the R. R., fronting the public square, in the w. part of the village. The co, poorhouse is located upon a farm of 126 acres, upon the line between Seneca Falls and Fayette, 4 mi. s. E. of Waterloo.

Four weekly newspapers are now published in the co.4

The public works of the co. are the N. Y. Central R. R., extending through Seneca Falls and Waterloo, and the Seneca Canal, extending along Seneca River through the same towns.<sup>5</sup> Above the falls at Waterloo the canal is formed by slackwater navigation upon the river.

The lands in this co. were first brought to the notice of the whites by the expedition of Sullivan, which passed along the banks of Seneca Lake in 1779. Portions of the land at that time had been cleared and were under cultivation. The Indians had a tradition that this whole region had once been occupied by a race that pursued agriculture, but which had long ago disappeared. Many of Sullivan's soldiers, attracted by the beauty and fertility of the lands, after the war settled in various parts of the co. The first settler, Job Smith, who located at Seneca Falls in 1787, and the second, Andrew Dunlap, who located at Ovid in 1789, came in by way of Chemung River. The third settler, Lawrence Van Clief, who settled at Seneca Falls in 1789, came in by way of Oneida Lake and Seneca River.<sup>6</sup> After 1790 settlement progressed rapidly, and the most fertile lands

While a part of Onondaga co. in 1790, courts were held at the barn of Andrew Punlap. In 1817, upon the erection of Tempkins co., the co. sout was removed to Waterloo; but in 1822 the co. was divided into two jury districts, and the courts have since then been held alternately at Ovid and Waterloo. The first co. officers were Cornelius Humphrey, First Judge; Silas Halsey, Clerk; William Smith, Sheriff, and Jared Sandford, Surragate.

3 The average number of inmates is 60, supported at a weekly out of $1.00 each. A school is taught 4 months in the year.

The establishment seems to be pretty well arranged and managed.

4 The Nenca Patriot, the first paper published in the co, was started at Ovid in 1815 by Geo. Lewis. In 1816 it was changed to The Orid Gazette. Upon the change of the co, seat in 1817, it was removed to Waterloo and changed to

The Waterloo Gazette, and was continued several years by the original proprietor.

The Waterloo Republican was issued a short time in 1822,

The Waterloo Observer was started in 1824 by Charles Sentell. It was soon after issued a short time us
The Observer and Union, and was subsequently changed to

The Chescrer and Conon, and was subsequently changed to The Seneca Observer, under which title it is still issued by the original proprietor.

The Wreath and Ladies' Literary Repository was issued from the Observer office in 1831.

The Sinera Republican was established at Ovid in 1827 by Michael Hayes. In 1830 it was changed to The Ovid thirstle and Seneca County Register, and was issued a short time by John Duffy.

The Senera Fulls Journal was commenced in 1829 by O. B. Clark. In 1831 it passed into the hands of Wm. N. Brown, and in 1832 it was united with the Seneca Farmer and changed to

The Seneca Farmer and Seneca Falls Advertiser, and was issued by Wm. Child until 1835.

The Western Times was published at Waterloo in 1830 by Ebenezer P. Mason.

The Ovid Emporium was published in 1832 by Bishop Orenshier.

The Seneca County Courier was commenced at Seneca Fulls in 1837 by Isaac Fuller & Co. It was successively published by Fuller & Bloomer, Mills & Bloomer, Mills & Bloomer, Mills & Boomer, Mills & Boomer, Mills & Busis, John J. Davis, N. J. Milliken, Milliken & Mumford, Foster & Judd, Fuller & Judd, until 1850, when it passed into the hunds of Isaac Fuller, its present juddisher.

The Ovid Ree was started in 1833 by David Exciptible &

Fuller, its present publisher.

The Ovid Bee was started in 1838 by David Fairchild & Son. At the end of one year it passed into the hands of the son, Corydon Fairchild, its present publisher.

The Seneca Falls Democrat was commenced in 1839 by Josiah T.
Miller, and was continued 10 years. The Senera Democrat, semi-w., was issued a short time from the same office.

The Seneca Fulls Register was commenced in 1835 by J. K.

Brown, and was continued 2 years

The Memorial was commenced at Seneca Falls in 1840 by Ansel Bascom, and was continued until 1846.

The Water Bucket was published at Seneca Falls by an association of Washingtonians in 1841.

The Free-Soil Union was commenced at Seneca Falls in Aug.

1848, by N. J. Milliken, and continued about 1 year.

The Lily was commenced at Seneca Falls in 1849 by Mrs.

Amelia Bloomer, and was continued until 1854, when it was removed to Ohio.

The American Reveille was commenced at Seneca Falls in Jan. 1855, by Wilcoxen, Sherman & Baker. In 1856 it was purchased by G. Wilcoxen, and was continued by him until Jan, 1859, when it passed into the hands of Holly & Stowell, the present publishers

In 1791 the State Road, known as the "Geneva Road," was built from Whitestown to Geneva; and this soon became the great highway for immigration. This co. formed the extreme w. portion of the Military Tract; and many of the early settlers were old soldiers who had drawn their portion of public land here.

COVERT—was formed from Ovid, April 7, 1817. Lodi was taken off in 1826. It lies upon the w. shore of Cayuga Lake, in the s. E. corner of the co. Its surface is an upland descending from its w. border and terminating in a steep and almost precipitous bluff upon the shore of the lake. This bluff rises 100 to 200 feet above the water, and the summit of the slope is about 400 feet higher. The town is watered by Trumansburg Creek and many smaller streams, flowing into Cayuga Lake. These streams have worn ravines in the slate and shales to the depth of 20 to 40 feet, the sides being nearly precipitous. In summer they are nearly dry, but during heavy rains they become fierce mountain torrents, bounding and seething in their confined channels and leaping from high precipices to mingle with the calm and peaceful waters of the lake. The soil is a gravelly and clayey loam. The whole surface is arable, except the steep declivities of the lake bluffs. Farmerville, (Farmer p. o.,) in the N. part, contains 3 churches, a steam sawmill, foundery, and machine shop. Pop. 350. Covert, (p. o.,) in the s.E. part, Halls Corners, near the center, and Kelleys Corners, in the N. W., are hamlets. Port Deposit (Trumansburg Landing p. o.) is a steamboat landing near the s. E. corner. The first settler was Philip Tremaine, who located at Goodwins Point before 1793.1 The first religious services were held at the house of Mr. King, by Elder Thomas; the first church (Bap.) was organized in 1805.<sup>2</sup>

FAYETTE—was formed from Romulus, as "Washington," March 14, 1800. Its name was changed April 6, 1808. Junius was taken off in 1803. It lies on the s. bank of Seneca River and extends from Seneca to Cayuga Lake. Its surface is rolling and inclined toward the N. From Seneca Lake the land beautifully slopes upward, forming some of the most delightful situations for residences in the co. Upon Cayuga Lake the shores are lower and in some places are marshy. The highest point in town is about 200 feet above Seneca Lake. The streams are mostly small brooks flowing with rapid currents, and at a few places furnishing limited water-power. In some parts the corniferous limestone is extensively quarried, both for lime and for building purposes. The soil is a deep, rich loam, composed of clay, gravel, and sand. Near Canoga Village is an immense spring in a basin 14 feet in diameter, and from it flows sufficient water to form a large and valuable water-power. The spring also emits nitrogen gas. Canoga, (p. v., ) in the n. e. part, on Cayuga Lake, contains 2 churches, a gristmill, 2 sawmills, and 197 inhabitants. South Waterloo, a suburb of Waterloo, on the s. bank of Seneca River, contains 1 church and 597 inhabitants. Bearytown, (Fayette p. o.,) on the line of Varick, is partly in this town. West Fayette, in the s. w. corner, and Rose Hill, in the w. part, are p. offices. The first settlement was made by James Bennett, from Penn., who located upon the shore of Cayuga Lake in 1789.4 Red Jacket, the Seneca chief and orator, was born near Canoga Spring. There are 8 churches in town.

JUNIUS—was formed from "Washington," (now Fayette,) Feb. 12, 1803; Wolcott (Wayne co.) was taken off in 1807, Galen (Wayne co.) in 1812, and Seneca Falls, Tyre, and Waterloo in 1829. It is the N. W. corner town of the co. In this town are numerous small, isolated gravel and clav ridges 30 to 75 ft. high, all extending in a general N. and s. direction. The numerous small streams that drain the town flow n. into Clyde River. Among the narrow valleys in the E. part is a limited amount of swamp land. The soil is a good quality of gravelly loam. Dublin, (Junius p.o..) N. w. of the center, contains 1 church and 25 dwellings. West Junius is a p. o. near the s. w. corner. Thorntons Corners is a hamlet. The first settlements were made by Thos. Bedell and Jesse, Sam'l, and David Southwick, about 1795.6 The first church (Cong.) was formed in 1811; three years after it was changed to a Presb. There are also 2 M. E. churches in town.

LODI—was formed from Covert, Jan. 27, 1826. It borders upon Seneca Lake, and is the s. w.

to lay waste the lands of the Cayugas, Onondagas, and Oneidas | that had previously escaped destruction.

<sup>1</sup> Among the other early settlers were Nathaniel, Reuben, and Bassler King, from Dutchess co., in 1793; Jonathan Woodworth and sons Nehemiah, Charles, and Oliver, and daughter Dehorah, an Indian word said to signify "sweet water."

<sup>4</sup> Samuel Bear settled at "Schoyes," now South Waterloo, about 195. Wm. Watkins kept the first inn, at South Waterloo, and <sup>1795.</sup> Win. Wakins kept the first into at South Waterloo, and Samuel Bear built the first grist and saw mill, at the same place 5 2 Presb., 2 M. E., 2 Lintheran, 2 Ref. Prot. D. 6 Among the other early settlers were families named Shei-man, Chapman. Brownwell, Fisk, Moore, French, Maynard, Thorm, and Hart,—mostly from New England. The first death was that of Mrs. Submit Southwick, wife of Samuel Southwick, and sons Achiemman, Charles, and Oliver, and unique regional from Norwisch, Coun., Miner and Joseph Thomas, in 1794; and Turtellus King, in 1795.

2 This was the first church formed in the co. The census reports 4 churches: 2 Bap., Univ., and Ref. Prot. D.

corner town in the co. Its surface is mostly inclined toward the w. and N., a small portion only lying E. of the snmmit. The bluff bordering upon Seneca Lake is 150 to 250 ft. above the surface of the water; and the highest part of the central ridge is 500 ft. higher and about 1,200 ft. above tide. The principal streams are Mill Creek, flowing N. w. through near the center, and Sheldrake Creek, in the N. w. corner. Mill Creek separates the highlands into two distinct ridges, the deelivities being very abrupt. Upon this stream are several fine eascades. Lodi Falls, where the creek leaps down the precipitous bluff which borders upon the lake, are 125 ft. bigh. The water has worn a deep and irregular channel in the shale rocks one mi, back from the face of the bluff. The soil is principally a gravelly loam mixed with the disintegrated rocks. Lodi, (p. v.,) in the N. part, contains 2 churches, a gristmill, and 380 inhabitants; Townsendville, (p. v.,) in the s. E. part, a church and 20 dwellings. Lodi Center (p. o.) is a hamlet. Lodi Landing is on Senera Lake, at the mouth of Mill Creek. The first settlement was made by Geo. Faussett, from Penn., who settled in the s. w. part in 1789.1 There are 5 churches in town.2

OVID—was formed March 5, 1794. Heetor (Schuyler eo.) was taken off in 1802, and Covert in 1817. It lies s. of the center of the co., and extends from Seneca to Caynga Lake. Its surface consists of an arable ridge, 600 ft. above Seneca Lake and about 1,100 ft. above tide, descending from w. of the center toward the lakes. The bluffs upon the lakes are 20 to 50 ft. high, and nearly perpendicular. A great number of small streams flow into both Cayuga and Seneca Lakes, the principal of which are Sheldrake, Osborn, Groves, and Barnum Creeks on the E., and Sixteen Falls Creek on the w. These streams have all worn deep, ragged ravines in the yielding shales. They are frequently interrupted by cascades, and in summer are nearly dry. The soil consists principally of elay and gravel intermixed with sand and the disintegrated rocks. Ovid,  $(p, v_n)$ near the N. line, contains a courthouse, co. clerk's office, 3 churches, the Ovid Academy, 3 a steam mill, and ax factory, and about 650 inhabitants. Ovid Landing is just over the town line in Romulus. Sheldrake Point, (Sheldrake p. o., ) a steamboat landing upon Cayuga Lake, contains a church, steam sawmill, boat vard, and 168 inhabitants. Ovid Center contains 20 houses. Midders Ferry, (p. o., ) near the s. E. corner, and Scotts Corners, near the center, are hamlets. The first settlement was made in May, 1789, by Andrew Dunlap, from Penn., who located on Lot 8, in the n.w. part of the town.4 The first religious services were held at the house of Abraham Covert, in 1794. The first settled preacher (Ref. Prot. D.) was John Lindsley, in 1800.5 The New York State Agricultural College and farm are located on the N. line of this town, w. of the village.6 In the s. part of the town are the remains of an ancient fortification.7

ROMULUS—was formed March 5, 1794. Fayette was taken off in 1800, and Varick in 1830. It lies s. of the center of the co., and extends from Seneca to Cayuga Lake. Its surface is rolling or moderately hilly and has a general northerly inclination. The high bluff from Ovid extends into the s. border of the town, where it drops down abruptly about 200 ft. The land slopes from the center downward to the E. and W. The streams are small and generally flow in deep channels, The surface is smooth, except along the courses of the streams, and is nearly all arable. The soil is a fertile, gravelly and clavey loam. Rommins, (p. v., ) on the line of Varick, contains a church, steam sawmilf, female seminary, and 36 dwellings. IIyatts Corners, in the s.e., contains 20 dwellings. Romalus Center is a p.o. Whitneys Landing is a station upon Cayuga Lake; and Cooleys and Freleighs Points and Ovid Landing are stations upon Seneca Lake. The first settlement was made by David Wisner, in 1789. There is but one church (Bap.) in town.

5 There are now in town 7 churches; 2 Presb., 2 M. E., Ref.

6 This institution was incorporated in 1853; and the buildings are now in process of erection. They were designed by S. E. Hewes, of Albany, and consist of a main building 90 ft. front and 132 deep, having a wing on each side 84½ by 60, and transverse wings 58 by 128. It is designed to accommodate about 400 students. The farm contains 600 acres.

SENECA FALLS—was formed from Junius, March 26, 1829. It lies upon the w. bank of Cayuga Lake, N. of the center of the co. The surface is nearly flat, and it is elevated 30 to 50 ft. above Cayuga Lake. The shores of the lake are low and shelving, and the N. portion is swampy. Senera River flows E. and N. through the center of the town, its valley dividing the town into two distinct parts. The river flows over a series of ledges into a deep chasm apparently worn by its waters. Just E. and S. w. of the village are extensive gypsum quarries. The soil is a stiff, hard clay in the s. and E., a sandy loam in the N.W., and a heavy vegetable muck in the N.E. Seneca Falls, (p. v.,)1 upon Sencea River, near the center of the town, was incorp. April 22, 1831. It is a station upon the N.Y.C. R. R. and the Seneca Canal. The total fall is 51 feet, and furnishes au abundance of water-power, which is largely improved. It contains 7 churches, the Seneca Falls Academy, a union school, 2 newspaper offices, extensive manufactories of fire engines, pumps, machinery, iron, and woolen goods, and a great variety of other articles.2 Pop. about 4,000. The first settlement was made by Job Smith, from Ulster co., upon the present site of the village in 1787; he left in 1793. The first permanent settler was Lawrence Van Clief, in 1789.3 The first religious services were held by M. E. missionaries, about 1797; and the first regular minister was Rev. Matthew Stewart, (Presb.,) in 1804.

TYRE—was formed from Junius, March 26, 1829. It is the N. E. corner town of the co. The E. half is a swamp, being the s. termination of the Montezuma Marshes. The w. half is occupied by peculiar drift ridges similar to those already described in Junius. These ridges are 30 to 50 feet high, and generally have very steep declivities upon all sides except the s. One of the longest of these, in the w. part of the town, extends nearly two-thirds of the distance from the s. line to the N. Its summit is nearly level; and the road which is located upon it appears as though built upon an artificial embankment. The soil is elay and muck in the E. and a gravelly loam in the w. Tyre City, (Tyre p.o.,) near the center, contains 2 churches and 20 dwellings. Cruso is a p. o. on the N. line. The first settlement was made by Ezekiel Crane, from N. J., who came in 1794.5 The first church (Bap.) was formed in 1805. Elder Don Ralph was the first preacher.6

VARICK—was formed from Romulus, Feb. 6, 1830. It extends from Seneca to Cayuga Lake, across the center of the co. Its surface is slightly inclined toward the N. The slopes of the ridges are the surrounding forest. Upon the bank and in the ditch large oak trees—the growth of centuries—were standing. In the embankment were several openings a few feet in width, which embankment were several openings a tew feet in width, winds were once probably used for gates or extractions. In making an excavation for a cellar, on the E. side, 6 skeletons were found at the depth of about 2 feet. This was in 1857. Several had been found previously; and, though all the softer parts of the hones had long since disappeared, the teeth and a few of the larger bones still remained. Inside of the embankment may still be found pieces of a coarse kind of pottery, ornamental pipes, &c. De Witt Clinton visited this place in 1819; and his theory is that this was one of a number of similar works of defense found community the most community western New York. occupying the most commanding positions in Westero New York, and in the valleys of the Ohio and Mississippi, erected by a race more civilized than the Indians, and that they preceded the latter in the occupation of this country: their origin and end are alike a mystery; their annals defy the ken of human re-search, and their history will remain a sealed book perhaps for-ever. The Indians were never able to give any account of this fortification, as it was older than their traditions.

1 Named from the fulls in the river, the Indian name, "Sha-be-ourse," signifying rolling water.

Wilhelmus Mynderse kept the first store, in 1795, and built the first saw and grist mill, about the same time. In 1794, Robert Trout, Nicholas Gonverneur, Stephen N. Bayard, and Elkaush Watson, under the title of the Bayard Contrary, bought of the Stefa 19th errors of land on the Node Company, bought of the State 100 acres of land on the N. side of the river, embracing the greater part of the water-power upon that side. In 1798 they purchased 250 acres on the s. side, and in 1809, 650 acres more on the same side, the two purchases in 1809, 650 acres more on the same side, the two purchases embracing all the water-power upon that side of the river. In 1816 they bought 450 acres more on the N. side, completing the purchase of the water-power. In 1795 the company sold a one-fifth interest in their purchase to Col. Mynderse, and constituted hun their agent. In 1795 the "Upper Red Mills" were created under his direction; and in 1807 the "Lower Red Mills" were created. The Co. refused to sell their land, neglected to improve the immense water-power that they owned, and in 1825 troke down, and the property was sold for about one-fifth of its cost the immense water-power that they owned, and in FYS broks down, and the property was sold for about one-fitth of its cost In 1829-30 the manufacturing interests of the place began to increase. About that time a paper nill was erected by Chauncey Marshall, G. V. Sackett, and Aosel Bascom; a cotton factory, by Judge Sackett; a machine shop, by McClary & Hallblay; and a clock factory, by Marshall & Adams. Until the locks were built, in 1815, the most important business of the place was that of transporting coads and locats around the rands. The "dress transporting goods and boats around the rapids. The "dress reform" movement was commenced in this town by Mrs. Amelia Bloomer, who adopted the dress known as the Bloomer Dress in Stephen Crane kept the first inn, in 1809; Nicholas Traver built the first sawmill, in 1807, and Noah Davis the first gristmill, in 1817.

O There are 4 churches in town; Disciples, Bap., M. E., and so gradual that nearly every part is arable. The streams are all small. Near the center of the town is a granberry swamp, occupying about 800 agres. The soil is a gravelly loam intermixed with clay. Bearytown, (Fayette p. o.,) upon the line of Fayette, in the N.E. part, contains 3 churches, a steam sawmill, stave factory, and 128 inhabitants, of whom 51 are in this town. Robitiles (p. v.) lies on the s. border. East Varick (p. o.) is a landing upon Cayuga Lake. MeDuffie Town is a hamlet in the s. E. corner. Varick is a p. o. The first settlement was made by James McKnight, in 1789.1 There are 3 churches in town; Bap., Presb., and M. E.

WATERLOO—was formed from Junius, March 26, 1829. It lies on the N. bank of Seneca River, N. w. of the center of the co. The surface is almost one unbroken flat. A marsh extends E. and w. through the town s. of the center, and another occupies the N. E. corner.2 The bed of Seneca River, on the s. boundary, is almost level with the general surface. The soil is muck and elay in the N. and E., gravel along the N. border, and a sandy loam in the center and W. Waterloo, (p. v.,) on Seneca River, near the E. border of the town, was incorp. April 9, 1824. It is a station upon the N. Y. C. R. R. and upon the Seneca Canal. A fall of 24½ feet in Seneca River furnishes an excellent water-power, which is mostly improved. It is a half-shire of the co., and contains the courthouse, 6 churches, the Waterloo Union School, a bank, a large shawl factory, 3 3 distilleries, 2 malt houses, 3 flouring mills, 5 sawmills, 2 founderies and machine shops, 2 oil mills, and numerous other manufactories. Seneca River above the falls, being seldom frozen, is navigable throughont the year. This village is an important depôt of lumber from the s. w. cos., and of coal from the Susquehanna and Blossburg Mines. Pop. 3,050. South Waterloo, formerly ealled "Schoyes," is on the opposite side of Seneca River, in Fayette. Settlement was commenced by John Greene, from R. I., in 1789.5 The first religious services were held about 1816.6

<sup>5</sup> The Waterloo Woolen Manufacturing Co. was organized in 1836, with a capital of $150,000; 200 to 250 hands are employed; 300,000 lbs. of wool are used, and 40,000 long shawls are annually manufactured. This is, next to the Bay State Mills, the largest shawl factory in America.

6 Among these establishments is a plaster mill, heatward, and drydock, 4 copper, tin, and sheet iron factories, a fanning mill, and washboard factory, and 2 cabinet and furniture shops.

Salmon Disbrow, from Saratoga co., came in about the same time. The first child bern was John Smith, in 1868; the first marriage, that of Job Smith and Miriam Gorham, in 1799; and the first deaths, those of John Gregory and James Hall the Resident of the Computer of the Comput Hull, two Revolutionary soldlers, who drew lots in this town, settled upon them, and both died about 1808. Isaac Gorham taught the first school in 1810; Jabez Gorham kept the first inn, about 1795; Charles Swift, the first store, in 1815; and James Bear built the first mill, in 1794.

STEUBEN COUNTY.

This county was formed from Ontario, March 18, 1796, and named in honor of Baron Steuben. The 7th Range of Townships was annexed to Allegany co. March 11, 1808, the part in the fork of Crooked Lake to Ontario co. Feb. 25, 1814, a part of Dansville to Livingston co. Feb. 15, 1822, a part of Reading to Yates co. in 1824, and a part to Schuyler co. April 17, 1854. It lies upon the s. border of the State, considerably w. of the center, is centrally distant 188 mi. from Albany, and contains 1,425 sq. mi. Its surface mostly consists of ridges and high, rolling uplands, forming the northern continuation of the Allegany Mts. The watershed between Lake Ontario and Susquelianna River extends from Allegany co. eastward across the N. part of the eo. The deep valley of Crooked Lake breaks the continuity of the highlands and extends 17 mi. s. w. from the head of the lake, connecting with the Conhocton Valley at Bath, and forming one of the numerous natural passes between the southern valleys and the basin of Lake Ontario. The highlands occupying the s. w. corner of the co. also form a portion of the watershed, being drained by branches of Canisteo River on the E. and of Genesee River on the w. The highest summits in the co. are about 2,500 feet above tide.

The upland region has nearly a uniform elevation, with a slight inclination toward the N. It is intersected by numerons deep valleys, which have evidently been excavated by the action of water.2 The formation of the steep hillsides which border upon these valleys is such as to prove conclusively that they were once united, and that a wide, rolling plateau spread over the region now so irregular and broken. The principal of these valleys are those of Canisteo and Conhocton Rivers, extending nearly N. w. and S. E. through the co. From these valleys numerous others diverge at nearly right angles and branch off into countless deep, crooked ravines, intersecting the plateau in every direction. The hills that border upon these valleys are usually steep and 300 to 600 feet high Conhocton River flows s. E. through near the center of the co. In high water it was once navigable for arks 14 mi, above Bath. It receives from the s. w. Neils, Bennetts, Campbells, Stockton, Michigan, and Stevens Creeks, and from the N. E. Twelve Mile, Ten Mile, Five Mile, (or Kanona,) Mud,3 and Meads Creeks. Canistee River flows through a valleys, w. of the Conhecton and nearly parallel to it. In freshets it rises 6 to 8 feet, and is then navigable for boats and arks about 40 mi. Its chief tributaries are Canacadea, Crosby, Purdy, Bennetts, Col. Bills, and Tuscarora Creeks, all from the s. w. Tioga River rises in Penn., flows N. through a deep, wild mountain valley, and unites with the Canisteo at Erwin, and with the Conhocton at Painted Post, from the latter place the combined stream taking the name of Chemung River.4 Canaseraga Creek, flowing N., drains the N. w. corner of the co.; and several small streams rising in the s. w. corner form branches of Genesee River. Crooked Lake lies along the N.E. border, in a deep valley nearly surrounded by steep hills 500 to 800 feet high. Little Lake lies in a shallow valley along the E border of the town of Wayne. It discharges its waters s, into Mud Lake, and through Mud Creek into Conhocton River. Loon Lake, in Wayland, lies in a valley which is the southern continuation of the valley of Hemlock Lake in Livingston co. Still further s., in the same valley, is Mud Lake, a small sheet of water, the outlet of which flows s. and empties into the Conhocton.

The shales and sandstones of the Portage group outcrop in all the deep ravines in the N. part of the eo. and in the w. bank of Crooked Lake. Elsewhere, the Chemung group composes most of the surface rocks. Near the State Line the highest hills are capped with a coarse, silicious conglomerate, which forms the floor of the coal measures.5 A feeble brine spring is found at La Grange,

<sup>2</sup> These valleys must have been excavated by more powerful currents of water than now flow through them; and their formation belongs to the drift period of geology,

8 Mud Creek is the outlet of Mud Lake, in Schuyler co. the first settlement of the co. this stream was navigable, and arks were floated from Mnd Lake down the creek and the Conhocton to the Susquehanna, and thence to the Baltimore market. Since the clearing of the forests, this stream has entirely failed

4 These streams were all much larger before the destruction of the forests. In time of high water the early settlers describe them as being "full from hill to hill."

<sup>1</sup> The following elevations have been determined, principally | for purposes of navigation, and now, in summer, it is almost by actual surveys: Crooked Lake, 718 feet; Corning, 925; Vilage of Bath, 1,090; Hornellsville, 1,150; Arkport, 1,194; summit between Mud Lake and Bath, 1,579; summit between Bath and Arkport, 1,840; summit between Arkport and Angelica, 2,062; Troupsburgh Hills, 2,500.

5 The rocks of this to, are generally of a shaly nature and not fit for use. There are a few exceptions, however, the ma. N. of Bath is a stratum, 3 feet thick, of a tough argillo-clarareous rock, forming an excellent building stone. In Woodhall, Canisteo, and Jasper the sandstone ledges turnish an excellent coulding for existance. At Arhantin houseth, and Tasing quality of grindstones. At Arkport, in Danswille, and Troups-burgh are marl heds, from which lime is manufactured, -Gccl4th Dist., pp. 483, 484.

and sulphur springs in Campbell, Jasper, and Urbana. The soil in general is composed of detritus of the adjacent rocks, and is better adapted to grazing than tillage. Upon the intervales along the larger streams the soil is a fertile alluvium. The extensive flats upon the Chemung are among the finest agricultural lands in the State. Agriculture forms the chief occupation of the people. Grain is largely produced on the alluvial lands, and stock is extensively raised on the uplands. Stock and wool growing and dairying are the principal branches of agriculture pursued. Lumbering is still extensively carried on,-though it is gradually decreasing. The manufactures are principally confined to lumber, articles of wood, and the heavier and coarser products necessary to an agricultural region.

The co. is divided into the northern and sonthern Jury Districts, the co. buildings being respectively situated at Bath and Corning. The conrthonse at Bath is a commodious brick building, erected in 1828.2 The jail is built of wood and closely surrounded by other buildings. The cells for prisoners are in the basement, and are not provided with any means of ventilation. Its arrangements show a culpable neglect and an entire disregard of the general sentiments of the co. and of the age. The co. clerk's office is permanently located at Bath. The courthouse at Corning is a fine brick edifice, erected in 1853-54 at a cost of $14,000. The jail at Corning was erected at the same time. The courts are held alternately at Bath and Corning. The co. poorhouse is located upon a farm of 214 acres about 2 mi. N. E. of Bath Village. The average number of inmates is 75; and they are supported at an average weekly cost of $1.00 each. The farm yields a revenue of about $2,000. No instruction is afforded; but the children of proper age are bound out.

The New York & Erie R. R. enters the co, from Chemung and extends along the valleys of the Chemung, Tioga, and Canistee Rivers to Hernellsville, and the Canacadea to the w. border of the co. It passes through Corning, Erwin, Addison, Rathbone, Cameron, Canisteo, and Hornellsville.4 The Buffalo, N. Y. & E. R. R. extends N. w. from Corning up the Conhocton Valley, through Erwin, Campbell, Bath, Avoca, Cohocton, and Wayland, to the M. border of the co. This road in tersects the Genesee Valley R. R. at Avon, the N. Y. Central at Batavia, the Buffalo & New York City at Attica, and the N. Y. & Erie at Corning. The Hornellsville Division of the Buffalo, New York & Erie R. R. extends N. w. up the valley of the Canisteo from Hornellsville, passing through that town and the s. w. corner of Dansville. The Blossburg & Corning R. R. extends from Corning, through Erwin and Lindley, s. along the Tioga Valley to the Blossburg coal region. Crooked Lake is navigated by steam and canal boats, and forms a link in the chain of the internal water communication of the State. It is united with the Erie Canal at Montezuma by Crooked Lake Canal, Seneca Lake, and the Caynga and Seneca Canals. The Chemung Canal navigable feeder extends from Corning E. to Horscheads, in Chemung co. Considerable lumber is floated down the rivers and finds a market at Philadelphia and Baltimore. These various works of internal improvement afford ample facilities for the transportation of goods and passengers, and bring the farm products of the co. into close proximity to the Eastern markets.

Seven newspapers are published in the eo.<sup>5</sup>

It was removed in 1828 and the present back courthouse creeted. About the time of the erection of the first courthouse, a jail was built of beam logs, which was supersoled by the erection of the present jail in 1845. By an act of the Legislature, passed July 19, 1853, the co. was divided into two jury districts, and the co.

Steuben co. was all included in the Phelps and Gorham Purchase. It was sold by Phelps and Gorham to Robert Morris, who conveyed it to Sir Wm. Pulteney and others, in London. The territory was surveyed into townships and lots by Wm. Bull, for the Pulteney estate, in 1792-93. Sales were made by townships, at 18 and 20 cts. per acre. The first settlements were made in 1787-90, by immigrants from Wyoming, Penn., who located upon Chemung River, in the s. E. part of the co. These early settlers were originally from Conn. About 1790, settlements commenced in the w. part, adjoining Yates co. In 1792-93, Capt. Chas, Williamson, agent of the Pulteney estate, commenced a settlement at Bath. He was accompanied by a large number of Scotch and German immigrants; and under his energetic and liberal policy the settlement progressed with great rapidity. The greater part of the early settlers came from Penn. by way of Susquehanna and Chemung Rivers. Subsequently large numbers came from Eastern New York, New England, and New Jersey.<sup>2</sup> The co. was divided by the Court of General Sessions, in 1796, into 6 towns, viz.: Bath, Canistee, Dansville, Frederickstown, Middletown, and Painted Post, comprising the territory now forming 31 towns of this co. and parts of Allegany, Yates, Livingston, and Schuyler cos. In 1790 the population was 168; in I800 it was 1,788; and in 1855, 62,965. In extent of territory and in agricultural wealth it now ranks among the first cos. in the State.3

ADDISON'—was formed, as "Middletown," in March, 1796. Its name was changed April 6, 1808. A part of Troupsburgh was taken off in 1808, Cameron in 1822, a part of Woodhull in 1828, and a part of Rathbone in I856. It lies upon the s. border of the co., just E. of the center. The surface is mostly a hilly upland, broken by the valley of the Canisteo and its branches. The principal valley is about 1½ mi. wide and is bordered by steep hillsides 300 to 400 feet high. The principal streams are Canisteo River, and the Tuscarora, Elks Lick, and Goodhue Creeks. Goodhue Lake, covering an area of about 500 acres, lies in the n.w. corner of the town. The soil is principally a clay loam, with strips of gravel and alluvium upon the streams. Addison, (p.v.,) situated on Canisteo River, contains 3 churches, a bank, several mills and manufacturing establishments. Pop. about 1,300. South Addison (p.v.) contains 18 dwellings. Addison Hill is a p.o.

When 'Canesteer' went abroad, the public soon On the Conhocton they were known to some as found it out. On the Conhocton they were known to some as the Six Nations, and, to the amusement and wonder of young Europeaus, would sometimes visit at Bath, being of a social disposition, and sit all day, 'singing, telling stories, and drinking grog, and never got drunk, nayther.' To the staid and devout they were Arabs,—cannibals. Intercourse between the scattered settlements of the colony was, of course, limited mainly to visits of necessity; but rumor took the fair fame of Canisteo in hand, and gave the settlement a notoriety through all the land which few 'rising villages,' even of the present day, enjoy. It was pretty well understood over all the country that beyond the mountains of Steuben, in the midst of the most rugged district of the wilderness, lay a corn growing valley, which had trict of the wilderness, lay a corn growing valley, which had been taken possession of by some vociferons tribe, whether of Manielukes or Tartars no one could precisely say, whose whooping and obstreperous laughter was heard far and wide, surprising the solitudes."—McMaster's Hist. Steuben co., pp. 66-7-8.

This co. sympathized to some extent in the hostile feeling that prevailed throughout the Hollaod Land Company's Purthat prevailed throughout the Holland Land Company's Pur-chase toward its European proprietors a few years since; but in no instance were the processes of the courts seriously impeded or effectually resisted, and juries have never refused to render for the proprietors as the facts warranted. There was doubtless little interest felt by the foreign owners in this estate beyond that of realizing the greatest sum possible from their lands; and the heavy hardens of debts, interest, assignments, and back pay-ments, nechous not always borne with outsince, have been ments, perhaps not always borne with patience, have been gradually discharged, until but a comparatively small amount remains.

The proprietors of the Pulteney estate indulged in visions of boundless wealth to result from the settlement of their lands. They supposed that the natural avenue to market from the rich country" was down the Susquehanne, and that a city might be founded upon some of the headwaters of that stream which would command the entire trade of the West. After a survey of the region, the present site of Bath was selected as the location of the future city. Every inducement was held out to lure settlers; and for several years the markets of Rath proved a mine of wealth to the few who raised more grain than enough for their own use. Williamson erected a theater within a few years after the first settlement, in anticipation of the future metropolitan character of the place. A race course was also established, which for many years attracted sportsmen from all parts of the country. The golden visious of civic grandeur were pever realized.

Its surface is a hilly upland, a considerable portion of which is yet covered with forests. Tuscarora Creek, flowing E. through the northerly part of the town, is the principal stream. The soil is a clayey and gravelly leam. Lumbering is carried on to some extent. Newville, (Woodhull p.o.,) on Tuscarora Creek, contains 3 churches and several manufacturing establishments. Pop. 215. Hedgesville contains 10 houses. The first settlement was made in 1805, by Stephen Dolson, Daniel Johnson, Patrick Breakhill, Bethuel Tubbs, and Samuel B. Rice.<sup>8</sup> The first church (Presb.) was organized in 1830; and the Rev. Mr. Pomeroy was the first pastor. There are 4 churches in town.9

1 Its former name was from Frederick Bartles.—McMasters's | the first marriage. Capt. Wheeler built the first sawmill, in 1802; and Geo. W. Taylor the first gristmill, in 1803-04. 4 The late settlement of this town was owing to the fact that a large share of the land was owned in England and by heirs under age. Among the first settlers were Fred, Hauber, Wm. Burger, and Wm. Bray, from Delaware co., who came in 1823 and located near Rexville. John Wiley, Wm. Fisher, and Benj. Wilks settled at Wileysville in 1849. Uriah Stevens taught the first school; Chas. Rexford kept the first inn, and Walter B. Olimsted the first store, at Rexville. John Wiley built the first saw and griet mill. in 1849-50.

&quot;Capt. Wheeler's first trip to nill is worthy of record. There were, at the time when he had occasion to 'go to mill, three were, at the time when he had occasion to "go to finit, time institutions in the neighborhood where grinding was done,—at the Friends' settlement, at Bath, and at Naples. The millstones of Bath had suspended operations.—there being nothing there to grind, as was reported. Capt. Wheeler made a cart, of which the wheels were sawn from the end of a log of curly maple: the box was of corresponding architecture. He started for Naples with two oxen attached to this vehicle. Two young men went with two oxen attached to this vehicle. Two young men went before the oxen with axes and chopped a road, and the clumsy chariot came floundering through the bushes behind, bouncing over the logs and snubbing the stumps, like a ship working through an lee field. The first day they reached a point a little beyond the present village of Prattsburgh, a distance of six miles from their starting point, and the second moored triumphantly at the mill at Naples."—McMasters's Hist. ### SUFFOLK COUNTY.

This county was organized Nov. 1, 1683. It occupies the E. part of Long Island, embracing about two-thirds of its area, and includes several smaller islands off the E. and N. coasts. centrally distant 138 mi. from Albany, and contains 1,200 sq. mi. The E. extremity of the island is divided by Great and Little Peconic and Gardiners Bays into two narrow, unequal branches, between which are Gardiners, Shelter, and Robins Islands. A chain of islands extends from the N. branch nearly to the Conn. shore.2 A beach composed of alluvial sand and shingle, broken only by occasional inlets, skirts the s. shore of the island, enclosing several large, irregular bays, the principal of which are Great South, Moriches, Shinnecock, and Meeox Bays. "This great beach is a line of spits and islands. One of the islands is about 25 mi, long, with a breadth of a few hundred yards. They are all narrow and long; and when above the reach of the surf they are covered by a labyrinth of hillocks of drifted sand, imitating almost all the variety of form which snow drifts possess after a storm."

The action of the waves and winds is gradually extending this beach. Off the s. coast the sea is very shallow; 50 mi. from the shore its depth nowhere exceeds 40 fathoms; and sandbars at a considerable distance from the beach approach so near the surface as to break the waves into a surf. The traveler along the beach is seldom out of sight of a wreck.3 Irregular branches project inland from Long Island Sound, in the w. part of the co., and from the bays upon the s. and E. The peninsulas and points thus formed are locally known as "necks," Upon the s. side of the island these necks generally take the name of the stream E. of them. An irregular range of hills extends E. and w. through the co., a little N. of the center. A second range, commencing in Brookhaven, extends into the s. branch of the island, terminating at Canoe Place and reappearing farther E. as the Shinnecock Hills. Along the N. border of the co. the surface is somewhat broken; but in the s. it is very level. In the E. part are several fresh water lakes, and a few in the central and w. parts, the principal of which is Lake Ronkonkoma, on the w border of Brookhaven. The principal streams are Peconic River, in the E., and the Connecticut, in the central part. The soil is generally a light, sandy loam, moderately fertile along the coasts; but in some parts the surface consists of almost sterile plains or barren sandhills. The interior of the island, from near the foot of the hills to within one or two mi. of South Bay, is occupied by the "brush plains," which are sparsely inhabited and hardly susceptible of cultivation. Thousands of acres of these plains were burned over in 1844 and '45; and a thin growth of scrub oak, 3 to 4 feet high, has since sprung up on the burned tract.4 Along the coast are extensive salt marshes. No native rock is found within this co.; and the whole island, except a few rocks near Hellgate. appears to belong to the drift formation or to have been formed as a strand of the sea. The waters of the sea are slowly encroaching upon the land of the E. and N. parts.

The various branches of agriculture form the leading industrial pursuits.<sup>5</sup> Successful husbandry in this co. involves a large expenditure for fertilizers, which to considerable extent are obtained from the neighboring seas. Immense quantities of bony fish, are caught for this pur-

This co, excels all others in the State in the amount of turmps raised. Wheat is one of the principal crops.

6 The annual expenditure of this co, for mannes is nearly $200,000,—about half as much as is expended for the same purpose by all the rest of the State.

7 These fish are the Alosa menhaden, or "moss bunkers," and are usually called "bunkers" or "skippangs." They are caught are usually called "bunkers" or "skippangs." They are caught from May to Nov., in seines, in immense quantities; at a single hand, a few years since, 1,400 000 were taken. They are sold at an average price of $1 per M. They are usually strewn upon the surface as a top dressing or plowed under, but are some times rotted with earth, se owed, and other articles in compost heaps. The steach of these decaying lish is extremely understand the surface and the surfa pleasant and almost over powering to strangers.

 These islands appear to have been separated from the mainland and from each other by tidal currents, which flow between them with great force. — N. V. Geological Survey,—Mather,
 From Nov. 1, 184, to June 28, 1857, 5 ships, 9 backs, 16 brigs, Schooners, and 9 shops were wrecked, or in distress, off this coast. The Government has established 26 lifeboat stations upon the s. shore, (of which 19 are within this co.,) 1 on Fishers Island, 1 at Orient Point, and 2 upon the Sound. Each station is furnished with hoats, life-cars, mortars and rockets for throwing lines, and at each a keeper is in constant attendance. Under the provisions of the act of Feb. 16, 1787, "woreckmusters" are appointed by the Governor and Senate in and for the several counties bordering upon the seashers. Of these there are 15 in Suffelk co. It is their duty to render every possible and to distressed vessels. A project has recently been formed of constructing a telegraph line from Montauk Point to Brooklyn, with stations along the beach, so that intelligence may be transmitted in season to admit of aid being sent to vessels in distress.

<sup>4</sup> Some of these tracts are 8 to 10 mi, long and 2 to 4 wide. The fires destroyed not only the forest trees, but every vestige of vegetation, and thousands of cords of wood; bundreds of deer and other animals perished in them. These lands are valuable only for the timber upon them: and when that is destroyed they become nearly worthless.

5 Corn and potatoes are the leading agricultural exportations.

pose, and are used either alone or in connection with seaweed, stable manure, compost, gnano, ashes, and other fertilizers. Oysters and clams abound in the bays and seas around the island; and the taking of these, and fishing, form the principal occupations of the inhabitants along the shore. From the first settlement of the co. considerable attention has been given to whaling, This business was originally carried on in open boats from the shore; but large vessels are now sent upon long voyages to the Polar Seas.2 The preparation of "fish guano," and oil from bunkers,3 shipbuilding, and brickmaking are the principal mannfacturing interests of the co.4 At Fire 1sland, Greenport, and Orient, and at most of the villages along South Country Road are extensive hotels, especially fitted for the accommodation of families from New York City, great numbers of whom spend the summer months at these public houses or in private families.

The county seat is located at Riverhead.<sup>5</sup> The courthouse is a fine two story brick building, situated near the depôt, and contains the usual county offices, and accommodations for the sheriff's family. The jail, situated in rear of the courthouse, is a two story stone oetagonal building. The county clerk's office is a fireproof brick building. The co. has no poorhouse.7

The first regulation concerning public roads was adopted under authority of an act of General Assembly passed in 1724, and was kept alive by repeated enactments. Commissioners appointed by this authority about 1733 laid out 3 principal roads from w. to E. These were ealled the North, Middle, and South Country Roads, and upon them the principal villages and settlements are located. The project of opening a navigable communication between the bays upon the s. shore of the island was recommended by Gov. Clinton in 1825, and was subsequently authorized by law, but was never carried into effect.8 The Long Island R. R. affords the principal avenue of business through the island.9 Short stage routes counect the several villages along the N. and s. shores with the R. R.

Seven newspapers are published in the co.; 2 at Greenport, 2 at Huntington, 1 at Sag Harbor, 1 at Patchogue, and 1 at Riverhead.10

When Long Island first became known, it was inhabited by 13 tribes of Indians, of which all but two resided wholly or in part in this co. 11 Of these the Montauks were the most numerous <sup>1</sup> At present 3 whalehoats at Mastic Point, 2 at Shinne-cock, 6 at Southampton, and several at Bridgehampton, East Hampton, and Amaganset, are kept in constant readiness for use upon the beach. They are mounted, bottom upward, upon a staging, and are well simplied with oars, lances, harpoons, and other necessary tackle. During the winter and spring months other necessary tackie. During the winter and spring months a lookout is kept, and when a whale appears a signal radius the neighborhood to the chase. A year seldom passes without one prize; and some years half a dozen are captured.

<sup>2</sup> The whaling interests of this co, received a severe check upon the discovery of gold in California. Many whaleships were fitted out for the trade with that region, and upon the reaction that followed were sold. The number of whaleships now belonging to the co. is 33; and the greatest number at any one time (in

3 The manufactories of fish guano and oil are in Southold and upon Sbelter Island, and on Napeagne Beach. The fish are heated by steam, and the oil is extracted by hydrostatic presses. The residue is dried and ground for guano. Forty tons of fish yield 9 tons of guano and 840 gals, of oil. It is claimed by many that this manufactured article possesses all the valuable properties of the Pernyian gnano.

4 Salt was formerly made from seawater at Sag Harbor. extensive business was formerly carried on in cutting wood and shipping it to the New York market. Spatford, in his Gazetteer of 1823, says that a great portion of the tuet consumed in the city was furnished by the pine plains, and that 100,000 cords were annually sent from Brookhaven. Since the fires of 1844 and '45 but little wood has been experted.

6 A small two story frame building erected in 1725, served for both a courthouse and jail. The first court of Oyer and Terminer under the State Government was held Sept 4, 175.
 6 This building was erected in 1854 and 55, at a cost of $17,800.

6 This building was creeted in 1854 and 55, at a cost of $17,800. The committee appointed to superintend its creetion were Sam!

E. Nicoll, Wm. R. Post, and Sylvester Miller. By an act passed to stabilish his office in two places, and to appoint a deputy to have charge of one. The records migrated between 1shp and Southold, and were kept many years at Smithtown. The records of whils in this co, extend back to 1669. The records of the court of General part of Januarica and Newtown; the "Mattinecols," Sees have and Common Place have here scarned since. essions and Common Pleas have been separately recorded since 1723.

7 Most of the towns have poorhouses, at which co. purpers are provided for at the co. expense.

Of all these tribes there now remain and powerful; and the consent of Wyandance, their grand sachem, was necessary to the validity of all Indian grants of that date upon the island. The earliest settlement within the co. was made in 1639, on Gardiners Island, under title derived from James Farrett, agent of the Earl of Stirling, to whom a grant of the whole of Long Island had been made by the Plymouth Company.<sup>2</sup> Southold and Southampton were settled in I640, Easthampton in I648, Shelter Island in 1652, Huntington in I653, Brookhaven in I655, and Smithtown in I668, by English immigrants from New England. These settlers were strongly imbued with Puritan doctrines and zealously devoted to their strict observance.3 They naturally sought alliance with the adjacent New England colonies, to whom they were warmly attached, and with whom they were closely united until they were brought under the government of New York. Among the first measures taken by the colonists was the establishment of religious worship and schools, which in most of the towns date from the first or second year of settlement. These were commonly supported by tax, often levied in kind, and sometimes coupled with privileges and grants that are still recognized.

The patents granted by the New York governors created corporations, with municipal powers and privileges which were liberal for that period. These have never been changed, and are still valid. The rights were of two classes,—one belonging to all who might gain a residence and citizenship within the town, and the other pertaining only to the persons named in the patents and their heirs at law. During the Revolution most of the inhabitants of the co. warmly espoused the cause of the colonists; but after the battle of Long Island the British ascendency was complete, and few opportunities occurred for assisting in the popular movement. Several hold and successful incursions were made by partisan corps; but the armed occupation of the island was at no time interrupted.4 During the latter part of the War of 1812 an English fleet was stationed off the eastern coast; but few depredations were committed. The history of the co. from that day to the present is only the record of the industrial pursuits of a thriving people.

BROOKHAVEN—was incorp. by patent, under Gov. Nicoll, March 13, 1666, with the usual privileges of a township;5 and Dec. 27, I686, the patent was confirmed by Gov. Dongan, and extended privileges were granted.6 It was recognized as a town March 7, 1788. It occupies the entire width of Long Island, near the center of the co. E. and w. It has 20 mi. of coast on Long Island Sound, 21 on South Bay, and above 30 on Fire Island, which skirts the whole s. coast. Patchogue and Bellport Bays, upon the s. coast, are branches of Great South Bay; and Old Mans Harbor and Port Jefferson, Conscience, Setauket, and Flax Pond Bays, are indentations upon the N. coast from L. I. Sound. The principal capes upon the N. coast are Cranes Neck, Old Field Point, Little Neck, Dyers Neck, Mount Misery, and Rocky Point. A range of low hills extends across the n. part of the town; but elsewhere the surface is level. The principal streams are Peconic River, in the E. part, and the Connecticut, in the central. There are several fresh water ponds of great depth and purity in the town, many of which have no outlet. The soil along the coast, both upon Long Island Sound and South Bay, is a moderately fertile, light, sandy loam, and in the interior it is generally unproductive. Along the streams near their mouths are numerous salt meadows. Port Jefferson 10 (p. v.) is situated at the head of Port Jefferson Bay, on the N. coast. It has a good harbor, and shipbuilding is largely carried on. Pop. I,247. Setauket, (p. v., ) on the bay of the same name, contains 2 churches and 4 shipyards and has a pop. of 1,136. Stony Brook, 12 (p. v.,) near the line of Smithtown, contains I church and has a pop. (in this town) of 542. Mt. Sinai, 13 (p. v., ) on Old Mans Harbor, has a pop. of 276. The lighthouse on Old Field Point was built in 1823; and another on Fire Island, near Fire Island Inlet, was built in 1858.9 The first settlement was made at Setauket, 10 in 1655, by a colony of immigrants from near Boston, Mass. The land was bought from the Setauket Indians, and the sale confirmed by a release from Wyandance, Sachem of Montauk. This settlement was received under the government of Conn. in 1661, and Richard Woodhull and Thos. Pierce were appointed magistrates by the General Court. The tract of land between Islip and Bellport, extending to the center of the island, was purchased of the natives by John Winthrop in 1666, and the title confirmed March 29, 1680. Let Col. Wm. Smith purchased Little Neck, Oct. 22, 1686, and an extensive tract E. of Connecticut River, extending northward to the center of the co., in May, 1691.13 Fort St. George, a strongly fortified British post on South Bay, was surprised and taken by a party of 80 men, under Maj. Tallmadge, Nov. 21, 1780. They crossed Long Island Sound from Coun., landing at Old Mans Harbor, marched to Coram, where they destroyed a large amount of forage, and then to Fort St. George, which they captured without the loss of a mau. Over 50 men were made prisoners, and a large amount of property was destroyed.14 Gen. Woodhull,15 Pres. of the Second and Third Provincial Congresses, Gen. Wm. EAST HAMPTON—was incorp. by patent, under Gov. Nicoll, March 13, 1666, 19 and confirmed by Gov. Dongan, Dec. 9, 1686. It was recognized as a town March 7, 1788. It lies at the E. extremity of Long Island, s. of Gardners Bay and Long Island Sound, and includes Gardners Island, lying N. of the mainland. The E. part consists of a narrow peninsula, to which the name, Montauk, is applied. Upon the N. coast are several large bays, some of them nearly landlocked. The principal of these are Northwest, Three Mile, Acabonac, and Napeague Harbors, and Fort Pond Bay. In the central and w. parts the surface is mostly level or gently undulating; but along the coast upon the s. is a belt of low, shifting sand ridges; and the E. part is broken by low, irregular hills, some of which attain an elevation of 100 ft. above the sea. Near the coast in the s. part of the town and upon the peninsula are several fresh water ponds. The principal of these are Great.1 Fort, Oyster, Hook, and Georgica Ponds; and their outlets have been closed by sandbars or a beach. Upon the main portion of the peninsula of Montauk the soil is fertile, but its neck is a barren, sandy waste. In the w. part the soil is a light, sandy loam and is kept highly fertile by the use of manures. Stock raising forms the leading occupation; and to that pursuit Gardners Islama and Montauk Point are exclusively devoted. A tract of about 9000 acres, embracing the entire E. portion of the town, is devoted wholly to pasturage. It is owned by a company, incorp, as tenants in common, whose affairs are managed by a board of 7 trustees elected annually.4 Twelve trustees are chosen annually, to whom are committed the management of the town commons, the meadow beaches, and the waters within the bays, the privileges of which are enjoyed by all citizens. A town poorhouse is located on a small farm about 2 mi. w. of East Hampton Village. The first settlement in this town, and the first English settlement in the State, was made on Gardiners Island in 1639, by Lyon Gardiner. 10 Settlement in the w. part of the town was commenced in 1648, upon lands purchased of the Montauk Indians, by a company of English families from Lynn, Mass," The government of the colony was purely democratic. The people met in "General Court," and enacted laws, appointed civil and ministerial officers, and acted upou appeals from the decisions of their magistrates. Three magistrates, 12 a recorder, a secretary, and a constable were annually elected. Lands were allotted to individuals, and could not be alienated without the approval of the General Court. In Dec. 1653, they adopted the laws of Conn.; and from 1657 to 1667 they were united with that colony.<sup>13</sup> The inhabitants sided with the colonists in the disputes which led to the Revolution. In June, 1775, an "Association" favoring the measures of the Continental Congress was formed, and its articles were signed by every male inhabitant capable of bearing arms.<sup>14</sup> Rev. It also includes about half of Oak Island Beach, and Cedar and several smaller islands in Great South Bay. The N. shore is deeply indented by Huntington Bay, from which Lloyds Harbor extends to the w., Huntington Harbor to the s., and Northport Bay to the E. Centerport and Northport Harbors branch off upon the s. of the latter bay, and two smaller arms upon the N. W. Great, Little, and Eatons<sup>1</sup> Necks are peninsulas formed by these bays and harbors. Groups of low hills extend through the center, and the surface 2 to 3 mi. from the Sound is broken; but elsewhere it is comparatively level. The soil in the N. and S. is fertile; but in the interior it is unproductive. The industrial pursuits are various; whaling, fishing, and taking oysters and clams are some of the leading occupations. Shipbuilding and manufactures receive considerable attention. At the annual election 7 trustees are chosen, to whose care the management of the town property is committed.<sup>2</sup> The town poorhouse is located near Huntington Village. In 1660 the settlement was received under the government of Conn.; and in 1663 deputies were elected to the General Court at Hartford. Upon the English conquest, in I664, the town came reluctantly under the government of New York. During the Revolution, companies of tories were stationed here, and many outrages were committed upon those friendly to the independence of the colonies. There are 22 churches in town.14

ISLIP<sup>15</sup>—was first recognized as a town by the Colonial Government, Nov. 25, 1710, and by the State Legislature March 7, 1788.16 It lies w. of the center of the co., and extends from the s, coast to the middle of the island; it has a coast of about 18 mi. on Great South Bay, and includes Cap Tree, Oak, and several other islands off the s. coast. Numerous narrow inlets from Great South Bay divide the coast into distinct "necks," of which there are 35 within the limits of the town. The Connetquot River, and Sam-pa-wams or Thompsons Creek, are the principal streams. The surface is level, except in the N. part, where it is hilly. The brush plains occupy all the central portion; and near the coast are extensive salt meadows. Upon a tract extending along the bay, and varying in width from one to three miles, the soil is fertile. This part of the town is thickly settled; but the remainder is almost uninhabited. The keeping of the town poor is let to the lowest bidders. Penataquit,17 (p. v.,) near the coast, contains I church and has a pop. of 292; Islip, (p. v.,) 2 mi. SHELTER ISLAND<sup>10</sup>—was incorp. by patent, under Gov. Nicoll, May 31, 1666;<sup>11</sup> but its government was united with that of Southold until 1730. It was recognized as a town March 7, 1788. It lies between the two peniusulas which form the E. extremity of Long Island, and embraces an area of over 8,000 acres. The island is very irregular; upon all sides jutting headlands extend out into the surrounding waters, and branching bays penetrate into the interior. The principal of these inlets are Coccles, West Neck, and Deerings Harbors. The surface is hilly, and the soil fertile. Grain raising and sheep husbandry form the principal agricultural pursuits. Guano and oil are manufactured in considerable quantities from bony fish caught in the neighboring waters. There is a wind gristmill near the center of the island. Sheller Island is a p.o., centrally located. This island was the ancient residence of the Manhassett Indians. It was purchased for the Earl of Sterling by Jas. Farrett, and was afterward sold to Stephen Goodyear, of New Haven. In 1651 it was purchased by Nathauiel and Constant Sylvester, Thos. Middleton, and Thos. the line of Islip, and Nissequague, on Nissequague Neck, are hamlets. A tract of land, including the principal part of this town, was, in July, 1659, conveyed to Lyon Gardiner as a free gift, by Wyandanee, Sachem of the Montauks; and in 1662 the grant was confirmed by the Nessequake tribe, by whom the lands were occupied. In 1663 the tract was sold to Richard Smith, and in 1665 the remaining part of the town was purchased of the Indians by him. Fort Slongo, in the n. w. part of the town, was erected by the British during the Revolution. It was captured by a body of Americans, under Col. Tallmadge, Oct. 3, 1781.2 There are 6 churches in town.3

SOUTHAMPTON4—was incorp. by patent, under Gov. Andros. Nov. 1, 1676,5 confirmed by Gov. Dongan, Dec. 6, 1686, and recognized as a town March 7, 1788. It occupies the greater part of the s. branch of Eastern Long Island, and has 30 mi, of seacoast. The entire s. shore is skirted by a beach which is united in a few places with the mainland, separating the inclosed waters into distinct bays, the principal of which are East, Quantuc, Shinnecock, and Meeox Bays; minor bays, branching from these, divide the surrounding shores into numerous irregular "necks." The beach which separates the waters of these bays from the Atlantic is unbroken except by a single inlet into Shinnecock Bay. The outline of the N. coast is extremely tortnons; ragged and often nearly landlocked bays project inland, and irregular points of land jut out into the surrounding waters. A range of low hills extends along the N. border of the town, and the Shinneeock Hills occupy the central part; elsewhere the surface is level. The soil in the E. and S. parts consists of a light, sandy loam, and is moderately fertile; but in other parts it is of an inferior quality. A large tracts, of Peconic River is covered with extensive pine forests. Stock raising and the other branches of agriculture form the principal industrial pursuits. The lands are enriched by the application of immense quantities of bunkers. Large tracts of meadow and pasturage lands in different parts of the town are owned by 3 companies, who, in common, elect annually a board of 12 trustees, to whose management the lands are committed.6 Taking clams and oysters, and whaling, form an important part of the business. The town has a small poorhouse, a short distance E. of Bridgehampton. A lighthouse has been recently erected on Ponquogue Beach. Sag Harbor, (p. v.,) in the N. E. part, was incorp. as a fire district in 1803, and as a village March 12, 1819. It contains 7 churches, the Sag Harbor Institute, a newspaper office, a bank, a cotton flannel factory, 2 clock factories, and several manufactories of oil casks. This port has long been noted for the extent of its whaling business.9 It was made a port of entry in 1784, and by itself now constitutes a district of customs. Pop. 2,776,—2,041 in Southampton, and 735 in Easthampton. Southampton, (p. v.,) midway between Shinnecock and Mecox Bays, contains 2 churches, an academy, 10 and 65 houses. Bridgehampton,  $^{11}$  (p. v., ) in the E. part, contains 2 churches and about 40 houses; Shinnecock, on the E. side of Shinnecock Bay, is an Indian settlement of about 20 houses. 2 Sagg. The "Timen Purchase" occupies the E. part of the town. It is divided into 154 shares, called "fifties," worth about $10 each. These fifties are subdivided into sixteenths, and the shares are canned in every conceivable quantity, from 1-40th of a fifty to 10 fifties. They receive their proportion of the common school money, and the school commissioner of the district employs a teacher for them. They are exempt from taxation, and are debarred the exercise of the elect ive franchise. They occupy the lands between Canoe Place and Shinnecock Creek as tenants in common. from Lynn, Mass. A grant of the land was obtained from James Farrett, agent of Lord Stirling, in April, and a conveyance from the Indians on the 13th of Dec., 1640. During the first 12 months 47 settlers arrived. In 1644 Southampton was received under the government of Conn., and until 16642 was represented in General Court at Hartford. Upon the Dutch invasion in 1673 the town again sought a union with Conn. It was received, and, together with East Hampton and Southold, was erected into a co. Upon the re-establishment of English power, in 1674, the town came under the government of New York. The first settlement at Sag Harbor was made in 1730, by a few fishermen. On the morning of the 24th of May, 1777, Col. Meigs, with 130 men, surprised the British force stationed at Sag Harbor, destroyed 12 brigs and a sloop, besides a large amount of forage, provisions, and merchandise, and returned across the Sound without the loss of a man.3 A body of American troops was stationed at Sag Harbor in 1813, in consequence of the presence of a British fleet in Gardiners Bay. The first church was erected at Southampton, in 1641; and the first church in Bridgehampton was built in 1670.6 There are now 17 churches in town.7

SOUTHOLD<sup>8</sup>—was incorp. by patent, under Gov. Andros, Oct. 30, 1676, and recognized as a town March 7, 1788. Riverhead was taken off in 1792. It comprises the principal part of the northern peninsula of Eastern Long Island, and includes Robins Island in Great Peconic Bay, and Plum, Fishers, and several smaller islands in Long Island Sound. Orient is a peninsula upon the E.; and Great and Little Hog Necks are smaller peninsulas in the s. The s. shore is indented by several small, irregular bays; while the outline of the n. coast is unbroken except by 2 or 3 narrow inlets. The surface is elevated and level. The soil is a light, sandy loam, kept highly fertile by the use of manures. Plum Island, 11 separated from the mainland by Plum Gut, contains about 800 acres. Fishers Island, about 8 mi. eastward, is 7 mi. long by 1½ wide and contains about 4000 acres.<sup>12</sup> Great and Little Gull Islands are between Plum and Fishers Islands. Agriculture forms the leading industrial pursuit; potatoes, corn, and wheat are the principal crops.13 Considerable attention is also given to shipbuilding, whaling, and commerce. A limited amount of manufacturing is carried on.14 Scattered tracts of lands and beaches, owned by an incorp. company, are intrusted to the management of 3 trustees, elected annually. These lands are represented by 110 shares, valued at $15 each. The town has a poorfarm of 300 acres near Southold Village. Lighthouses are located on Hortons Point, Little Gull Island, 15 and "The Dumplings,"—a group of rocks in Fishers Island Sound. 6 Greenport, 17 (p. v., ) on Greenport Harbor, was incorp. #### SULLIVAN COUNTY.

This county was erected from Ulster, March 27, 1809, and was named in honor of Maj. Gen. John Sullivan, of the Revolution. It contains an area of 1,082 sq. mi., and is centrally distant 85 miles from Albany. The surface is generally very hilly, and along the E. border mountainous. In the s. and w. it consists chiefly of ridges separated by narrow ravines; but in the middle and N. it assumes more the character of a rolling plateau. The highlands of this co. may be considered as the s. slope of the Catskills; and near the N. borders of the co. they divide the waters that flow into Hudson and Delaware Rivers. From this clevated portion numerous ridges extend toward the Delaware, giving the co. a general southerly inclination. The Delaware cuts these ridges diagonally, its valley forming the only division between the Catskills and the mountains of Eastern Penn. The highest points in the co. are the hills in the town of Rockland, which are estimated to be 2100 to 2400 feet above tide. Walnut Hill, in Liberty, has an elevation of 1980 feet. The lowest summit of the Shawangunk<sup>1</sup> Mt., between Bloomingburgh and Wurtzboro, is 1271 feet above tide, and the highest summit is about 500 feet higher. This range of mountains at a distance presents a striking uniformity of outline, which is due to the evenness of stratification of the rock composing it. The lowest point in the co. is upon the Delaware, at the mouth of the Mongaup, which has an elevation of 550 feet above tide. The co. line on the Rondout is elevated 773 feet.

With the exception of a small district on its E. border, through which flow the upper waters of Shawangunk Kil and Lackawack Creek, this co. is drained by the Delaware and its branches, the largest of which are Neversink<sup>2</sup> and Mongaup<sup>3</sup> Rivers, Beaver Kil and Bashers Kil, and Callicoon (Caw-li-coon) and Ten Mile Creeks. The Neversink flows entirely across the co., having for its tributaries Bashers Kil, Wyncoop Brook, Bush Kil, Cherry-meadow Brook, and several minor streams. Most of these streams are rapid, and afford at numerous points a great amount of water-power. In the valleys and forests of the co. are about 100 small lakes, which form peculiar and often picturesque and highly beautiful features in its scenery. Most of these ponds and streams abound in fish, of which trout is the most common. Pickerel have been introduced into several of them.

The geological formation of the co. is exceedingly simple. The whole surface is underlaid by the red sandstone of the Catskill Group and the Shawangunk Conglomerate. These rocks extend southward into Penn., and form the floor of the coal measures. Of these rocks the latter postesses a commercial value for millstones,4 building stones, and the manufacture of glass. The soil is mostly a reddish loam mixed with gravel, and is generally stony; in the s.E. vertion is found some clay. Grass is the staple production, and the hilly character of most of the co, seems to adapt it to grazing rather than to tillage. The facility with which the products of the dairy can now reach the great markets, by means of the N.Y. & E. R. R., has within a few years given an impetus to the prosperity of the co., while the erection of tanneries, which the same thoroughfare has encouraged, has created a home market of great advantage to the farmer. In 1855 there were in the co. about 40 tanneries, producing over $2,000,000 worth of leather annually and employing about 750 laborers. The lumbering interests also employ large amounts of capital and labor. Winter wheat, formerly considered a sure and abundant crop, is found to yield smaller returns and with less certainty as the country becomes older; and other crops, less valuable but more certain, have been substituted to a great extent. The surplus wheat of Sullivan co. was formerly transported by land to the Hudson, where it found a profitable market; but, with the increase of manufactures, there is now less raised than is consumed in the co. Grass seed of a fine quality is raised in considerable quantities. The fruits are limited to apples, pears, plums, cherries, and a few peaches. The timber along the Delaware Valley is mostly hemlock, pine, oak, and chestnut; and on the highlands it is hemlock, beech, maple, birch, ash, and basswood. The climate is cool and bracing, and the co. is remarkably healthy.

The co. seat is located at Monticello, in the town of Thompson. The co. buildings, consisting of a eourthouse and jail, are substantial stone edifices, erected in 1844 in place of the original co. buildings, which were burned.<sup>2</sup> The poorhouse is located upon a farm of 100 acres 3 mi. E. of Monticello. The average number of inmates is 56, supported at a weekly cost of 75 ets. each. The farm yields a revenue of $400. A school is kept during 3 mo, in the year. No religious instruction is afforded. The house is too small, is poorly ventilated, is not furnished with water, and will not admit of a proper classification of its inmates.

The 2 great works of internal improvement within the limits of the eo, are the Delaware & Hudson Canal, extending through the s.E. part, and the N.Y. & E. R. R., built along the valley of the Delaware.4 The former opens an easy and direct communication between the Hudson at Rondout and the Penn. coal mines at Carbondale; and the latter forms one link of the great chain of western travel. Several plank roads have been constructed, as auxiliary to this great thoroughfare, greatly benefiting the sections of country through which they pass. The first newspaper in the co, was issued in I821.5

Little is known of the early history of the co. Many traces exist of its occupation long anterior to that by the present race of settlers. Upon the first advent of the present settlers, a road was found to extend s. w. from Esopus, on the Hudson, along the valley n. of the Shawangunk Mts. It was known as the "Mine Road," and, according to traditional account, was built by a company of miners from Holland, before the English conquest of 1664.6 Two mines are said to have been wrought,—one where the mountain approaches the Delaware, near the lower point of Panquaroy Flat; and the other N. of the mountain, about halfway between the Delaware River and Esopus Creek. The Minisink Flat, on the border of Orange and Sullivan cos., is said to have been settled by Hollanders many years before the date of Penn's Charter; and the settlement, which extended 40 mi. or more along both sides of the Delaware, had in a great degree become isolated from the rest of the world. When the present settlements were begun, there was a road from the E., near the central part of the co., called the "Porter Road;" and in the N. part was another, called the "Hunter's Road."

With the exception of the vagne traditions of early settlement by the Dutch along the Delaware, the first location of a permanent white inhabitant is said to have been made about the year 1700, by Don Manuel Gonzales, a Spaniard, who, having married into a Dutch family in Rochester. (Ulster co.,) removed to Mamakating Hollow, where he erected a house and raised grain. opened a trade with the neighboring Indians, who were then friendly; and other settlers were induced to follow. Mamakating Precinct was formed in 1743, and until after the Revolution it embraced nearly all of the present co. of Sullivan. About 1750 a number of German families settled upon the w. frontiers of Ulster co. They suffered greatly from Indian hostilities. The first Indian incursion took place in 1777, when the family of Mr. Sprague, in Mamakating, was attacked. The next year the family of Mr. Brooks was attacked, some members were killed, and others taken prisoners.

On the 13th of Oct. 1778, a party of nearly a hundred tories and Indians, under Brant, invaded the settlements, first falling upon the family of Mr. Westfall, and killing one man. attacked the house of Mr. Swartwout, who was at home with his sons, (the women having been previously removed to a fort,) and killed all but one, who escaped. The firing alarmed others, who field to the forts at Gumars and De Witts, where, by a skillful display of force by Capt. Abraham Cuddeback, who commanded at the former, the enemy were deterred from making an attack.

J The first bindlings, erected in accordance with an act passed March 22, 1811, were burned Jan. 13, 1844. The first court was held, and the first Board of Supervisors organized, at the house of Curtia Linsley. The county officers first appointed were Wm. A. Thompson, First Judge: Samuel F. Jones and Elnathan Sears, Associate Judges; John Conklin, Jalee Wakeman, and David Hammond, Assistant Justices; James S. Dunning, Surroute: Urish Lock wood, Sheriff; and John P. Jones, Cirk.

The Delaware & Hudson Canal Co, was incorp. April 23, 1823. The work was commenced in July, 1825, and completed in Oct. 1828. It was of great importance to the early settlers of the co., as it opened an easy and cheap avenue to reacher.

4 This R. R. enters the co. in the town of Tusten from Penn. It having been found difficult to construct the road on the N.Y. side of the river, the right of way for a short distance was solicited from Penn. The petition was granted, and for the substantial benefit which the R.R. conferred upon that State, the company was subjected to an annual tax of $10,000. This road forms a direct and speedy communication with N.Y., and has been of great value to the co. in stimulating its settlement and developing its resources.

After firing most of the houses and barns of the settlement, the marauders retired, leaving behind them a melaneholy scene of havoc and desolation at the verge of an inelement winter. The distress thus occasioned was very great. Major Phillips arrived seen after the incursion with a company of militia; but the enemy had fled beyond reach.

In 1777 or '78, Capt. Graham, with a party of 18 men, went to Chestnut Breek in pursuit of some Indians who had been committing depredations upon the settlements at Pine Bush. Having stopped to drink, Capt. Graham saw an Indian in the path, and the party fired a volley without effect. Upon this the Indians on the opposite banks returned the fire with fatal effect, and but 3 of the party escaped to tell the dismal tule. To deprive the enemy of sustenance and the means for further annoyance, the Legislature, in 1779,1 enacted a law directing the Governor to cause the destruction of such grain and crops in the w. frontiers of Orange and Ulster cos. as could not be removed to a place of safety. In 17832 the precinct of "Mamacotting" and the township of Rochester (the district of the regiment of Col. A. Ilawke Hay, and that part of the Goshen regiment on the w. side of the Minisink Mts.) were exempted from a levy then made for the defense of the N. and W. frontiers.3

Several traces of Indian occupation were found in the first settlement of the co. About 4 mi. from the Delaware, on the Flat, was found a brass or copper temahawk, with a steel edge, and u handle perforated for smoking. Stone axes, flint arrows, &c. were frequently found. In 1793, an Indian living in Rockland, at a place called "Pocatocton," (meaning a river almost spent,) removed to Niagara. He is supposed to have been the last of his race that inhabited the co. Indian trails were found along the Delaware, the Beaver Kil, and in other sections.

The part of this co. s. of the s. bounds of Callicoon and Bethel is comprised in the Neversink Patent, conveyed to Matthew Ling and others Aug. 28, 1704; and the remainder of the co. in the great tract granted to Jehannes Hardenbergh and others April 20, 1708, and known as the "Hardenbergh Patent." The Newburgh and Coehecton Turnpike (incorp. March 20, 1801) was opened across the co. in ISOS, and gave the first impulse to its prosperity by making it accessible to This section continued to receive emigrants from New England and the older portions of the State until its growth was cheeked by the completion of the Eric Canal to the Genesee country and the great lakes, by which emigration was diverted to the new and fertile lands of the West. Real estate in consequence declined materially in value, and many of the early settlers abandoned their locations and joined the westward current. In 1819 or '20 the Orange Branch Turnpike was made, from Montgomery, (Orange co.,) crossing the Shawangunk Mt. at Roses Gap, and extending across the barrens through Wakemans Settlement to the Neversink Falls, and thence to Liberty. The charter of this read was long since given up, but the route is maintained as a district road.

BETHEL—was formed from Lumberland, March 27, 1809. Cochecton was taken off in 1828 It lies upon the high ridges which form the watershed between Delaware and Mongaup Rivers. a little s. w. of the center of the co. Its surface is broken and hilly, and many of the declivities are steep and rocky. It is watered by a large number of small streams, mostly tributary to Mongaup River; and it has many small lakes, which form a beautiful and remantic teature of the land-White Lake, near the center,-named from its white sandy shores and bettom,-is noted for the beauty of its scenery.<sup>5</sup> The other principal lakes are Birch Ridge Pond in the N. W., Horse Shee and Pleasant Ponds in the N., Mallory Pond in the w., Indian Field Pond in the s., Big and Wells Ponds on the s. line, and Chestnut Ridge Pond and Black Lake and Lake Superior near the center. The soil is a sandy and gravelly loam, intermixed in places with elay. The settlements are comparatively new, and the people are chiefly engaged in the raising of neat cattle, dairying, lumbering, and tanning.6 Mongaup Valley (p. v.) contains 35 houses, and Bethel 15. Bushville and White Lake are p. offices. John Fuller was the first settler in the "Fuller Settlement," in 1806-07.7 The first preacher (Presb.) was the Rev. Mr. Green.8

Incidents connected with these events, and the details of the memorable battle of Minisink in July, 1779, are given in our account of the towns in which they occurred.

4 Portions of the Hardenbergh Patent were settled upon leases of long term; and during the anti-rent excitement, a few years since, the clamor against this tenure prevailed extensively, but without acts of open violence. The refusal to pay reuts, which this feeling occasioned, led to a great amount of litigation. Although the excitement has subsided, the question is not fully settled.

This lake is noticed in one of the poems of Alfred B. Street, by the name of "Kon-ne-on-ga."

A tancery at Mongaup Valley in 1856 manufactured 50,000 sides of leather, valued at $187,000. It consumed about 5000 cords of hemlock bark, and amployed 70 men, at a cost of $12,000. There are about 102,000 sides of leather manufactured annually at different tanneries in this town.

The first school at Mongaup wes authon hear write Lake. The first senson at soughly was taught by G. P. Price, and at Bethel by Dr. Copeland. Gillespie & Hook kept the first store at White Lake, and J. K. Boeman built the first saw and grist mill, on White lake nutlet. The first birth was that of Catharine Fuller, in 1807, and the first death that of a child of Stephen Northrup.

CALLICOON -- was formed from Liberty, March 30, 1842. Fremont was taken off in 1851. It lies in the w. part of the co., about the sources of the N. branch of Callicoon Creek. It is watered by numerous streams flowing into the Delaware, the valleys being mostly narrow ravines, and the hills rising in steep declivities 200 to 600 feet above them. In the N. E. are Shandler and Sand Ponds, the latter affording a pure white sand, formerly used in making glass. The soil is mostly a sandy loam, and the hillsides and summits are generally capable of a good degree of cultivation. The settlement is recent, and the people are about equally engaged in lumbering, farming, and tanning. Jeffersonville, (p. v., ) on the line of Cochecton, has population of 433, of whom 305 are in this town. Youngsville, (p.v.,) North Branch, (p.v.,) and Callicoon Center (Callicoon p.o.) have each about 30 houses. The first settlers were Wm. Wood and his sons, Gerrett, Edward, and David, who arrived in town May 19, 1814, and lived I5 years in the wilderness.3 Rev. Mr. McClary, pastor of the Asso. Ref. church of Bethel, was the first preacher.4

COCHECTON'S -was formed from Bethel, March 25, 1828. It is situated upon the bank of the Delaware, in the w. part of the co. Ridges of hills, with narrow valleys between, cover the entire surface of the town. The principal streams are the Callicoon and its branches, and several small tributaries of the Delaware. The month of the Callicoon is 777 feet above tide. Pike Pond in the E., Perry Pond in the s., and Mitchells Pond and Lake Huntington in the center, are the principal sheets of water. A large part of the surface is still covered with forests. The soil is mostly a gravelly loam, and best adapted to pasturage. Lumbering and tanning form the leading objects of industry. Cochecton (p.v.) contains 269 inhabitants, Pike Pond (p.v.) 188, Callicoon Depot (p. v.) 207, and Stevensburgh (Cochecton p. o.) 209. Beech Wood and Fosterdale are p. offices. Settlements were begnn on the Delaware before the Revolution, but were broken up. The pioneer settler was N. Mitchell, who located near Cochecton Village.6 The first church (Presb.) was formed in IS39, and the Rev. Mr. Cummings was the first pastor.

FALLSBURGH—was formed from Thompson and Neversink, March 9, 1826. It derives its name from the falls in Neversink River at Fallsburgh Village. Its surface is hilly and rolling. It is drained by the Neversink and its branches. Sheldrake Pond, (named from the wild ducks that formerly frequented its waters,) Smith, Hill, and Browns Ponds in the w., and East Pond, in the E., are the principal lakes. The soil is a gravelly loam. The people are chiefly engaged in lumbering, dairying, and tanning.8 Woodbourne (p.v.) contains 30 houses, Neversink Falls (Fallsburgh p. o.) 25, Hasbrouck (p. v.) 25, Loch Sheldrake (p. v.) 15, and Sandburgh (p.v.) 15. It is said that settlement was commenced in this town by Germans previous to the Revolution,9 but the settlers were driven off during that war. Soon after the peace 3 brothers by the name of Baker located in town and commenced the first permanent settlement. 10 The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was built at Hasbronek. 11

FORESTBURGH—was formed from Thompson and Mamakating, May 2, 1837. It lies principally upon the high ridges between Neversink and Mongaup Rivers, and has a broken surface and an average elevation of 1400 feet above tide. In this town are several small lakes, the principal of which are Ruddicks Pond in the N. W., Beaver Pond in the s., and Panther Pond in the center. The town still retains the character implied by its name. Mongaup Falls, on Mongaup River, 3 mi. above Forestburgh Village, are worthy of note. The river here falls into a chasm 70 feet deep, and the banks below the falls are more than 100 feet high. Lumbering, tan-

The first sawmill was built in 1808, and the first grist mill in 1809, by Philo Ruggles. Matthew Seeley kept the first inn, at Hasbronck, and Robt. Reading the first store, at Fallsburgh. In 1797, the nearest mill was at Napanock, in Ulster co.; and for many years the nearest market was Newburgh. In 1786 or '87 an extraordinary and ning, and dairying constitute the employments of the people. Forestburgh (p. o.) contains 10 houses, Oaklandville 15, and Hartwood 10. Settlement commenced before the Revolution, and recommenced in 1795 on Mongaup River. Zephaniah and Luther Drake were pioneers in the s. w. part of the town, and Elisha Smith near Oakland.2 Rev. Isaac Thomas (Meth.) was the first preacher.8

FREMONT—was formed from Callicoon, Nov. I, 1851, and named in honor of John C. Fremont. It lies in the extreme w. part of the co., upon the bank of the Delaware. Its surface is broken and hilly, the summits rising 600 to 1000 feet above the valley and 1500 to 1800 feet above tide. Its waters are Basket and Hankins Creeks, a great number of smaller streams, and numerous small lakes, the principal of which are Long Pond, Round and Basket Ponds in the N., Lox Pond in the E., and Trout Pond near the center. A large share of the surface is still a wilderness and is too rough for tillage. Tanning and lumbering form the principal employments of the people. Fremont Center (p. v.) contains 141 inhabitants, and Obernburgh (Fremont p. o.) 20 honses, Long Eddy (p. o.) is the Basket Station on the N. Y. & E. R. R. Hankins is a station on the same R. R. The first settlers were Joseph Green, at Long Eddy, John Hankins, at Hankins Depot, Benj. Misner, at Long Pond, and Zach. Ferdon, at Round Pond.

HIGHLAND—was formed from Lumberland, Dec. 17, 1853. It is an interior town, lying in the s, part of the co. It is named from the character of its surface, which consists of high ridges between Delaware and Mongaup Rivers, 600 to 1,000 feet above the canal at Barryville and 1,200 to 1,600 feet above tide. There are a great number of small lakes in town, the principal of which are Big Pond and Wells Pond on the N. line, Mud and Hagan Ponds in the E., York Pond in the s. w., Washington Pond, used as a canal feeder, and Blind, Little, and Montgomery Ponds near the center. The people are chiefly engaged in lumbering and the rudiments of farming. Barryville, (p. v.,) a canal village, contains 25 houses, and Lumberland (p. v.) 15. The first settler was John Barnes, who located at Narrow Falls.<sup>5</sup> Rev. Isaac Sargent (Cong.) was the first preacher, about 1797.6 The battle of Neversink, in the Revolution, took place within the limits of this town.7

LIBERTY—was formed from Lumberland, March 13, 1807, and Callicoon and a part of Thompson were taken off in 1842. It lies N. of the center of the co., upon the watershed between the Mongaup and Beaver Kil. Its surface is rough and broken. Walnut Hill, s. of Liberty, is 1,980, and Libertyville 1,467, feet above tide. The N. and W. parts of the town are still covered with forests. The principal sheets of water are Lillie Pond in the N., and Broadhead Pond near the center. The soil is good, but stony; and the people are chiefly engaged in lumbering, dairying, and tanning.8 Liberty (p. v.) contains 364 inhabitants, Parksville (p. v.) 40 houses, and Liberty Falls (p. v.) 25. Robertsonville and Stevensville are p. offices. The Liberty Normal Institute, at Liberty, is a flourishing academic institution. Stephen Russell (from Conn.) settled near Liberty, in 1793 or '94.10 Rev. Wm. Randall (Bap.) was the first preacher.11

LUMBERLAND—was formed from Mamakating, March 16, 1798, embracing all the co. w, of Mongaup River and s, of the present N, lines of Liberty and Callicoon. From it were erected Liberty in 1807, Bethel in 1809, and Highland and Tusteu iu 1853. Its surface is rugged and broken, and much of it is yet a wilderness. The name of the town still suggests the leading pursuit of the people. A large number of small lakes, with their outlets, form the principal waters. The principal of these lakes are Lebauon Pond in the N., Round, Sand, and Hogais Ponds in the W., and Long Pond in the center. Metauques Pond, in the E., lies about 2 mi. w. of the Mongaup, and 300 feet above it. On its outlet is a beautiful cascade. Mongaup and Pond Eddy are p. offices. There is but one church, (M. E.) The Delaware & Hudson Canal extends through the town along the course of the river. It is supposed that settlement was commenced before the Revolution; but the names of the first settlers are not preserved. In the survey of the Minisink Patent by Charles Webb in 1762, mention is made of "Reeve's Sawmill."2

MAMAKATING, said to have been named in honor of an Indian chief, was erected into a precinct by the General Assembly, Dec. 17, 1743, and embraced all the present territory of Sullivau co. and a portion of Orange. It continued as a precinct until organized as a town, March 7, 1788. It was reduced to its present limits by the erection of Deerpark (Orange co.) and Lumberland in 1798, Thompson in 1803, and a part of Forestburgh in 1837. It lies upon the highlands between Neversink and Shawangunk Creeks. Two parallel ridges, separated by the valley of Bashers Kil, extend through the town in a N. E. and S. W. direction. The eastern of these ridges is known as Shawangunk Mt. The declivities of this mountain are gentle upon the E., but abrupt and broken on the w. It attains an elevation of 1100 feet above the summit level of the canal, and about 1700 feet above tide. In the N. w. part of the town is a mountain of nearly equal elevation, known as Panther Hill. The principal streams are Shawangunk, Bashers, and Pine Kils, the last of which is the outlet of a small lake in the w. part of the town, known as Yankee Pond. The summit level of the Delaware & Hudson Caual, 17 mi. long and 525 feet above tide, is constructed through the valley of Bashers Kil. Masteu Pond, in the w. part, is used as a reservoir. About 2 mi. N. of Wurtzboro a veiu of lead was discovered several years since, and was worked to a considerable extent. After an abandonment of several years, preparatious are again being made to work it. The soil is a sand aud gravel loam, in some places intermixed with clay, and best adapted to pasturage. The eensus of 1855 shows that this town is second only to Thompson in the amount of dairy products. Bloomingburgh4 (p. v.) contains 365 inhabitants, and Whrtzboro<sup>5</sup> (p. v.) 491, Summitville (Mamakating p. o.) 20 houses, and Phillipsport (p.o.) 10; the three last named lie upon the canal. Burlingham (p.v.) contains 130 inhabitants. West Brookville (p. o.) is a haulet, and Homowack is a p. o. The early settlement of this town has already been noticed, but most of the details have been lost. On the approach of the Revolution the Indians became hostile, and several blockhouses were erected on the frontiers of Ulster co., one of which was at Wurtzboro. On account of the distressed condition of the people by reason of Iudian hostilities, they were favored by the supervisors in the apportionment of taxes. Many persons in those days accounted wealthy were reduced to poverty, and but little that could be destroyed remained on the return of peace. Gonzales, the pioneer settler, is said to have built the first sawmill, at Wurtzboro. In 1792 this town contained 182 taxable persons, of whom 34 were in the present towns of Lumberlaud, Tusten, and Highland. In 1794, Capt. David Dorrance removed from Windham, Conn., and purchased 1000 acres immediately s. of the site of Wnrtzboro. John Dorrance, with Elijah Perry, also from Conn., erected the first bark mill in Sullivau co. Rev. Mr. Freleigh was the first pastor of the Ref. Prot. D. Church, built iu 1793.8

This road opened a communication from the Hollow to the Delaware River, a distance of about 33 mi. A portion of it is still in use, but the greater part was taken up by the Newburgh still in use, but the greater part was taken up by the Newburgan & Cochector Turnpike. The village of Wurtzboro is built upon a tract of 1000 acres benght by Johannes Masten, who cleared the land and creeded a sawnill. Westbrookville (formerly Bashshusville") was settled about the same time, and the first house was built of stone and used as a fort to shelter the set. thers. Mr. Felton was a pioneer near Birlingham, and J. New-kirk at Bloomingburgh. The carly town records have been boxt. The first school was kept at Bloomingburgh in 1784, by Mr. Campbell, Wm. Harlow kept the first inn, 2 mi. 8, of Bloomingburgh; Wm. Wighton opened the first store, I mi, s. of the same place; and H. Newkirk built the first gristmill, on the Shawanis very hilly and to a considerable degree covered with forests. It is watered by the Neversink and its branches, and by the Lackawack, or w. branch of the Rondout, which flows to the Hudson. Denman Hill, 3300 feet, and Thunder Hill, 2500, above tide, are the principal elevations: the latter received its name from the fact that one of the early settlers was frightened away from the place by loud thunder. The soil is generally a gravelly loam, and best adapted to pasturage. The people are chiefly engaged in Inmbering, tanning, and dairying. Grahamsville (p. v.) contains 40 houses, Neversink Flats (Neversink p.o.) 35, and Claryville (p.v.) 30. The first settlement was commenced on the Lackawack, 2 mi. below Grahamsville, by the Hornbecks, Clines, Clearwaters, and Lowes, who obtained an Indian title in 1743, and were driven off during the Revolution. Mr. Larrabee, on Thunder Hill, and Benj. Gillett, John Hall, and Wm. Parks, on the 1000 acre lot, were the pioneer settlers after the war.3 The first church (Meth.) was located at Grahamsville; and the first preacher was Rev. Samuel M. Knapp.4

ROCKLAND—was formed from Neversink, March 29, I809. It lies upon the headwaters of the Pepacton, or E. branch of the Delaware, in the extreme N. part of the co. It is a rough, wild region, very hilly and mostly covered with forests. Its principal streams are Beaver Kil and Williwemack Creek. A chain of small lakes extends through the town, the principal of which are Upper, Mongaup, and Hodge Ponds in the E., Big and North Ponds in the S.E., Shaw Pond in the s., Burnt Hill and Jenkins Ponds in the w., and Sand, Mud, and Knapp Ponds in the center. Lumbering, farming, and tanning<sup>5</sup> are the principal pursuits of the people. Westfield Flats (Rockland p. o.) contains 28 houses, and Morsston (p. v.) about 12. Beaver Kill, Purvis, and Shin Creek are p. offices. Settlement was begun in 1789, by two families named Stewart and West, from Middletown, Conn.; they located near the middle of the Big Beaver Kil Flat.<sup>6</sup> Rev. Mr. Conkey (Meth.) was the first preacher.

THOMPSON—was formed from Mamakating, March 9, 1803, and named in honor of Wm. A. Thompson, first judge of the co. A part of Fallsburgh was taken off in 1826, and a part of Forestburgh in I837. It lies principally upon the highlands between Neversink and Mongaup Rivers, and is less hilly than most of the towns of the co. The hills rise 100 to 300 feet above Monticello. Neversink and Mongaup Rivers, with several small lakes and streams, constitute the waters of the town. Kiamesha, or "Clearwater," better known as Pleasant Pond, is a beautiful little lake near Monticello. The other principal ponds are Dutch in the N.E., Lords and Mnd in the E., Wolf in the s. E., and Sackets (named from Ananias Sacket, an early settler near it) in the s. w. The quiet scenery of these lakes is becoming appreciated by the lovers of nature and those seeking a retreat from the heat and dust of cities in summer. The soil is a reddish loam. The people are principally engaged in stock raising, lumbering, and tanning.8 Monticello, 9 (p. v., ) the principal village, was incorp. April 20, 1830. Pop. 629. It is beautifully situated upon a ridge of highlands I387 feet above tide, and is surrounded by hills. It is finely laid out, the main street being I mi. long and 8 rods wide, with flagged walks and ornamented with shade trees. It contains a courthouse, jail, co. clerk's and surrogate offices, and a banking house, all of stone; 3 churches, the Monticello Academy, 3 hotels, 10 stores, 3 printing offices, and an iron foundery. Thompsonville (p. v.) and Bridgeville (p. v.) each contain about a dozen houses. Gales and Glen Wild are p. offices, The first settlers were Wm. A. Thompson, John Knapp, and Timothy Childs, at Thompsonville. 10 Rev. John Boyd (Presb.) was the first preacher. 11

Benjamin Tusten, who was killed in the battle of Minisink, in 1779.¹ This town lies upon the N bank of Delaware River. The w. and s. parts are very hilly, and the E. portions belong to the plateau of rolling lands which comprises the greater part of Tusten, Highland, and Lumberland. The average height of this region is about 750 feet above the Delaware, or 1400 feet above tide. The principal streams are Ten Mile River and its branches: Half Moon and Mill Ponds in the E., and Mill, Davis, and Canfield Ponds in the center, are the principal sheets of water. The soil is a gravelly loam, and best adapted to pasturage. The people are generally engaged in farming and lumbering. Narrowsburgh, (p. v.,) containing about 35 houses, is the only village. It derives its name from the fact that the Delaware is here compressed by two points of rock into a deep, narrow channel. Over this is a wooden bridge, with a single span of 184 feet.² The place is known to lumbermen by the name of "Big Eddy." Below the narrows the river expands into a wide basin, which in time of a freshet exhibits a stirring scene. Delaware Bridge and Beaver Brook are p. offices. John Moore kept the first inn and store, and R. Moore built the first mill. The Baptist is the only church in town.

TIOGA COUNTY.

This county was formed from Montgomery, Feb. 16, 1791. A part of Chenango was taken off in 1798; Broome in 1806; a part of Tompkins in 1822; and Chemung in 1836. It lies near the center of the s. border of the State, centrally distant 135 mi. from Albany, and contains 542 sq. mi. Its surface is broken by a series of ridges extending northerly through the co. from the Penu, line and forming a northerly continuation of the Allegany Mts. The summits of these ridges have a nearly uniform elevation of 1,200 to 1,400 ft. above tide. The valley of the Susquehanna cuts them diagonally and breaks the continuity of the general system of highlands. Numerous lateral valleys extend in a general N. and s. direction from the river, separating the ridges and giving a great variety to These valleys vary in width from a few rods to a mile and sometimes more, and are generally bordered by steep declivities which rise 250 to 400 ft, above them. The summits of the hills are generally broad and rolling, and in some places are broken and rocky.

The rocks of this co. belong to the Cheming and Catskill groups. The former occupies all the surface N. of the river and forms the underlying rock of the hills s., and the latter crowns all the summits s. of the river. The sandstone of the Chemung group is quarried for flagging; and some of the red sandstone is sufficiently compact to make good building stone. Limestone, from which lime is manufactured, is found along the Penn. border. There are no other minerals of importance. The river valleys, and many of the hills adjoining, are covered deep with drift, consisting of sand, clay, and gravel. This deposit near Factoryville is 80 ft. thick, and a wide belt of it seems to extend northerly in an almost unbroken line from the latter place to Cayuga Lake. The principal streams are Susquehanna River, and Owego, Catatunk, Cayuta, Pipe, and Apalachin Creeks and their branches. These creeks have generally rapid currents, though few waterfalls; and they furnish all necessary water-power for local purposes. Their valleys are usually narrow and rocky in their upper courses, but toward the Susquehanna they expand into broad and beautiful level intervales. The valleys of the Susquehanna and several of its tributaries are celebrated for their beauty.

The soil along the valleys is a rich, deep, gravelly loam, with an occasional intermixture of clay and sand. The intervales along the Susquehanna are especially noted for their fertility. The uplands are gravelly and sandy and moderately fertile. Upon the summits the soil is hard and unproductive, and in many places the rocks are entirely bare. A considerable portion of the uplands is still covered with forests.

The prominent interest of the co. is agricultural, and its various branches are successfully pur sued. Winter and spring grains, corn, and the root crops, are mostly cultivated on the lowlands or river bottoms, and the uplands are devoted to stock and wool growing and dairying. Considerable commercial interest has grown up in connection with the rail roads, and manufactures have also been established to a limited extent.1

The county seat is located at Owego, upon the Susquehanna.2 The courthouse, a wooden structure, was erected about 40 years since, at a cost of $8,000. It is in a good state of preservation. The jail, jailor's house, and barn, all of brick, were built in 1851, at a cost of about $6,000. The jail contains 8 double cells. The clerk's office is a fireproof brick building, erected in 1858, at a cost of $2,200. The courthouse, clerk's office, jail, jailor's house, and barn occupy a square in the center of the village.

1 A large lumber and tanning business was formerly carried [ 8, 1812, the co. was divided into 2 Jury Districts, and the courts 8, 1812, the co, was divided into 2 Jury Districts, and the course were held at Elmira and Spencer. The East Jury District embraced the towns of Tioga, Spencer, Danby, Caroline, Cander, Berkshire, and Owego; and the West, the towns of Cayata, Catharines, Chemung, and Elmira. The courthouse at Spencer was burned in 1821, and by an act of 1822 the half-shire of the county was re-established, and Owego and Elmira became the county was re-standard, and Ovego and Lindon Phalf-shire towns. Upon the organization of Cheming on in 1836, Elmira became its county seat, and Ovego the county seat of Tioga. The first county officers were Abram Milter, Frest Judge; Wm. Strart, District Attorney; Thomas Nichelsen, County Clerk; James McMasters, Sheriff; and John Merseroan, Surrogate.

2 By the organic act of 1791, Tioga was formed a half-shire The organic act of 181, Toga was formed a narismire county. If provided that the countrs should be held alternately at "Chenango," in the town of Union, and at "Newtown Point," in the town of Cheming, the former now Binghanton, Broome co, and the latter Elmira, Cheming co, The half-shire was aboblied upon the organization of Broome co, in 1806; Feb. 17, 1810, Nathaniel Locke, Ansen Cary, and Samuel Campbell were appointed commissioners to locate the courthouse site, and Joshua Ferris, Isaac Swartwont, and Samuel Westbrook to superintend the erection of the building; and in 1811-12 the county seat was removed from Elmira to Spencer Village. June

The county poorhouse, a stone building, is located near Owego, upon a farm of 62 acres, which yields an annual income of $600. The average number of inmates is 62, and the whole number of rooms for their accommodation is 15. No school is connected with the establishment, and no means are provided for religious instruction.

The principal works of internal improvement are the N. Y. & E. R. R., extending along the river valley through Owego, Tioga, and Barton; and the Cayuga & Susquehanna R. R., extending from Owego northward through Tioga and Candor to Ithaca.\textsupers These roads furnish ample facilities for transportation, and bring the products of the county into close proximity to the Eastern markets.

Three weekly newspapers are now published in the co.2

The first settlement in this county was made upon the Susquehanna intervales, soon after the Revolution, by emigrants from the Wyoming Valley in Penn. These settlers originally came from Conn. and Mass., and left Wyoming in consequence of troubles growing out of the Indian hostilities and of controversies in regard to title. They located here before the Indian title to the lands was extinguished. The greater part of the present territory was comprised in the Boston Ten Towns. The title of this tract, comprising 230,400 acres between Chenango River and Owego Creek, was vested in the State of Mass. in 1786, and in 1787 it was sold to a company of 60 persons, mostly residents of that State. The greater part of the proprietors immediately took possession of these lands; and thus it happened that the county was filled up with a New England population while the fertile region of Western New York was yet an unbroken wilderness.

BARTON—was formed from Tioga, March 23, 1824. It lies w. of the Susquehanna, in the s. w. corner of the co. Its surface is generally hilly. A small portion of level land lies along the s. border. The highlands on the w. rise abruptly from the valley of Cayuta Creek, and are divided into two ridges by the valley of Ellis Creek. Their summits are broad and rolling and generally covered with forests. The highest points are 400 to 600 ft. above the river. The soil is a rich alluvium in the valleys and a sandy or gravelly loam upon the hills. A snlphur spring is found on Ellis Creek, near the center of the town. Waverly, (p. v.,) situated upon the Eric R. R., in the s. w. part of the town, was incorp. in 1854. It contains the Waverly Academy, 5 churches, and several manufactories. Pop. I,067. Factoryville, (p.v.,) on Cayuta Creek, I mi. E. of Waverly, contains 180 inhabitants; and Barton, (p. v.,) near the s. E. corner, on the Susquehanna, 30 dwellings. North Barton is a p. o. Halsey Valley (p. o.) is a hamlet in the N. E. part, on the line of Tioga. The first settlement was begun by Ebenezer Ellis and Stephen Mills, who located in this district in the year 1791.3 There are 10 churches in town.4

BERKSHIRE—was formed from Tioga, Feb. 12, 1808. Newark was taken off in 1823, and Richford in 1831. It lies upon the E. border of the co., N. of the center. Its surface is mostly a hilly and broken upland, with a mean elevation of 1,200 to 1,400 ft. above tide. A high hill, with steep declivities, lies E. of the center of the town. The streams are the East and West Branches of Owego Creek and their tributaries. The soil in the valleys is a sandy and gravelly loam, and upon the hills it is a tough clay and hardpan. Berkshire (p. v.) contains 3 churches and 34 dwellings. East Berkshire and Wilson Creek are p. offices. The pioneer settlers of the town were Daniel Ball and Isaac Brown, who came in 1791.5 Rev. Seth Williston conducted the first religious services in town.6

CANDOR—was formed from Spencer, Feb. 22, 1811. It is a large town, extending from the center to the N. border of the co. Its surface consists of high, broad, rolling uplands, separated into ridges by the narrow valleys of streams flowing in a southerly direction. Their declivities are generally abrupt, and their summits are mostly covered with forests. Catatunk Creek flows through the center of the town, and the West Branch of Owego Creek forms the E. boundary. The waters of Catatunk Creek enter the town near the center of its w. border and flow s. E., its valley completely dividing the western ridge into two parts. The soil is a gravelly loam, fertile in the valleys and moderately so upon the hills. The settlements are mostly confined to the valleys. Candor (p. v.) is situated on Catatunk Creek, near the center of the town. It is a station on the C. & S. R. R., with 3 churches, a tannery, woolen factory, flouring mill, a sawmill, and about 70 dwellings. Candor Center, ½ mi. w. of Candor, contains 1 church, a flouring mill, 2 sawmills, and 20 dwellings. Willseyville, (p. v.,) a station on the C. & S. R. R., in the n. w. part of the town, contains 20 dwellings. South Candor, on Catatunk Creek, near the s. horder of the town, contains a church and about 20 dwellings. Weltonville (p. o.) is a hamlet at the mouth of Polittle Creek. East Candor is a p. o. The first settlers were Thos. Hollister, Job Judd, C. Luddington, and Isaac Judd, from Conn., who came into town in 1793. Rev. Daniel Loring was the first preacher. The census reports 10 churches.2

NEWARK—was formed from Berkshire, as "Westville," April 12, 1823. Its name was changed March 24, 1824. It lies upon the center of the E. border of the co. Its surface is mostly a hilly, upland region, with a mean elevation of about 1,200 ft. above tide. Its streams are the West Branch of Owego Creek, forming the w. boundary, and the East Branch, flowing s. w. through near the center of the town. The soil in the valleys is a fine, gravelly loam, but upon the hills it is an unproductive hardpan. The greater part of the uplands are yet unsettled. Newark Valley, (p. v.,) located in the valley of East Owego Creek, contains 2 churches, mills, an extensive tannery, and 75 dwellings. Ketchunville, (p. v.,) in the N. E. corner of the town, 7 mi. N. E. of Newark Valley, contains a church, sawmill, and 26 dwellings. West Newark is a p.o. Jenksville, in the N. w., is a p.o. Settlement was commenced in 1791, by emigrants from Berkshire co., Mass.<sup>3</sup> First religious association (Cong.) was formed in 1798, by Rev. Seth Williston, a missionary from Conn.; Rev. Jeremiah Osborn was the first settled preacher, in 1803.<sup>4</sup>

NICHOLS—was formed from Tioga, March 23, 1824. It lies upon the s. bank of the Susquehanna, near the center of the s. boundary of the co. Its surface is mostly upland, excepting the broad valley of the Susquehanna, and broken by the narrow valleys of small streams. The summits of the hills are broad and 300 to 500 ft. above the river. Many of them are still covered with forests. The soil in the valleys is a gravelly loam and very productive; upon the hills it is a moderately fertile, gravelly and clayey loam, underlaid by red sandstone. Nichols, (p. o.,) Hoopers Valley, (p. o.,) and Caufields Corners (p. o.) are hamlets upon the Susquehanna. The first settlement was made by Ebenezer Ellis, Pelatiah Pierce, Stephen Mills, and James Cole, in 1787. There are 2 churches in town; M. E. and Union.<sup>5</sup>

OWEGO<sup>6</sup>—was organized Feb. 16, 1791. Spencer was taken off in 1806. It is a large town, occupying the s. e. corner of the co. Its surface is mostly upland, separated into two distinct parts by Susquehanna River and broken by the narrow valleys of small creeks. The summits of the ridges are broad and rolling, and 300 to 500 ft. above the river. The intervale along the river in some places is an unbroken flat more than a mile in width. Owego Creek, flowing through a broad and beautiful valley, forms the w. boundary of the town n. of the Susquehanna. The other streams are Nanticoke Creek, from the n., and Apalachin Creek, from the s., and a great number of smaller brooks and creeks. The declivities bordering upon these streams are generally steep. The soil is principally a gravelly loam. A considerable portion of the hilly regions is yet covered with forests. Manufactures, and commerce to a limited extent, engage the attention of the people. Owego, (p. v.,) the co. seat, was incorp. April 4, 1827. It is finely situated upon the Susquehanna, near the mouth of Owego Creek. It is the commercial center of a large agricultural and lumbering district; and since its first settlement it has been one of the most important villages in the southern tier of counties.2 It contains the Owego Academy, a female seminary, 7 chnrches, 2 banks, 2 newspaper offices, and several manufacturing establishments.3 A bridge 80 rods in length here crosses the Susquehanna. Pop. 3,041. Apalachin, (p. v.,) on the s. bank of the Susquehanna, 8 mi. above Owego, contains 1 church and 200 inhabitants. Campville, (p. v.,) on the n. bank of the river, 7 mi. above Owego, contains 1 church and 20 dwellings. It is a station on the Erie R. R. Flemingville (p.o.) is a hamlet in the N. w. part of the town, on Owego Creek; South Owego is a p.o. near the Pennsylvania line. Amos Draper, an Indian agent and trader, from the Wyoming Valley, erected the first house in town, at Owego Village, in 1786, and moved in his family in 1787.4 The first religious services were conducted by Rev. Seth Williston. The first religious association (Presb.) was formed in 1810, and a church was organized in 1817; Rev. Horatio I. Lombard was the first settled minister, in 1818. churches in town.5

In 1793 Jonathan Platt and his son Jonathan, Col. Richard Sackett, Lewis Brown, and Miles Forman.—all from Westchester co.,—settled in the valley. Major John Smyth and his sons John, Gilbert, and Nathan, from Monroe co., Penn., Benjamin Lounsbury, Zaba Evans, Jonathan Hunt, Richard Sarles, Asahel Prichard, Jonathan Pettis, Joseph and John Annibah, Joseph Morey, and David Briggs, were also among the pioneer settlers. The lirst birth was that of Daniel Pierce, in 1787.

RICHFORD—was formed from Berkshire, as "Arlington," April 18, 1831. Its name was changed April 9, 1832. It is the N.E. corner town in the co. Its snrface is mostly upland, broken by a few narrow valleys. It contains the highest land in the co., estimated to be 1,400 to 1,600 ft. above tide. Its streams are the head branches of Owego Creek. Its soil is a moderately fertile, gravelly leam. About one-third of the surface is yet covered with forests. Leather and lumber are manufactured to some extent. Richford, (p. v.,) s. of the center of the town, contains a church and about 60 dwellings. West Richford is a p. o. The first settlements, made at a later period than those in Berkshire, from which the town was taken, were since the commencement of the present century; but the exact date could not be ascertained. There is a Presb. church in town.

SPENCER—was formed from Owego, Feb. 28, I806. Candor, Caroline, Danby, and Newfield (the last three now in Tompkins co.) were taken off Feb. 22, 1811, and Cayuta, March 20, 1824. It is the n.w. coruer town of the co. Its surface is an upland, broken by the valleys of small streams. The N. w. portion forms the watershed between Susquebanna River and Cayuga Lake. The ridges have a general N. and s. direction. Their declivities are generally steep and their summits broad and broken. Catatunk Creek, flowing E., breaks through these ridges at nearly right angles, forming a deep and narrow valley. The soil in the valleys is a gravelly loam, and upon the hills it is a hard, shaly leam. Spencer, (p. v., ) on Catatunk Creek, w. of the center of the town, contains 3 churches, 2 tanneries, a valuable mineral spring and 75 dwellings. The first settlement was commenced in 1795, by Benj. Drake and Joseph and John Barker.<sup>3</sup> The first religious meeting was held by P. Spaulding, at his own house; and the first religious association (Bap.) was formed by Elder David Jayne.9

TIOGA—was formed from Union, (Broome co.,) March 14, 1800. Berkshire was taken off in 1808, a part of Union in 1810, and Barton and Nichols in 1824. It lies on the Susquehanna, s. w. of the center of the co. Its surface is principally upland, terminating in bluffs along the river intervale. The streams are Catatank and Pipe Creeks and numerous smaller creeks and brooks.

TOMPKINS COUNTY.

This county was formed from Cayuga and Seneca, April 17, 1817. Three towns were annexed from Tioga, March 22, 1822, and a part of Schnyler co. was taken off in 1854. It lies around the head of Cayuga Lake, s. w. of the center of the State, is centrally distant 141 mi. from Albany, and contains 506 sq. mi. Its surface consists principally of an upland, broken by a series of ridges extending x. and s. The watershed between Caynga Lake and Tionghnioga River occupies the E. horder of the co., and that between the same lake and Snsquehanna River the s. border. The deep valley of Cayuga Lake, 700 ft. below the summits of the ridges, separates the N. portions of the co. into two distinct parts. The E. portion, declining toward the n., gradually loses its hilly character and spreads out into the beautifully rolling lands so common in Central N.Y. West of the lake the land does not lessen in height within the limits of the co.; but the rough, broken hills change into smooth ridges, with long, gradual slopes.

The deep valley of Cayuga Lake affords a fine opportunity to examine the geological structure of this region. Upon the shore in the extreme N. part are found the Hamilton shales, the lowest rock in the co. Next above them on the shore appear the Tully limestone, Genesee slate, and Portage or Ithaca shales and sandstones.1 The summits of all the hills are formed of the rocks belonging to the Chemung group, usually covered deep with drift deposits. The streams, in their course from the table lands to the lake, have worn deep channels into the rocks, and waterfalls which once were, probably, at the face of the bluffs, have receded one to two miles, forming below deep, rocky chasms bordered by perpendicular walls. As the rocks are composed of strata of different degrees of hardness, the water has worn them irregularly,—the soft and yielding shales generally forming a declining surface, while the hard and compact limestone retains its perpendicular forms.2

The streams are Salmon, Fall, Cascadilla, Six Mile, and Taughanick Creeks and Cayuga Inlet and their branches, flowing into the lake, and several branches of Owego Creek and other small streams, flowing s. The cascades upon these streams form one of the most peculiar and interesting features of the landscape.

The soil in the N. part is generally a gravelly or elayey loam, formed by the drift deposits; and that in the s. is a gravelly or slaty loam, derived from disintegration. It is all best adapted to grazing. In the N. part the people are generally engaged in grain raising, wheat forming the staple production. In the s. towns the principal branches of agriculture pursued are stock raising and dairying. Considerable manufacturing is carried on at Ithaca and other places.

The co. seat is located at the village of Ithaca. The courthouse is a brick edifice, built upon a fine lot near the center of the village.3 The jail, contiguous to the courthouse, is a well built stone edifice, with ample accommodations for the health of the prisoners. The cells are clean and well ventilated. The co. clerk's office is a fireproof building, fronting upon Tioga St. The poorhouse is situated upon a farm of 100 acres in Ulysses, 6 mi. n. w. of Ithaca. The average number of inmates is 53, and the revenue derived from the farm is about $1,500. No school is provided for the children, and they are not admitted to the public schools. The house is pleasantly situated, and will compare favorably with other poor-houses throughout the State.

The Cayuga & Snsquehanna R. R. extends from Ithaca to Owego, connecting with the Erie R. R. at the latter place. Cayuga Lake is navigable and connects with the Eric Canal at Montezuma. A daily line of steamers plies between Ithaca and Cayuga Bridge, on the N.Y.C.R.R.,

period. the description of the group 300 ft.

2 The Taughanick Falls, below Trumansburgh, have receded the falls, then a mile from the lake. "In its passage, 2 The Taughanick Falls, below Trumansburgh, have receded | was convey semething more than a mile from the lake. "In its passage, the stream first produced a series of falls and rapids, but finally receded so as to form but a single fall. This is caused by the appointed nigher strata being so much harder than those below that a first table is formed of these, while those below are nodermained." About I mi. N of these falls is a cascade, where, from | Surrogate.

the absence of a resisting stratum at the surface, the rock has been worn down in a continuous slope.—Gool. IV. Dist., p. 378, <sup>3</sup> The act of incorporation fixed the conrthouse at Ithaca, the exact locality to be designated by the Surveyor General, or, if he neglected to do it, by the judges of the co, court. Unless a site was conveyed to the Supervisors and $7,000 secured to be paid, the co. was to be reannexed to the cos from whence it was taken. Luther Gere, Wm. R. Collius, and Daniel Bates were appointed to superintend the erection of the co. buildings. The first co. officers were Oliver C. Comstock, Frst Judge; Archer Green, Clerk; Heury Bloom, Sheriff; and Andrew D. W. Bruyn, touching at all the landings on the lake. The railroad and eanal and lake constitute one of the principal routes for supplying the West with the anthracite coal of E. Penn.

Four weekly newspapers are now published in the co.1

The three s. towns of this co. were included in the Watkins and Flint's Pnrchase, and the remainder in the Military Tract. A public road was built from Oxford, on Chenango River, directly through to Ithaca, by Joseph Chaplin, in 1791-92-93, and this became the great highway for immigration in the s. part of the State for many years. As a consequence, the co. immediately bordering upon the road was rapidly settled. The first immigrants were mostly from New England. At the place where Ithaca now stands were found cleared fields which had previously been cultivated by the Indians; and these lands were among the first occupied in the co. The next settlements were made in Ulysses, on the w. bank of the lake, and along Chaplin's road in Dryden. The opening of the rich lands of the Genesee country to settlers diverted immigration from this region, and the co. for many years did not increase in population with the same rapidity as the regions further w. The growth of the co., however, has been gradual and continuous; and now in every element of real prosperity it is fully on an average with the other cos. in the State.

CAROLINE—was formed from Spencer, (Tioga co.,) Feb. 22, 1811, and was transferred to this co. March 22, I822. A part was annexed to Danby in 1839. It is the s. E. corner town of the co. Its surface is an upland, broken by a series of ridges extending N. w. and s. E. 500 to 700 ft. above the valleys and 1,500 to 1,700 ft. above tide. The summits of the hills are usually rounded and rolling and their declivities steep. The streams are Owego Creek, forming the E. boundary, and Six Mile Creek and their branches. These streams flow in deep, narrow valleys bordered by steep hillsides. The soil is generally a gravelly loam, and is well adapted to grazing. Caroline Center (p. v.) contains 2 churches and 14 houses; Motts Corners, (p. v.,) on Six Mile Creek, in the N. w. corner of the town, I church, several manufacturing establishments,2 and 40 houses, Speedsville, (p. v.,) upon Boyer Creek, in the s. E. corner, contains 3 churches and 30 houses; and Slaterville, (p. v.,) near the N. border, I church and 30 houses. Caroline Depot (p. o.) is a station on the C. & S. R. R. Caroline (p. o.) is a hamlet in the N. E. corner of the town. Rawson Hollow, on the E. line, is a p. o. The first settlement was begun by Capt.

2 Two flouring mills, two sawmills, a tannery, and woolen factory. One mile below the village is the extensive gun harrel manufactory of J. & B. Losey, and, with one exception, the only one in the State. This establishment was started 50 years ago, by Abiel Losey, father of the present proprietors, at Otsego; thence it was removed to Fall Creek, near Ithaca; thence to Owegon; and thangs to its present location.

David Rich, who came from Vt. in 1795 and located near Willow Bridge; Widow Earsley, with five sons and five daughters, from N. J., came in the next year; and for several years these were the only families in town. The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed at an early period; the first pastor was Rev. Garrit Mandeville. The census reports 10 churches in town.2

DANBY—was formed from Spencer, (Tioga co.,) Feb. 22, 1811, and was transferred to this eo. March 22, 1822. Part of Caroline was annexed April 29, 1839, and a part was annexed to Caroline in 1856. It lies near the center of the s. border of the co. Its surface is broken by range of hills extending N, and s. 300 to 400 ft, above the valleys. Their summits are rounded and their declivities generally steep. The valleys are mere ravines. The principal streams are Cayuga Inlet, flowing N., and numerous small streams, the latter being tributaries either to this or to Owego Creek. The soil is a mixed gravelly and shaly loam, with occasional patches of clay, and is well adapted to grazing. Danby, (p. v.,) in the N. part, contains 3 churches and 50 houses; Beers Settlement, (South Danby p.o.,) near the center, about a dozen houses. West Danby is a p. o., near the w. border. The first settlers were J. D. Yaple, Dr. Lewis Beers, Jabez Beers, and Joseph Judson, who located at Beers Settlement in 1797.3 The first church (Cong.) was formed in 1807; Rev. Daniel Loring was the first pastor. There are 8 churches in town.4

DRYDEN5—was first erected as a separate town on Feb. 22, 1803. It is a large town, occupying the central portion of the E. border of the co. The surface of the N. half is rolling or moderately hilly, and that of the s. half hilly and broken. The E. border forms the watershed between Tioughnioga River and Cayuga Lake. The highest ridge, in the s. E. part, is 1,700 to 1,800 ft. above tide. The principal stream is Fall Creek, flowing s.w. through near the center of the town, on its course affording several millsites. Several small streams, tributaries to Owego Creek, take their rise in the s. part. Dryden Lake is a small sheet of water 1 mi. long and about ½ mi. wide, lying in an elevated valley near the E. border and 1,500 ft. above tide. A mineral spring, strongly impregnated with sulphur, magnesia, and iron, is situated one mi. w. of Dryden Village, and has a local notoriety for medicinal virtues. In the N. E. part are two swamps, each covering an area of several hundred acres. Dryden, (p. v.,) on the s. branch of Fall Creek, in the E. part of the town, is a flourishing inland village. It contains 2 churches, a large gristmill, and several manufacturing establishments. Pop. 522. Etna, (p. v.,) on Fall Creek, near the center, contains 2 churches, a grist and saw mill, an iron foundery, and machine shop. Pop. 230. West Dryden, (p. v.,) in the n. w. part, contains 93 inhabitants; Varna, (p. v.,) on Fall Creek, near the w. border, 170 inhabitants; Malloryville, Freeville, and California are hamlets. The first settlement was commenced in 1797, by Amos Sweet, on the present site of Dryden Village. Joseph Chaplin built a road from Oxford, Chenango eo., to Ithaca, passing through this town, in 1791-92-93. There are 9 churches in town.

ENFIELD was formed from Ulysses, March 16, 1821. It lies upon the center of the w. border of the co. Its surface is rolling, and it has a mean elevation of 500 to 700 ft. above Cayuga Lake. The principal streams are Ten Mile Creek and the s. branch of Taughanick Creek. Upon the former, in the s. E. part of the town, is one of the finest of the beautiful cascades so common in this co. It is in a deep gorge, and has a total fall of 230 ft. The soil is principally a gravelly loam. Enfield Center (p. v.) contains 2 churches and about 40 dwellings; Enfield (p. v.) 25 dwellings. Enfield Falls is a hamlet. Among the first settlers were — Geltner, John Whitlock, Jas. Rumsey, Lewis Owen, and Isaac and John Beech. There are 5 churches in town. 10

<sup>1</sup> Among other early settlers were T. Tracy, S. Yates, A. Boyer, and M. Reed, from Mass.; Joseph Chambers, Richard Bush, and Hartmore Earnest, from Ulster co., in 1798; Levi Slater, (formerly of Slaterville,) Chas, and John Mulks, John Cantine, (first settler at Motts Corners,) and James Bishop, all from Ulster, and John Rounceville, from Mass. in 1801. The first child born was larriet Rounceville. The first school was taught by John Robinson. Richard Bush kept the first inn. Isaac Miller the first store, and Gen. Cantine built the first gristmill, in 1800. 24 M. E., Prot. E., Cong., Bap., Ref. Prot. D., F. W. Bap., and GROTON<sup>1</sup>—was formed from Locke, (Cayuga co.,) as "Division," April 7, 1817, and its name was changed March 13, 1818. It is the N.E. corner town in the co. Its surface is rolling or moderately hilly. From the valleys the land rises by long and gradual slopes to a height of 100 to 300 ft. The highest point in town is about 1,500 ft. above tide. The principal streams are Owasco Inlet and Fall Creek. Bear Swamp, in the w. part, contains an area of several hundred acres. The soil is a fine quality of gravelly loam, underlaid by slate. Groton, (p. v.,) on Owasco Inlet, near the center of the town, contains 3 churches, the Groton Academy, and several manufacturing establishments.<sup>2</sup> Pop. 587. McLean, (p. v.,) on Fall Creek, in the s. E., contains 5 churches, several factories, and 40 honses. Pernville, (p. v.,) near the s. border, contains 2 churches, a saw and grist mill, pail factory, and 30 houses. Groton City, (p. v.,) in the N. E. corner, and West Groton, (p.v.,) in the N. w., contain about 11 houses each. Bensons Corners is a hamlet, in the s. w. corner. Among the first settlers were Saml. Hogg, at West Groton; lehabod Brown, John Guthrie, and —— Perrin, at Groton; and J. Williams, J. Houghtaling, and W. S. Clark, at East Groton. The census reports 11 churches.4

ITHACA5—was formed from Ulysses, March 16, 1821. It is the central town in the co., lying at the head of Cayuga Lake. A tract of land 2 mi. long and 1½ broad, low and nearly level, extends s. from the lake shore; and from this the valley of Cayuga Inlet opens to the s.w. and that of Six Mile Creek to the s. E. Ridges 400 to 700 ft. high, with steep declivities, separate these valleys and surround the low land and the head of the lake. From the summits the surface spreads out into a rolling upland. A marsh ½ mi. wide borders immediately on the lake. The streams are Fall, Cascadilla, Six Mile, Buttermilk, and Ten Mile Creeks, and Cayuga Inlet. In their course from the uplands each of these streams plunges down the wall-like precipices which surround the lake, forming series of cascades which for beauty and variety are scarcely equaled elsewhere. The soil is a fertile, gravelly loam upon the uplands, and a deep, rich alluvium in the valleys. Ithaca, (p.v.,) 12 mi. s. of the head of Cayuga Lake, is the co. seat, and the commercial center of the co. It is beautifully situated upon a fine alluvial plain, bordered on 3 sides by lofty hills, and on the fourth by the lake, with which it is connected by a navigable inlet. It contains the Ithaca Academy, 19 churches, 2 banks, 4 printing effices, and a large number of manufacturing establishments. The commercial interests of the place are extensive and important. A daily line of steamboats on the lake running between this place and Cayuga Bridge, in connection with the C. & S. R. R., serves to connect the Erie R. R. on the s. with the N. Y. Central on the N. 10 The lake is also a link in the great chain of the internal water navigation of the State, and upon it a large amount of canal commerce, centering at Ithaca, is carried on. The transhipment of Scranton and Lackawanna coal brought by the C. & S. R. R. forms an important and constantly growing branch of business. A large proportion of the anthracite coal for the Northern and Western markets is supplied through this avenue.11 The public schools of the village are graded, and are in a flourishing condition. The annual attendance is about 1,200.12 The village was incorp. April 2, 1821. Pop. 4,908. The first settlement of the town was made by Jacob Yaple, Isaac

10 The Ithaca & Owego R. R.—the second R. R. chartered in the State—was incorp, in 1828, and opened in the spring of 1834. It was 29 mi, long, and had 2 inclined planes ascending from Ithaca. The first was 1.733 ft. long, with 405 ft. rise, and the second 2.225 ft. long, with a rise of 1 ft, in 21. The total elevation in 8 mi. was 602 ft.—which was 602 ft. above its 8, terminus at Ithaca. Horse-power was at first used throughout the cutire length of the road. In the first 6 months it transported 12,000 tons of treight and 3,300 passeng rs. The State having a lien upon the road, the Comptroller sold it at anction on the 20th of May, 1842, for $4.500, to Archibald Viclut; re and others. For $13,500 it was put in operation, under the name of the Cayung & Susquehama R. R., The inclined plane was subsequently changed to a circuitous grade road, and horses were superscaled by becometives. This road is now leased to the Del-ware. Lackawanna & Western R. 11 During the past few years the coal trade has averaged 90,000 tons per annum. This trade will probably largely increase with the increased facilities for moving the coal forward.

<sup>12</sup> A Lancasterian school was early established here, and was continued to within a few years, when it was superseded by the Dumond, and Peter Hinepaw, who located on the present site of Ithaca Village in 1789. The land that they occupied had previously been partially cultivated by the Indians. The first church (Presb.) was organized in 1804-05, with seven members.

LANSING—was formed from Genoa, (Cayuga co.,) April 7, 1817. It lies upon the E. bank of Cayuga Lake, in the N. part of the co. The surface is principally a rolling upland, 500 ft. above the lake, bordered by steep declivities. Salmon Creek, the principal stream, flows s. through near the center of the town. Its valley is narrow and bordered by steep hillsides. Gulf, Townly, and Hedden Creeks are its principal tributaries. The soil is generally a fertile, gravelly loam. Ludlowville, (p. v.,) on Salmon Creek, about 1 mi. from its mouth, contains 2 churches, several factories,2 and about 50 dwellings. Lansingville, (p.v.,) on the ridge w. of Salmon Creek, in the N. part of the town, contains 1 church and 25 dwellings. North Lansing, (p. o.,) in the N. E. corner, Lake Ridge, (p. o.,) on the bluff above the lake, in the N. W. corner, and Libertyville (South Lansing p. o.) are hamlets of about a dozen houses each. East Lansing and Forest City are p. offices. Forest City Water Cure is finely situated on the bluff overlooking the lake, in the s. part of the town. The first settlement was begun in 1769, by emigrants from N. J.3 The census reports 7 churches in town.4

NEWFIELD—was formed from Spencer, (Tioga co.,) as "Cayuta," Feb. 22, 1811. Its name was changed March 29, 1822, and a part was annexed to Catharines (Schuyler co.) in 1853. It is the s. w. corner town in the co. The surface is high and hilly, the ridges being 400 to 600 ft. above the valleys and 1,500 to 1,700 ft. above tide. The streams are Cayuga Iulet and Ten Mile Creek and their branches. The valleys of these streams are usually narrow and bordered by steep hillsides. A portion of the w. part of the town is yet unenltivated. The soil is a shaly and clayey loam, best adapted to grazing. Newfield, (p. v., ) in the N. E. part of the town, contains 3 churches, 2 flouring mills, 2 carriage shops, a woolen factory, an oileloth factory, and about 80 dwellings. Trumbull Corners, (p. v.,) on the n. border, contains 1 church and 20 dwellings. Poncy Hollow (p. o.) is a hamlet in the s. w. part. The first settler was Jas. Thomas, who located at Poney Hollow. The census reports 3 churches in town.

ULYSSES—was formed March 5, 1799. Dryden was taken off in 1803, and Ithaca and Eufield in 1821. It lies upon the w. bank of Cayuga Lake, on the N. border of the eo. A range of bluffs 600 ft, high, with steep declivities, borders upon the lake; and from their summits the surface spreads out in an undulating upland. The only considerable stream is Taughanick (Ti-kaw-nik) Creek, which crosses the town from the w. In its descent from the plateau to the lake this stream forms a series of eascades, the principal of which is known as Taughanick Falls. These falls have receded about I mi. from the shore of the lake, and have worn a deep gorge in the yielding shales, with banks 380 ft. high. The stream now falls, in an unbroken sheet, over a limestone terrace 210 ft. in height. About  $\frac{1}{3}$  mi. farther up the gorge is another fall, of 40 ft. The soil is a fine quality of gravelly loam. Trumansburgh, (p. v.,) near the n. border of the town, is the second village in the co. in amount of business and population. It contains 4 churches, the Trumansburgh Academy, and several manufacturing establishments.<sup>8</sup> Pop. 1,052. Jacksonville, (p. v.,) near the center of the town, contains 1 church and 50 houses. Waterburgh, near the w. border, contains 1 church, mills, and 40 dwellings. Halseyville<sup>9</sup> is a hamlet. The first settlements were commenced by Samuel Weyburn, at the mouth of Taughanick Creek, and hy Abner and Philip Tremaine, on the site of Trumansburgh, in 1792.10 The first church (Presb.) was formed by Jedediah Chapman, in 1803. There are now 6 churches in town. 11

&lt;sup>1</sup> Among the other early settlers were families named McDowel, travenport, Bloom, King, Patchin, Star, Conrad, Markle, Sayers, and Brink. The first child born was a daughter of John Dumond, Sept. 1789. The first death was that of Rachel Allen. in 1790. ## ULSTER COUNTY.

This county was formed Nov. I, 1683,1 and included the country between the Hudson and the Delaware, bounded N. and s. by due E. aud w. lines passing through the mouths of Sawyers and Murderers Creeks. A part of Delaware was taken off in 1797, a part of Greene in 1800, and Sullivan in 1809. A portion was annexed to Orange in 1798, and the town of Catskill was annexed from Albany co. the same year. It lies on the w. bank of the Hudson, centrally distant 68 mi. from Albany, and contains 1,204 sq. mi. Its surface is mostly a hilly and mountainous upland. The Catskill Mts. occupy the n. w. part; and the Shawangunk Mts. extend N. E. from the s. w. cornor nearly through the co. The mountain region consists of irregular ridges and isolated peaks with rocky sides and summits too steep and rough for cultivation. The summits are 1,500 to 2,000 ft. above the Hndson. The remaining parts of the co. are generally broken and hilly. Esopus Creek flows in a tortuous course through the N. part and discharges its waters into the Hudson. It receives Platte Kil from the N. Rondout Creek enters the s. w. corner of the co. and flows N. E. aloug the w. declivity of the Shawangunk Mts. and enters the Hudson at Rondout. It receives as tributaries Sandburgh Creek in the s. w. part of the co., and Walkill near its mouth. The latter stream flows aloug the E. foot of the Shawanguuk Mts. The remaining streams are small brooks and creeks.

The rocks of the co. are composed of the Portage and Chemung shales, in the E. part, and the Shawangunk grit or Oneida conglomerate, in the w. part. Drift deposits are found in nearly every part. Lead ore is found to some extent among the Shawangunk Mts.<sup>2</sup>

At an early period the Esopus grit was largely quarried and manufactured into millstones.<sup>3</sup> Water-limestone of an excellent quality is found and largely quarried.<sup>4</sup> The Ulster co. Cement has an excellent reputation throughout the United States, and is used in immense quantities on fortifications and other Government works requiring solidity. It was used on Croton, Brooklyn, Cochituate, Albany, Washington, and other water-works. It finds a ready market in every port on the seaboard from New Brunswick to Texas. It has been exported to California and South America, and is largely used in aud around New York, Boston, and Philadelphia, upon public and private buildings. The cement rocks are quarried usually on the hillsides, and these openings often extend in galleries under the overlying rock. The rock outcrops in a belt running N. E. and s. w., first appearing on the Iludson a few miles N. of Kingston Point, and extending 20 to 25 mi. to the town of Rochester, but is lost from view at the surface in several places between these points. In the section occupied by the Portage group of rocks are found extensive outcrops of thiu bedded sandstone, yielding a fine quality of flagging, which is largely quarried and exported.<sup>5</sup> The soil is generally a good quality of sandy and gravelly loam, in some places intermixed with clay. Most of the valleys are covered with a deep, rich alluvium,

Most of the land is best adapted to grazing. Dairying is extensively pursued, and spring grain

1 In its charter it is said to "contain the towns of Kingston, Hurley, and Marbletown, Foxhall, and the New Paltz, and all villages, neighborhoods, and Christian habitations on the w. side of the Hudson's River, from the Murderers Greek, uear the High-lands, to the Sawyers Creek." It was named from the Irish title of the Duke of York. The bounds between this and Albany co-wers not fully settled at the Revolution. An act was passed in 1774, but nothing was done under it toward a settlement, and in 17.4, but nothing was done under it toward a settlement, and it was repended in 1785. An act was also passed in 1774 to run and mark the boundary of this and Orange counties from E. of the Shrwanginik Mis. to the Delaware.

2 A mine was opened near Ellenville more than 40 years ago. It was never worked to profit, and is now abandoned. The Ulster Mine, near Sullivan co. line, was opened in 1837. It is 600 or 700 feet above the valley. The galena in these mines is associated with blende, iron and copper pyrites, calcite, and quartz. There are indications and vague traditions that these mines were worked at a much earlier period and yielded profits beyond computation.

8 In Smith's Instory, written in 1732, this co. is said to be noted for fine flour, beer, and a good breed of draft horses. The millstones—then quarried about 10 mi. from the river—had acquired celebrity, and were said to far exceed those from Colen, in Europe, formerly imported at £80 the pair, while Esopus stones did not cost a fourth part of that sum. Small millstones for family use are still made for the Southern market; but the business has lost much of its former importance. A finer quality of these grits, when calcined and crushed, furnishes the silex used in the glass manufacture at Ellenville.

4 Water-limestone was accidentally discovered on the line of the Erie Canal, by Canvass White, an engineer, in 1818. In 1820 he obtained a patent, and subsequently obtained judgment against one or more of the contractors for using it. The first waterlime or cement made in Ulster co. was about the time the Delaware & Hudson Canal was commenced. Its manufacture has now become a leading and profitable pursuit, employing about $1.000,000 of capital and 1,000 meo. In March, 1859, there were 15 establishments in the co., owned by individuals and com-paules.

The stone is of a bluish gray color and slaty texture, and from may be split iuto slabs of almost any manageable size and from I to 4 inches in thickness. The rock is traversed by Joints or seams, that divide very smoothly and greatly facilitate the labor of quarrying. It is brought down to the river and shipped in immense quantities at every lauding in the co. and transported to New York and other places along the coast. The business employs a large number of hands.

is raised to some extent. Fruit growing is becoming an important branch of business. Manufactures of sole leather and lumber are located in the western towns, and water-lime in the eastern. The commerce, carried on by means of the river and canal, is large, and is constantly increasing.

The co. seat is located at Kingston.<sup>2</sup> The courthouse is a fine stone edifice, situated upon Wall St.3 The jail is a stone building in rear of the courthouse. It is well arranged and furnished and is kept in good order.4 The elerk's office is in a fireproof one story building on the corner of Fair and Main Sts.<sup>5</sup> The poorhouse is located upon a farm of 140 acres, on the s. line of New Paltz, I6 mi. s. w. of Kingston. It is poorly constructed, not ventilated at all, and is entirely untit for the purposes for which it is used. The average number of inmates is 175, supported at a weekly cost of $1.25 each. A school is taught 6 months in the year.6 The farm yields a revenue of $500. The Delaware & Hudson Canal is the only important work of internal improvement in the co. It extends from Rondout, on the Iludson, up Rondout and Sandburgh Creeks, through Kingston, Rosendale, Marbletown, Rochester, and Wawarsing. It opens a direct communication between the coal mines of Penn, and the Hudson. The Delaware & Iludson Canal Co. was incorp. April 23, 1823, and the eanal was finished in 1828.7

One daily and 7 weekly newspapers are now published in the eo.8

The Dutch established a trading post upon the present site of Rondout in 1614, and probably a few Dutch families settled in the immediate vicinity soon after. This early settlement was broken up by Indian hostilities, and a new one was commenced between I630 and '40. This was again attacked by the Indians, and in 1655 was abandoned. Before 1660, settlers had again located at Kingston and vicinity. In 1660 a treaty had been concluded with the Indians; and the people were so unsuspicious of danger that they left open the gates to their fort both day and night. 1663, the Indians came into the fort at Wiltwyck in great numbers, apparently to trade, while the greater part of the people were engaged in their usual avocations out of doors. At a given signal the Indians commenced the work of destruction. Recovering from their first panic, the whites rallied, under the leadership of Thomas Chambers, and finally drove the Indians out of the fort; 18 whites were killed, and 42 were carried away prisoners. The out settlements were all destroyed. A destructive war ensued, in which the Ulster Indians were nearly exterminated. During this war the valley of the Wall Kil was discovered, and soon after the peace of 1663 it was occupied by a eolony of French Huguenots.9 The settlements gradually extended along the valleys of Esopus,

These buildings proving inadequate, an act of General Assembly, passed Oct. 14, 1732, allowed the old buildings and lot to be sold and new buildings to be erected. Repairs were authorized in 1745, 1730, 1755, and 1773; and in 1775 a further sum was granted to complete them. The courthouse and jail were burned by the British Oct. 16, 1777, and a lottery was granted 6 months after to raise £2,000 to rebuild them. By act of March 19, 1778, the sheriff's mileage was directed to be computed from the bourse of Mrs. And DRA size an indecement in New Paltz.

4 The Senate Committee in 1857 report this jail as one of the best in the State; but, as 15 or 20 prisoners escaped in the winter of 1858 and 59, the correctness of the committee's conclusions may well be questioned.

5 Dutchess and Ulster cos. were incorp. at the same time, and were united for about 30 years. The records of Dutchess co. for that period are found in the Ulster co. clerk's office. 6 The Senate Committee of 1857 report that they found 12 cells for lunatics in an old, dilapidated building so open that it was 9 After the peace of 1660 the Director General of New Nether lands shipped 11 Indians prisoners to Curayoa to be sold as slaves. This outrage led to the attack made in 1663, and the bloody war that followed. Nine days after the retreat of the Indians from the attack upon Wiltwyck, in June, 1663, a reinRondout, and Walkill Creeks and their tributaries. Besides the manorial grant of Fox Hall, the English made township grants of Kingston, New Paltz, Marbletown, Roehester, Hurley, Shawangunk, and Marlborough. During the Revolution the frontier settlements were exposed to Indian hostilities, and before the close of the war were all destroyed or abandoned. The river towns were taken by the British in 1777, and most of them were pillaged and burned. The Provincial Congress and State Legislature held several sessions at Kingston during the war and soon after. The people were nearly all ardent patriots; and there were probably fewer tories in this co. than in any other section of the State. Since the Revolution the co. has steadily progressed in wealth and population. The completion of the Delaware & Hudson Canal was a marked era in the history of the industry of the co.; and the commencement of the cement manufacture and stone quarrying have greatly added to its permanent prosperity.

DENNING<sup>2</sup>—was formed from Shandaken, March 6, 1849. A part of Hardenburgh was taken off in 1859. It lies in the n. w. part of the co., upon the border of Sullivan. Its surface is a broken and mountainous upland. A spur of the Catskill Mts. extends through the town, with a mean elevation of 1,500 to 2,000 ft. Its streams are head branches of Rondout Creek and Neversink River. The valleys are narrow ravines bordered by steep and rocky hillsides. The soil upon the uplands is a gravelly loam, and in the valleys a sandy loam. The settlements are chiefly confined to the valleys. Denning is a p. o. near the center. Dewittsville is a hamlet near the s. line. This town, though large, has the least population of any town in the co. Its chief wealth consists in its heavy growth of hemlock and hard wood. Settlements were made at a comparatively recent period.3

ESOPUS—was formed from "Kingston," April 5, 1811. A part was set off to Kiugston, and a part of Hurley was annexed, in 1818, and a part of New Paltz was annexed April 12, 1842. It lies upon the Hudson, and is the central town upon the E. border of the co. Its surface is rolling in the E. and moderately hilly in the w. A range of hills extends N. and s. through near the center of the town, the highest peak being 1,632 ft. above tide. Huzzys Hill, s. of Rondout, is 1,000 ft. high. Wall Kil forms the w. and N. boundaries, and Swarte Kil and Black Creek flow through the s. part.4 The soil is a light, clay loam. Fruit growing is becoming an important branch of business. Cement is largely manufactured, and an extensive commerce is carried on by means of the river and Delaware & Hudson Canal.<sup>5</sup> Port Ewen, (p. v.,) upon the Hudson, s. of the month of Rondout Creek, is a village built up by the Penn. Coal Co. A large part of the coal brought forward by the canal is here shipped upon barges for the Northern market. Pop. 1,300.6 Arnoldton, (p. v.,) upon Walkill Creek, in the s. part of the town, contains a church, woolen factory, cotton factory, and I50 inhabitants. South Rondout, upon Rondout Creek, in the N. part, contains an extensive cement and lime factory, a lager beer brewery, a brickyard, several boatyards, and 568 inhabitants. Dashville, upon Walkill Creek, in the s. part, contains a cemeut factory and 20 houses. Sleightsburgh, upon the Hudson, at the mouth of Rondont Creek, contains an extensive shipyard and 40 houses. Elimores Corners, (Esopus p. o.,) upon the Hudson, contains a church and 40 houses. Amesville (p. o.) and Atkarton are hamlets. Freerville, in the N. part, contains a gristmill and 20 houses. Settlements were made by the Dutch, soon after their first occupation of the co.7 The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) of which there is any record was formed in 1751; Rev. G. W. Mancius was the first preacher.8

GARDINER<sup>9</sup>—was formed from Rochester, New Paltz, and Shawangunk, April 2, 1853. It is an interior town, lying s. of the center of the eo. The surface is rolling in the E. and hilly in the forcement of 40 men, under Ensign Myssen, arrived, and relieved the fort. Capt. Krygier, with a cannon and a force of 210 men, pursued the Indians to their forts and destroyed their grain. In Sept. another expedition surprised an Indian tort. 36 mi. s. w. of Wiltwyck, killed the chief and 20 others, and re-stored 22 captives. The Indians were effectually broken and stored 22 captives. The finance electrony broken and restored all the remaining prisoners except 3.

1 Thomas Chambers, the original proprietor of this patent, endeavored by will to entail it in his family; but it passed to strangers before the Revolution.

The first samily was out in 18-21, and the first cannely in 1850, at Dewittswille, by De Witt & Reynolds.

4 "Sopus," as known by the Dutch, included both Kingston the country s. of the Rondout. Their descendants still designate Kingston as "Sopus," and the corporate town above named as "Klein Sopus," or Little Sopus. The word is of Indian origin. The Esopus Indians-who lived in this region when first known to the whites-were of the Algonquin stock, and were allied to the Mohegan and the other river tribes.

Along the bluffs that overlook the Hudson ere several fine ountry residences. Two lighthouses are built in the river opcountry residences.

6 Named from John Ewen, President of the Penn, Coal Com-any. The village was laid out in 1851; nearly all of the in-pany. The village was faid out in 1851; nearly all of the in-habitants are more or less interested in the coal trade.

7 Johannes Louw was born in 1681; Baltus Teipening and Tryntje Van Vliet were married in 1682. These, so far as is known, were the first birth and marriage in town. Win Him-man taught a school, at the Hook, in 1763. A nill was bufft on Black Creek prior to 1800. A cotton factory was built at Dashville in 1828, and the one now at Arnoldton in 1830; the former is standing idle.

8 There are 6 churches in town; 3 Ref. Prot. D., M. E., Prot. E., and Friends.

9 Named in honor of Addison Gardiner, formerly Lieut. Gov.

eenter and w. The Shawangunk Mts. extend along the w. border. The Wall Kil flows N. E. through near the center and receives Shawangunk Kil from the s.w. The soil is principally a gravelly loam, with clay and alluvium along the streams. Lumber and leather are manufactured to some extent. Tuthilltown, (Tuthill p.o.,) upon Shawangunk Kil, near its mouth, contains 20 dwellings. Libertyville, (p.o.,) on the N. line, and Jenkinstown are hamlets. The first settlement was made at an early period, by a colony of French Huguenots. The first church was formed in 1833; Rev. Wm. Brush was the first preacher.

HARDENBURGH 3-was formed from Denning and Shandaken, April 15, 1859. It lies in the extreme w. corner of the co. Its surface is a broken and mountainous upland, the highest summits being 2,000 ft. above tide. It occupies a portion of the watershed between the Hudson and Delaware. Beaver Kil, Mill Brook, and Dry Brook take their rise in the town. Dry Brook (West Shandaken p. o.) is a hamlet.

HURLEY'—was granted by patent Oct. 19, 1708.5 A part of the Hardenburgh Patent was released by Margaret Livingston, and was annexed March 3, 1789; and a part of New Paltz was taken off in 1809, a part of Esopus in 1818, a part of Olive in 1823, a part of Rosendale in 1844, and a part of Woodstock in 1853. It is an interior town, lying N. E. of the center of the co. The surface is a rolling and moderately hilly upland, the highest summits being about 700 ft. above tide. Esopus Creek flows N. E. through the s. part. Along its course are extensive fertile flats. The soil is a sandy loam, a considerable portion lying N. of the creek being unfit for cultivation. Stone quarrying is extensively carried on. * Hurley, (p.v.,) on Esopus Creek, contains a church and 160 inhabitants; and West Hurley, (p.v.,) in the N. part, 2 churches and 25 dwellings. The first settlements were made by the Dutch, about 1680.8 This town became the refinge of the inhabitants of Kingston when the latter place was taken by the British in 1777. The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed in I800; Rev. Thos. G. Smith was the first pastor.<sup>9</sup>

KINGSTON—was incorp. by patent May 19, 1667, and was recognized as a town May I. 1702.10 Fox Hall Patent was annexed March 12, 1787.11 Esopus and Saugerties were taken off in 1811; a part of Esopus was anuexed in 1818, and a part was annexed to Saugerties in 1832. It lies upon the Hudson, N. of the center of the co. Its surface is broken and hilly, the highest summit being Kuykuyt or Lookout Mt., about 600 ft. above tide. Esopus Creek flows N. E. through near the center, receiving Saw Kil from the w. as tributary. Rondout Creek forms the s. boundary. The soil is principally a clayey loam. A large business in coal, ice, and stone is carried on by the canal and river. Kingston, (p.v.,) upon Esopus Creek, 2 mi. w. of the Hudson, was incorp. April 6, 1805. Besides the co. buildings, it contains 8 churches, the Kingston Academy. several private seminaries,<sup>12</sup> 3 banks, 1 savings bank, 4 newspaper offices, and several small manufactories.<sup>13</sup> Pop. 3,971. Rondout,<sup>15</sup> (p. v.,) upon the Hudson, at the mouth of Rondout Creek, was incorp. April 4, 1849. It is the center of an extensive trade upon the river and canal.14

10 Called by the Indians "Atkankarten,"-said to signify smooth land. It was more commonly called Esonns, from a tribe of Indians that inhabited it. Gov. Stuyvesant granted it a charter, May 16, 1661, under the name of Wiltwyck, (Indian Town.) and relieved it from dependence upon Fort Orange. Its anarrs were to be managed by a sheriff and 3 schepens. Rocolof Swartwont was appointed first sheriff, and Evert Pels, Cornelius Barentsen Sleight, and Elbert Heymans Roosa, the first schepens. Appeals from their decisions might be made to the Director General and Connell in New Netherlands. The sheriff and commissioners were to hold a court every fortnight, except in harvest time, nuless occasion or necessity might otherwise require. All criminal cases were to be referred directly to the Director General and Council, except the lesser crimes,—as quarrels, injuries, scolding, kicking, heating, threatenings, simply drawing a knife or sword, without assault or bloodshed,—which might be prosecuted in the lower court.

11 Fox Hall Patent was issued to Thomas Chambers, May 21, 1667, with manorial privileges. Chambers first settled on the 1667, with manorial privileges. Chambers first settled on the tract now occupied by Troy, as a tenant nuder Van Renselaer. He removed in 1652 to Esopus, acquired a large estate by trade, and rendered efficient service in the war against the Indians. He dled in 1698. Dutch Settlement is a hamlet in the N. part. Flatbush contains a cement factory. The Dutch built a trading and military post here as early as 1614; but every thing was swept away in the wars of 1644-45. Another settlement was commenced in 1652, and abandoned in The first permanent settlers came in soon after, but suffered much from Indian hostilities for several years.5 Feb. 19, 1777, the first State Convention adjourned from Fishkill to Kingston. On the 9th of September following, the State Legislature convened here, but dispersed upon the approach of a British force under Sir Henry Clinton on the 7th of Oct. At that time the public records were hastily removed to the back settlements, and the place was burned.<sup>6</sup> The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed May 30, 1658. There are 18 churches in town.

LLOYD—was formed from New Paltz, April 15, 1845. It lies upon the Hudson, s. of the center of the eo. Its surface is mostly a rolling and billy upland, terminating in a bluff upon the river; and the average height of the surface above tide is about 200 ft. Swarte Kil flows n. along its w. boundary and Black Brook N. through the center. The soil is generally a clay and gravelly loam. The bluffs along the river are principally occupied by fine country seats. New Paltz Landing, (p. v.,) upon the river, contains 2 churches and 50 houses; * Centervine (Lloyd p. o.) a church and I7 houses. Lewisburgh is a hamlet on the river, s. of New Paltz Landing. Riverside is a p.o. in the N. E. part. The date of first settlement in this town is quite ancient; but most of the details of the first years are lost. It was originally named "Paltz." The first church (M. E.) was formed in 1787. There are 3 churches in town; 2 M. E. and Presb.

MARBLETOWN—was formed by patent June 25, 1703.9 It was first recognized as a town March 7, 1788. A part of Olive was taken off in 1823, and a part of Rosendale in 1844. It is near the geographical center of the co. The surface is a hilly upland, broken by the valleys of the streams. Stone Ridge, near the center, the highest summit, is about 400 ft. above tide. Esopus Creek flows through the N. part, and Rondont Creek through the S. E. corner. The soil is chiefly a clay and sandy loam. A quarry of Shawangunk grit has been opened, and a sulphur spring has been found near the line of Rosendale. Stone Ridge, (p. v.,) s. E. of the center, contains 2 churches and 80 houses; Kripplebush, (p. v.,) in the s. part, a church and 12 houses. High Falls<sup>10</sup> is a hamlet upon the canal. Marbletown is a p. o. <sup>5</sup> The site of the first Dutch fort is said to be upon a platean in the w. bounds of Rondout. The locality is still called by its Indian name, Ponkhockie, said to signify "Canoe Harbor." On the 7th of June, 1663, as most of the people were at work in the helds, the Indians made a sudden attack upon the fort, (which was carelessly left open.) killed 18. and carried away 42 as prisoners. Capt. Chambers rallied the men, drove out the Indians, and commenced a war in which the captives were mostly reclaimed and the Indians nearly exterminated. The first marriage on the church record was that of Jan Janse Timmermans and Catharine Mattysen, Oct. 3, 1660.

6 The British force under Gen, Vaughan, consisting of 3,000 men, was sent up the river to co-operate with Burgoyne. For 10 days after passing the barriers at the Highlands they amnsed themselves by burning and plundering the places along the river. They took possession of Kingston Oct. 17, and, after plun-dering it several hours, they burned every house but one. The houses were mostly of stone, and the woodwork was easily replaced after the retreat of the British. Several of the early meetings of the Legislature were held at this place; and the first and as a town, March 7, 1788. Plattekill was taken off in 1800. It lies upon the Hudson, in the s. E. corner of the co. Its surface is broken and hilly. Marlborough Mt., a rocky ridge along the w. border, is about 1,000 ft. above the river. The streams are principally small brooks flowing directly into the Hudson. The soil is a slaty loam. Milton, (p. v.,) upon the Hudson, in the N. part, contains 5 churches and about 75 dwellings. Marlborough, (p. v.,) in the s. part, contains 2 churches, several manufactories,2 and about 50 dwellings. Lattingtown is a hamlet. The date and statistics of the early settlement have not been ascertained. The first church (Presb.) was formed Jau. 1, 1764. Antwerp Raspberries are extensively raised.

NEW PALTZ -- was granted by patent by Gov. Andros, Sept. 29, 1677.5 Its bounds were enlarged April 1, 1775, and a part of Hurley was annexed Feb. 2, 1809. A part of Esopus was taken off in 1842, a part of Rosendale in 1844, Lloyd in 1845, and a part of Gardiner in 1853. It is an interior town, lying s. E. of the center of the co. Its surface is mostly a hilly upland. The Shawangunk Mts. extend along the w. border. Paltz Point, the highest summit, is 700 ft, above tide. Wall Kil flows N. E. through near the center; it is bordered by wide, fertile flats. The soil is generally a fine quality of sandy loam. Hay is one of the principal products and exports. New Paltz, (p. v..) upon Walkill, near the center, contains the New Paltz Academy, 2 churches, and 45 dwellings. Butterville, Ohioville, and Springtown are hamlets. The first settlements were made by a colony of French Huguenots, a few years before the date of the patent.<sup>6</sup> The oldest church record is in French, and bears date of 1683. There are 3 churches in town; Ref. Prot. D., M. E., and Friends.

OLIVE—was formed from Shandaken, Marbletown, and Hurley, April 15, 1823. A part was annexed to Woodstock, and a part of Woodstock was annexed, in 1853. It is an interior town, lying a little N. w. of the center of the co. The surface is mountainous in the N. and w. and hilly in the s. and E. A considerable portion of the mountainous region is too rough for profitable cultivation. Esopus Creekflowss. E. through the town, a little N. of the center. ROCHESTER<sup>2</sup>—was incorp. by patent June 25, 1703,<sup>3</sup> and organized as a town March 7, 1788. A part of Middletown (Delaware co.) was taken off in 1789, Neversink (Sullivau co.) in 1798, Wawarsing in I806, and a part of Gardiner in I853. A part of Wawarsing was annexed March 21, 1823. It is an interior town, lying a little s.w. of the center of the co. Ranges of mountains extend along the E. and w. borders, and a rolling upland occupies the central portions. Rondout Creck flows N. E. through the s. part, and receives as tributaries Sander Kil, Peters Kil, and several other streams. Vernooy Creek flows s. through the w. part. The soil upon the uplands is a gravelly loam, and in the valleys a sandy loam mixed with clay. The Delaware & Hudson Canal extends along the valley of Rondout Creek. Esopus millstones are largely quarried in this town. An extensive cave near Kyserike has been explored about half a mile. Alligerville and Port Jackson are small villages upon the canal. Accord and Kyserike are p. offices. The first settlements were made about 1700, by the Dutch. The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed soon after the first settlement. There are now 2 churches in town; Ref. Prot. D. and M. E.

ROSENDALE—was formed from Marbletown, New Paltz, and Hurley, April 26, 1844. It is an interior town, lying E. of the center of the co. Its surface is a rolling and broken upland, the highest summits being 200 to 500 ft. above the valleys. Rondout Creek flows N.E. through near the center, and receives Coxing Kil from the s. and Kottie Kil from the n. The Delaware & Hudson Canal extends along the valley of the Rondout. The soil is principally a sandy loam. The manufacture of cement has become one of the most important branches of business.5 There are six cement manufactories in town. Rosendale, (p.v.,) upon the creek and canal, contains 2 churches and 450 iuhabitants; Lawrenceville, I mi. w., 40 houses; Bruceville, (High Falls p. o., ) upon the line of Marbletown, about 30 houses. Creek Locks, a canal village, on the E. border, and Whiteport, in the N. part, each contains about 20 houses. The first settlements were made by the Dutch, about 1700.6 The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed in 1797; Rev. Thos. G. Smith was the first preacher.

SAUGERTIES<sup>8</sup>—was formed from Kingston, April 5, 1811. An error in the boundary was corrected June 8, ISI2, and a part of Kingston was annexed April 2, IS32. It lies upon the Hudson, in the N. E. corner of the co. The surface is rolling in the E. and hilly in the center and w. The hills upon the river and extending 2 mi. back are underlaid by limestone, from which quicklime and cement are manufactured. Farther w. are quarries of fine flagging stone. Platte Kil flows through the town in a tortuous course and forms the principal drainage. Kaaters Kil flows along the N. border. The soil along the river is a clayey loam, and upon the uplands a sandy and gravelly loam. Quarrying is extensively carried on.9 Saugerties, (p.v..) upon the Hudson, at the mouth of Esopus Kil, was incorp. April 26, 1831, as "Ulster." Its name was changed April 10, 1855. It contains the Saugerties Academy, 7 churches, a uewspaper office, and several extensive manufactories. Pop. 3,334. Malden, (p.v.,) upon the Hudson, 2 mi. Quarryville, (p. v.,) in the N. part, and Unionville, near the center, each contains about 300 inhabitants, who are mostly engaged in getting out stone from the neighboring quarries. Glenerie, npon the s. line, Van Akens Mills, near the center, and Ashbury, are small villages. The first settlements were made by the Dutch, at an early period; but the largest immigration was that of the German Palatinates, a colony of whom located at West Camp in 1710. The first church (Lnth.) was organized at West Camp, in 1711. There are now 15 churches in town.2

SHANDAKEN<sup>3</sup>—was formed from Woodstock, April 9, 1804. A part was annexed from Neversink (Sullivan co.) in 1809. A part of Olive was taken off in 1823, Denning in 1849, and a part of Hardenburgh in 1859. It is the n.w. corner town of the co. Its surface is mostly a mountainous upland, broken by deep ravines. The declivities are steep and rocky, and a large share of the surface is too rough for profitable cultivation. The town is not inhabited except along the valleys, the mountain region being left to wild beasts and hunters. The soil in the valleys is a clay and sandy loam. The principal branches of business pursued are lumbering, shingle making, and tanning. Shandaken,4 (p.v.,) in the N. part, contains a church, a large tannery, a sawmill, gristmill, and 20 houses; Pine Hill, (p. v., ) in the N. w. part, a sawmill, gristmill, tannery, and 15 houses. Ladews Corners, (The Corner p. o.,) in the extreme E. angle of the town; Phenicia, (p. o.,) in the N. E. corner; and Woodland, (p. o.,) s. E. of the center, are hamlets. E. to the E. border. It receives from the s. Sandburgh Creek, a stream which drains the w. deelivities of the Shawangnnk Mts., Beer Creek, and the outlet of Cape Pond, which flows through near the center and empties into Sandburgh Creek. The Delaware & Hudson Canal extends along the valleys of Rondout and Sandburgh Creeks, at the w. foot of the Shawangunk Mts. The soil in the valleys is principally a sandy loam. Lumber, leather, glass, earthenware, iron, and axes are extensively manufactured in different parts of the town. Ellenville, (p.v.,) upon Sand. burgh Creek, at the mouth of Beer Kil, was incorp. in Sept. 1858. It is an important canal village, and contains several churches, a high school,2 newspaper office, and an extensive glass factory. Pop. 1,700. Napanock, (p. v., ) npon the Rondont, above its junction with the Sandburgh, contains several churches and manufactories, and a population of about 700. Homowack, (p. v., ) a canal village, upon the line of Sullivan co., contains a church, glass factory, woolen factory, and 20 houses. Kerhonkson, (p. v.,) a canal village, on the line of Rochester, contains a church and 30 houses. Lackawack, (p.v.,) upon the Rondout, in the w. part, contains 2 churches, extensive tannery, and about 40 houses. Greenfield, (p.v.,) in the s. w. part, contains 2 churches, a gristmill, sawmill, tannery, and about 25 houses. Wawarsing, (p.v.,) in the N. E., contains a gristmill, sawmill, tannery, and about 25 houses. Port Benjamin, a canal village, south of Wawarsing, contains about 25 houses. Port Nixon, a village upon Rondout Creek and the canal, in the N. E. part, contains a church and about 25 houses. The first settlements were made about the commencement of the last century, principally by the Dutch.<sup>5</sup> During the Revolution the inhabitants were killed, captured, or driven off by the tories and Indians.<sup>6</sup> The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed in 1745; Rev. J. Fryenmoet was the first preacher.7

WOODSTOCK—was formed April 11, 1787, from the settlements of Great and Little Shandaken, which had been attached to Hurley. A part of Middletown (Delaware co.) was taken off in 1789, Windham (Greene co.) in 1798, and Shandaken in 1804. A part of Olive was taken off, and parts of Olive and Hurley were annexed, Nov. 25, 1853. It lies upon the N. border of the co., E. of the center. Its surface is mostly a mountainous upland, too rough for profitable cultivation. Several fine valleys extend through the town, separating the upland into several distinct ridges and peaks. Overlook Mt., in the N. E. corner, is 3,500 ft. above tide. Near its summit is Shues Lake, a beautiful sheet of clear water. The scenery in this vicinity is among the finest in Eastern N. Y. Saw Kil and Beaver Kil are the principal streams. The soil is a clay and slaty loam upon the uplands and a gravelly loam in the valleys. Woodstock, (p.v.,) in the s. E. part, contains 2 churches, a tannery, and 20 houses; Bearsville, (p. o., ) 2 mi. w. of Woodstock, is a hamlet; Lake Hill is a p.o., near the center. The first settlements were made just before the commencement of the Revolution.8 The first church (Lnth.) was formed in 1806.9

<sup>5</sup> The first settlers were Abram Bevier, John Bevier, from New Paltz, in 1708, Eghert De Witt, Peter Kernoony, and Andries De Witt. An inn was kept by Johannes Bevier before the Revolution. The first store at Wawarsing was kept by Abram Vernooy; the first gristmill was built by Cornelius Vernooy.

WARREN COUNTY.

This county was formed from Washington, March 12, 1813, and was named in honor of Gen. Joseph Warren, of the Revolution. It lies s. and w. of Lake George, near the E. border of the State. It is contrally distant 65 miles from Albany, and contains 968 sq. mi. The surface is very broken and mountainous, less than onehalf being susceptible of cultivation. The mountain ranges are continuations of the great mountain masses which culminate in Essex co. The characteristic features of Essex are somewhat softened and subdued in this co. The mountains are broader, less pointed, and generally less precipitous; the valleys are wider and more connected; and there are larger expanses of comparatively level land. With all these modifications, however, a great part of the surface is wild and rugged. High, serrated ridges traverse the entire extent of the co., often rising thousands of feet above the valleys. These mountains, being principally composed of primary rocks, which strongly resist the action of the elements, have a steepness of declivity and sharpness of outline in marked contrast with the gradual slopes and beautifully rounded summits of the highlands of the slate and limestone regions. The soil formed by the exceedingly slow process of disintegration is either washed directly into the valleys, or in the course of ages it collects in thin layers upon the hillsides, giving nutrition to a scanty vegetation. Three of the five mountain ranges N. of the Mohawk Valley extend through this co. The Palmertown Range enters the extreme E. part of Queensbury from Washington co. French Mt., a spur of this range, at the s. E. extremity of Lake George, rises almost precipitously from the lake and attains an elevation of 2,500 to 3,000 ft. above tide. Another spur of this range forms the Luzerne Mts., which extend through the s. part of Luzerne and the E. part of Caldwell,-a N. branch extending N. and forming the whole series of high bluffs which border the w. shore of Lake George. The second or Kayaderosseras Range extends N. E. through Stony Creek, Thurman, Chester, and Horicon, sending spurs both N. and S. Crane Mt., in the S. E. corner of Johnsburgh, the highest peak of this range, has an elevation of 3,000 ft. above the surrounding valleys. The third or Schroon Range occupies the central and northerly part of Johnsburgh and the N. w. angle of Chester. It consists of a great number of rocky peaks rising to a height of 2,500 to 3,000 ft. above tide; most of these have never yet been named. The rocks that compose these great mountain masses are principally gneiss. Granite, white crystalline, limestone, and serpentine are found in considerable quantities in the form of injected veins. A belt of this limestone extends along the course of the Kayaderosseras Mts., and from it a good quality of lime is manufactured. In the valleys and in the s. part of the eo. are found layers of Potsdam sandstone, black marble of the Black River limestone strata, Trenton limestone, and Utica slate. Many of these rocks are useful for building materials; and the limestone furnishes an abundance of excellent lime. At the foot of a granite ledge upon Crane Mt. is found a bed of very pure porcelain clay, supposed to have been formed by the slow disintegration of the feldspathic rock. Graphite and magnetic iron ore have also been discovered, but not in sufficient quantities to be profitably worked.

The drainage of the co. is mostly through the Hudson River. This stream enters the co. from Essex, in two branches about 10 mi. apart, and these, after flowing through nearly parallel valleys for about 30 mi., unite in one stream. The E. branch is the outlet of Schroon Lake, and the w. forms the drainage of the Adirondack Mts. This river has a very rapid course; and upon it are several rapids and falls, two of which are worthy of especial note.2 Lake George's is bend of the river in the s. w. corner of Luzerne. The water flows in a series of rapids for three-fourths of a mi. over a declining rocky bottom, and is then compressed into a narrow gorge for 80 rods, at the bottom of which it shoots down a nearly perpendicular descent of 60 ft. The gneiss ledge over which it falls of snow-white foam. The name "Horicon" has been applied by some modern writers to Lake George, and it is said to be an Indian word meaning Silver Water." However poetic and appropriate "The Lake of Surer Holter." However poetic and appropriate this designation may appear, or however euphonious it may sound, it may be questioned whether a term suggested by fancy alone, and never used by the aborigines, will ever find place among the geographical names of the State as one of Indian cright.

situated upon the E. border, and receives the drainage of the E. part of the co. It is 36 mi. long and 1 to 3 mi. wide.1

The soil of this ce. is mostly a thin, sandy loam. The level lands N. of Glens Falls are very sandy, and are known as "pine plains." The declivities of the mountains have a very thin soil, and usually a scanty vegetation. In the valleys is some clay mixed with the sand and disintegrated primitive rocks, forming a deep and excellent soil. Farming and the manufacture of lumber and leather form the leading pursuits of the people. Farming is mostly confined to stock raising and dairying. Immense quantities of logs are floated down the Hudsen and manufactured into lumber, shingles, hoops, staves, and heading, at Glens Falls and other places. Black marble is quarried at Glens Falls, and feldspar and kaolin for the manufacture of porcelain, graphite and serpentine are also found in different places. Peat exists in abundance; but it has never been extensively used.

Caldwell, at the head of Lake George, is the county seat.<sup>2</sup> The courthouse was built in 1816-17, with the jail in the basement. The poorhouse is located on a farm of 200 acres in Warrensburgh.<sup>3</sup>

The works of internal improvement are the Glens Falls Navigable Feeder, 7 mi. in length, feeding the summit level of the Champlain Canal, and the improvement in the log navigation of the Hudson. There is no R. R. in the co.4 Three newspapers are now published in the co.5

This co. was the scene of some of the sanguinary battles between the French and English long anterior to its settlement. In 1755, a provincial army of 5,000 men, under Sir. Wm. Johnson, designed to act against the French posts on Lake Champlain, assembled at Albany early in June, and were there joined by a large number of Mohawks under King Hendrick. Forts Lyman (afterward Fort Edward) and Miller were built, and a road was opened to Lake George. The news of Braddock's defeat was received before this army left Albany. The expedition set out on the 8th of Ang., by way of Lake George, for Tieonderoga, with the design of erecting a fort there. Learning that the French had anticipated them and had already fortified Tieonderoga, they encamped near the head of Lake George. About the 1st of Sept., Baron Dieskau, the French commander, with a force of 200 grenadiers, 800 Canadian militia, and 300 Indians, passed up South Bay and across the rocky peninsula, with a view of falling upon the rear of the English and of cutting off their supplies from Fort Lyman. On the 8th, a force of 1000 troops under Col. Ephraim Williams, and of 200 Indians under King Hendrick, were sent out to meet them; but, falling into an ambuscade, the greater part of the troops and the two commanders were killed. The survivors fled, and were immediately followed by the French. The firing alarmed the camp, and a breastwork of logs was immediately thrown up, and 300 men, under Col. Cole, were despatched to cover the retreat of the flying fugitives of the first party. Flushed with victory, the French assailed the English camp with great fury, and a sanguinary conflict ensued, which lasted

At some points high rocky bluffs rise precipitously from the very edge of the water, and at others a little hasin seems scooped out among the hills. Most of the little hasin seems scooped out among the hills. Most of the mountain declivities are covered with verdure; but a few of them are masses of naked rocks. This whole region is full of historic interest. Each mountain, precipice, and cape has its own tales and reminiscences of the olden time. Some of the fiercest conflicts of the last long wars between the French and Raphish coloniest took above the last long wars between the French and English colonists took place upon its shores, and the pure and peaceful waters of this beautiful lake were often ensanguined with the blood of fierce combatants. Again during the Revolution war held high carnival here: but since that period its visi-tors have been principally the lovers of the wild and beautiful in nature. Sabbath-Day Point and Lord Howes Point are two low beaches upon the w. shore, near the foot of the lake; and Rogers Slide is a precipice upon the w. shore. 200 feet high, rising at an angle of about 25 degrees. Tongue Mt., forming a promontory upon the w. shore, Anthonys Nose, upon the E. shore, and French Mt., near the head of the lake, have each an elevation of more than 2,000 feet.

<sup>2</sup> The first courts were held at the "Lake George Coffee House." The cierk's office was located by law within 1 mi. of this place; The clerk's office was located by law within 1 m. of this place; and this was made the point from which the sheriff's mileage was reckened. By an act passed March 31, 1815, three commissioners were to be appointed by the governor to locate the site of the courthouse and juil and to superinted its erection. The first co. officers were Wm. from 12 m. to 4 p.m. and resulted in the total defeat of the French. Col. Blanchard, who commanded at Fort Lyman, learning the result of the first engagement in the morning, sent a party of about 300 N. H. and N. Y. militia to the scene of the conflict. This party surprised the French camp, and, after dispersing the troops left to guard it, they hastened on to the English camp and arrived in season to assist materially in gaining the victory. This engagement was the only one fought during the campaign of 1755 that reflected the slightest credit upon the British army.

The remainder of the season was spent in erecting Fort Wm. Henry,2 on the site of the English camp. A projected attack upon Ticonderoga during the winter was prevented by the uncommon severity of the season. In the summer of 1756 a provincial force of 6,000 men assembled here, but too late to effect their purpose.<sup>3</sup> On the 17th of March, (St. Patrick's day,) 1757, the French, under Longee, a famous partisan officer, attempted to surprise the fort, but were successful only in burning a few buildings and several vessels on the lake. Soon after, a party of 400 English, under Col. Parker, marched to attack Ticonderoga; but, falling iuto an ambuscade, only 72 escaped. Early in the summer of 1757, Montcalm, the French commander, made extensive preparations to capture Fort Wm. Henry. On the last day of July, Maj. Putnam discovered a large body of the enemy encamped on an island about 18 mi. down the lake. Gen. Webb, who had immediate command, upon being apprized of the matter, enjoined Putnam to keep the intelligence secret and to prepare to escort him (Webb) back to Fort Edward, leaving Col. Munro in command at Fort Wm. Henry. The enemy soon lauded in force and proceeded to invest the fort. The garrison consisted of 2,500 men, and the attacking force amounted to nearly 9,000. Gen. Webb had a force of 4,000 regulars at Fort Edward, only 9 mi. distant, and the militia were rapidly collecting to afford further aid. Col. Munro sent pressing and repeated messages for relief; but Gen. Webb paid no attention to the request, and appeared totally indifferent to every thing but his own personal safety. At length, upon the ninth day of the siege, he allowed Gen. Johnson to march with a body of volunteers to the relief of the garrison; but before the party had proceeded 3 mi. they were recalled, and Gen. Webb sent a letter to Col. Munro advising him to surrender on the best terms he could obtain. This letter was intercepted and given to Col. Munro by Montcalm in person. Thus cut off from hope, and assured by Montcalm that the garrison should march out with the honors of war, with their arms, and one of the four cannon of the fort, with their baggage and baggage wagons, and an escort of 500 men to Fort Edward, he surrendered. The Indians soon began to pillage the baggage, and, not being checked, fell upon the sick and wounded, whom they killed and scalped. Excited by carnage, they next surrounded and attacked the disarmed and defenseless troops; and, although Montcalm was implored to furnish a guard, as promised, the massacre was allowed to proceed until a large number were killed or hurried away prisoners for more deliberate torture.5

In the summer of 1758 an army of 7,000 regulars and 10,000 provincials, under Gen. Aber-

A few survivors of the massacre fled for their lives, and suc-A lew survivors of the massacre ned for their free, and sur-ceeded in reaching Fort Edward in anafety. The next day Maj. Putnam was sent with his rangers to watch the motions of the enemy; but he arrived just after they embarked and were beyond reach of pursuit. As he came to the shore, the demolished fort, enemy that he arrived just after they embarked and were beyond reach of pursuit. As he came to the shore, the demolished fort, the burning buildings, and the ghastly and mangled corpses of the dead and the feeble groans of the dying, quickly told the dismal story of treachery and barbarity, scarcely less chargeable to the cowardice of Webb than to the perfidy of Montcalm Writers differ as to the number murdered on this occasion, the estimates varying from 300 to 1,500. It is probably nearer the latter number. There was a tendency among the provincials to exaggerate, and among the regulars to palliate, the occurrences above related. The massacre occurred Aug. 9, 1757. Among the accounts given by eyewitnesses of the scene, that of Jonathan Carver, the well-known traveler, has perhaps been most frequently quoted. The feeble attempts that have been made to defend the reputation of Montcalm, under the plea that he extend himself to restrain the Indian barbarities, find ample refutation in the fact that with five or six times more whites than savages the latter were allowed to proceed unmolested. If this relatively small number could not be restrained, there must relatively small number could not be restrained, there must have existed a degree of insubordination incompatible with military success and strangely at variance with the condition of Ing. 2 Named in honor of the Duke of Cumberland, brother of the heir apparent, afterward George III. 3 Several incidents worthy of note occurred during this expedition. At Halfway Brook a party of teamsters were surprised and captured by 600 of the enemy, who immediately retreated down South Bay. A hundred men, under Capts, Israel Put-nam and Robert Rogers, set out from Fort Wm. Henry, crossed over to Lake Champlain, and from an ambuscade poured a de-structive fire upon the enemy as they passed. A number were killed, and the English immediately retreated across to Lake George. The next morning they embarked on the lake, and at Sabbath-Day Point they were met by a force of French and Indians Sabbath-Day Point they were met by a force of French and Indians three times their own number. The English dashed forward to the attack; and, by reserving their fire until they came into close quarters, they threw the enemy into confusion, and succeeded in escaping, with the loss of one killed and two wounded. In the winter of 1756-57, Maj. Rogers, with 74 men, went down Lake George, and crossed over to Lake Champlain, where he captured a small party of French. On his return he was met on the summit of the hill by a party of 200 French; and a desperate conflict ensued. Mai logers was wounded, and the command definite ensued. fliet ensued. Mg. Rogers was wounded, and the command de-volved upon Capt. Stark. (afterward Gen. Stark of the Revolution.) The conflict continued until nightfall, when the French retreated, leaving half of their number dead upon the field. Of the rangers, 48 remained unwounded; and the company pushed forward through deep snows and reached the lake in the morn-crombie, proceeded against Ticonderoga by way of Lake George. On the 5th of July the army embarked on board of 900 bateaux and 135 boats, and passed down the lake with all the pomp and pageantry of war; and four days after they returned, shattered and broken, with a loss of nearly 2,000 in killed and wounded. Such of the latter as admitted of removal were sent to Fort Edward: and the main army lay inactive in camp at the head of the lake during the remainder of the season. In June, 1759, Maj. Gen. Amherst, with an army of 12,000 men, advanced to Lake George, and, while waiting to complete his arrangements, he commenced building Fort George, about half a mile  $\varepsilon$  from Fort Wm. Henry. As Gen. Amherst advanced to Ticonderoga, the French withdrew to Crown Point, and soon after to the Isle Aux-Noix. Quebec fell soon after, and the conquest of Canada was completed the following year, rendering the vast military works at Fort George, Ticonderoga, and Crown Point of no further utility, and allowing the hardy pioneers of civilization to advance and occupy the fertile valleys which as provincial soldiers they had previously traversed.

BOLTON—was formed from Thurman, March 25, 1799. Hague was taken off in 1807, a part of Caldwell in 1810, and a part of Horicon in 1838. It lies E. of the center of the co., between Schroon River and Lake George. The E. shore of the lake constitutes the E. line, so that more than one-half of the lake is within the limits of this town. The surface is principally occupied by the high mountainous ridges which lie between the lake and Hudson River. There are 3 principal peaks belonging to this range within the limits of the town,-Tongue Mt.,2 on the peninsnla between the lake and North West Bay, 2,000 ft. above tide; Pole Hill, in the N. part. 2,500 ft. high; and Cat Head, in the center, 1,500 to 1,800 ft. above tide. The mountains generally rise precipitously from the lake; but toward the w. the surface assumes the character of a high, rolling upland. High up among the hills are numerous little crystal lakes, the principal of which are Trout Lake, Marsh Pond, and Edgecomb Pond. Trout Lake is 1,000 ft. above Lake George. Not more than one-half of the town is susceptible of cultivation. The soil is a thin. sandy loam. Bolton, (p. o.,) situated on Lake George, opposite Green Island, is a small village. The settlement of the town was commenced in 1792, principally by New England people.<sup>5</sup> The improvements are confined mostly to the vicinity of Lake George. The first church (Presb.) was formed in I804; the Rev. — Armstrong was the first settled minister. There are 2 churches in town; Bap. and M. E.

CALDWELL6—(Col'-well) was formed from Queensbury, Bolton, and Thurman, March 2. 1810. It lies around the s. extremity of Lake George. A range of mountains occupies the extreme w. part. The central portion is a high, hilly region, descending abruptly to the lake. Prospect Hill, w. of the s. extremity of the lake, has an elevation of 2,000 ft. above tide. South of this hill a low valley extends s. w., through Caldwell and Luzerne, to the valley of the Hudson near the mouth of Sacandaga River. This depression seems to be a continuation of the valley in which Lake George is situated, and shows that a change of a few feet in the elevation would cause the waters of the lake to flow into the Hndson. In this valley is a chain of small lakes. A narrow strip of low land lies immediately upon the border of the lake. The soil is a sandy loam among the hills, and a dark, rich, sandy and clayey loam on the lowlands. Caldwell, (p. v.,) the county seat, is situated near the head of Lake George. It contains 2 churches, several hotels, and about 50 dwellings. This place is the annual resort of great numbers of tourists and pleasure seekers, who are attracted hither by the beautiful scenery of the lake and the surrounding region. During the summer the steamer Minnehaha plies daily between Caldwell and the foot of the lake. Fort William Henry and Fort George were situated near Caldwell, at the head of Lake George and Bloody Pond, in the s. part. Settlement commenced at the head of Lake George, soon after the conquest of Canada; but its progress was arrested by the Revolution. Soon after the close of the war, settlement was recommenced.7 There are 2 churches in town; Presb. and Union.

Within the limits of this town is the most heautiful scenery of the lake. Its channel is studied with a multitude of small islands, some of them consisting of barren, desolate rocks, while others are clothed with the richest verdure. Diamond Island, near the 8, extremity of the lake, derives its name from the beautiful quartz crystals that have been found upon it.

After the partial success which attended the attempt upon Ticonderoga in 1777, Cols. Warren and Brown, on the 24th of Sept., made an attack upon this place with the gnuboats they had captured. They were repulsed with loss, and retreated to the E. shore. The enemy being in pursuit, they burned their boats, crossed the mountains to Lake Champlain, and returned to Gen. Lincoln's camp at Pawlet. Vt.

CHESTER-was formed from Thurman, March 25, 1799. It lies upon the N. border of the co., between Iludson and Schroon Rivers. The surface is broken. The Kayaderosseras Mts. extend through the s. part, and the Schroon Range occupies the N.W. portion. A continuation of the valley of Schroon Lake, extending in a s.w. direction to the w. branch of the Hudson and separating the mountain ranges, contains a chain of small lakes. Loon Lake is the principal one in this valley; and s. of it, among the hills, is another sheet of water, called Friends Lake. Schroon Lake is about 1,000 feet above tide, and the hills that surround it are 500 to 800 feet above its surface. The soil is generally light and sandy. A cave in Mt. Moxon is quite a curiosity, and has some local notoriety. Near the N. horder of the town, upon Stone Bridge Creek, is a natural bridge. Feldspar has been quarried to a considerable extent and exported for the manufacture of porcelain. Chestertown (p.v.) contains the Chester Academy and 246 inhabitants; and Pottersville (p. v.) 126. The settlement of this town commenced toward the close of the last century.2 The first church (Bap.) was organized in 1796; and the Rev. Jehiel Fox was the first pastor. There are now 6 churches in town.8

IIAGUE—was formed from Bolton, Feb. 28, 1807, as "Rochester." Its name was changed April 6, 1808, and a part of Horicon was taken off in 1838. It lies upon the shore of Lake George, in the N.E. corner of the co. The surface is very mountainous, not above one-fourth being susceptible of cultivation. The mountains along the lake generally descend abruptly to the very edge of the water. The narrow valleys of Trout and North West Bay Brooks form the line of separation between the two mountain ranges. Ash Grove Hill, upon the w. border, is 2,000 to 2,500 feet above tide; and upon the shore of the lake, in the N.E. corner, is another mountain peak of nearly the same elevation. Rogers Rock is on the lake shore, in the N.E. corner. It rises from the water's edge at an angle of about 45° and attains an elevation of 300 feet. Sabbath-Day Point is a headland projecting into the lake near the s. border. The soil is a light, sandy loam. Iron ore has been found near Seventh Pond; and mines have been worked to some extent, but they are now abandoned. The beauty of the lake and the solitary grandeur of the mountain scenery of this town render it a favorite resort for hunting and fishing parties and the lovers of the beautiful in nature. Hague, (p.o.,) on McDonalds Bay, and Wardboro (p.o.) are hamlets. The principal improvements are along the lake. The first settlement was made about 1796.7 There is a union church in the town.

HORICON—was formed from Bolton and Hagne, March 29, 1838. It lies noon the N. border of the co., E. of Schroon Lake. The greater part of its surface is occupied by the two branches of the Kayaderosseras Mts., which are here divided by the valley of Brant Lake. In the N. and E. these ranges rise, in numerous sharp, rocky peaks, 1,600 to 2,000 feet above tide; but in the s, and w. they sink into a hilly plateau region. About one-half of the surface is arable. Among the hills are great numbers of small lakes, laving with their crystal waters the base of the huge, rocky masses which tower above them. Brant Lake, the principal of them, is 10 mi, long and is everywhere surrounded by precipitons hills. The soil is a sandy loam. Horicon, (p.v.,) situated on Schroon River, in the s.w. part of the town, contains about 20 houses; and Mill Brook. (p. v.,) on Schroon Lake, 15 houses. Agron Harris, Joseph Gregory, Bishop Carpenter, and Timothy Bennett were some of the earliest settlers.8 The first church (Wes, Meth.) was formed in 1820; Nathaniel Streeter was the first minister. There are 4 churches in town; 2 Bap., M. E., and Wes. Meth.

frozen surface of the lake.

5 It is generally supposed that this name was derived from the fact that Gen. Amherst and his suite, while passing down the lake on their way to Ticonderoga in the summer of 1759, stopped here to refresh themselves upon the Sabbath; but this derivation of the name is doubtful, for it is mentioned in Rogers's Journal, June 28, 1758,—the season before.

Hndson, and is the N. w. corner town of the co. Its surface is very broken and mountainous. The Schroon Range occupies the N. and central parts; and a spur of the Kayaderosseras Range extends into the s. Crane Mt., the highest peak of the latter, is about 3,500 feet above tide. The greater part of the town is too rough and broken for cultivation. The arable land is confined to the narrow valleys. The soil is a sandy and gravelly loam. Kaolin, serpentine iron ore, and other minerals are found. There are 3 large tanneries in town. Johnsburgh, (p. v.,) on Mill Creek, contains 20 houses; Nobles Corners, on the same stream, 25; North Creek, (p. v.,) on the Iludson, at the mouth of North Creek, I5; and The Glen, (p. o.,) on the Hudson, in the s.e. corner of the town, 7. The first settlement was made soon after the close of the Revolutionary War, by John Thurman, the proprietor of extensive tracts in this part of the State. The first church (Bap.) was organized in 1793. There are 4 churches in town.

LUZERNE—was formed from Queensbury, April 10, 1792, as "Fairfield." Its name was changed April 6, 1808. A strip of territory I mi. wide was set off to Queensbury, March 30, 1802. It lies upon the E. bank of Hudson River, in the s. extremity of the co. Two branches of the Luzerne Mts. extend through the town, respectively occupying the N. and s. portions. They are separated by the valley which extends s.w. from the s. end of Lake George. A chain of small lakes lies along its course; and in them two streams take rise, one of which flows to Lake George and the other to the Hudson. About one-half of the surface bordering upon the river is a high, hilly region, but arable. Kettle Bottom, in the s. part, and several peaks of the ridge which extends along the E. border, are 2,000 to 2,500 feet above tide. The soil is a light, sundy loam. Luzerne (p.v.) is situated on the Hudson, above its confinence with Sacandaga R. cr. Pop. 280. The first settlements were made about 1770, along the Hudson. Most of the early settlers occupied lands leased from Ebenezer Jessup, the patentee. There are 3 churches in town.

QUEENSBURY—was incorporated by patent<sup>6</sup> as a township, May 20, 1762, and recognized as a town, March 13, 1786. Luzerne was taken off in 1792, and a part of Caldwell in 1810. A strip of territory I mi, wide was taken from Luzerne and added to this town in 1802. It lies between Lake George and the Hudson, and is the s.E. corner town of the co. The w part is occupied by the Luzerne Mts., and the extreme N. part by French Mt., a high, rocky bluff which rises precipitonsly from the surface of Lake George to a height of 2,500 to 3,000 feet above tide. The central and s. parts are rolling, gradually declining toward the s. The soil is a light, sandy loam in the interior, and a deep, tough clay upon the river. The fall in the Hudson at Glens Falls is about 50 feet high, and affords valuable mill privileges. Below the fall is a small island, through which is a cave extending from one channel to the other. The manufacture of lumber is largely earried on. Glens Falls, (p. v., ) incorp. April 12, IS39, is situated on the Hudson, in the s. part. It contains 9 churches, the Glens Falls Academy, 3 newspaper offices, 2 banks, and several manufactories.9 Pop. 3,420. West Glens Falls, on the Hudson, contains 25 houses; and Queensbury, (p. v.,) in the E. part 20. French Monntain (p. o.) is a hamlet. The summit level of the Champlain Canal is fed through the Glens Falls navigable feeder with water taken from the Hudson above the falls. The settlement was commenced in 1766; but its progress was very slow until after the close of the Revolution.10 The first house of worship was erected by the Society of Friends, in 1786. There are now 11 churches in town. II

STONY CREEK—was formed from "Athol," Nov. 3, 1852. It lies upon the w bank of Hudson River, and is the s.w. corner town of the co. Nearly the whole town is still a wilderness. Through the center of the town extend mountain ranges, several peaks of which attain an elevation of more than 2,000 feet. The valleys of E. and W. Stony Creeks are narrow ravines, forming a natural pass between the valleys of the Hudson and Sacandaga. The soil is a light, sandy loam.

The first mills were erected in 1789 or '90, by Mr. Thurman. He opened a store and built a distillery; and in 1795 he erected a woolen factory. This was soon after changed to a cotton factory; and as early as 1797 he erected calico printing works, the first, it is believed, in America.

THURMAN<sup>3</sup>—was formed April 10, 1792. Bolton and Chester were taken off in 1799, Johnsburgh in 1805, and a part of Caldwell in 1810. The town was divided into "Athol" and Warrensburgh Feb. 12, 1813; and "Athol" was divided into Thurman and Stony Creek, Nov. 3, 1852. It lies upon the w. bank of the Iludson, s.w. of the center of the co. The w. part is a high, broken upland, almost nuknown except to hunters. The E. portion, along the Hudson, is a hilly plateau, with several peaks rising 1,000 feet above the valley. Among the hills are numerons small lakes. The soil is a light, sandy loam. WARRENSBURGH—was formed from Thurman, Feb. 12, 1813. It lies between the two branches of the Hndson, near the center of the co., and upon the ridges s. of the junction. The peninsular portion is a rolling plateau 600 to 1,000 feet above the river. The s.w. part is occupied by an immense mountain mass with several summits 2,400 to 3,000 feet above tide. Nearly twothirds of the land in town is arable. The soil is a light, sandy loam among the hills, and upon the river it is nearly the same, mixed with some clay. Warrensburgh (p. v.) is on Schroon River, 3 mi. from its junction with the Hudson, Pop. 700. Across the Hudson, below the mouth of Schroon River, is a long bridge connecting this town with Thorman. The first settlement was made a few years after the close of the Revolution.<sup>6</sup> A M. E. church, the first in town, was organized in 1796; and the Rev. Henry Ryan was the first minister. ## WASHINGTON COUNTY.

This county was formed from Albany as "Charlotte County," March 12, 1772. Its name was changed April 2, 1784; Clinton co. was taken off in 1788; the E. portion was ceded to Vermont in 1790; a strip along its s. border was annexed from Albany Feb. 7. 1791; and Warren co. was taken off in 1813. It lies on the E. border of the State, is centrally distant from Albany 45 miles, and contains an area of 850 sq. mi. The surface consists principally of a series of ridges extending N. E. and s. w., and the valleys between them. The remarkable depression which extends southerly from the s. extremity of Lake Champlain divides these ridges into two distinct groups,—the N. belonging to the Palmertown Mt. Range, and the s. constituting one of the connecting links between the highlands of Southern New York and those of Western Vermont. The s. group is subdivided into three principal ranges, which are all related and of the same general character. The most southerly of these ranges is a northerly continuation of the Taghkanick Range of Rensselaer co., occupying the greater part of White Creek and the E. part of Jackson. The declivities are usually steep, and the summits broad, broken, and rocky. The second-sometimes described as a continuation of the Petersburgh Mts. of Rensselaer-constitutes the highlands of Cambridge, Jackson, Salem, and the E. part of Hebron and Granville. In Salem it spreads out like a fan between the streams. The third comprises the highlands of Easton, Greenwich, Argyle, Hartford, Granville, Hampton, and the E. part of Whitehall. It might with propriety be called Cossayuna Range, from the principal lake which it incloses. The declivities of these ranges are usually steep, and, except where broken by ledges, are arable to their summits. They gradually rise toward the E., reaching their culminating point near the E. border of the co. The highest summits are 1000 to 1200 feet above tide. These three ranges belong to one general group and are of the same geological formation. They are composed of slate rock, ledges of which crop out along their whole extent. Many of these ledges in Granville and Hebron are quarried, and furnish stone much valued for roofing, building, and ornamental purposes. Among the slate quarries are found numerous veins of injected quartz, intersecting the slate strata in every direction, varying from the thickness of paper to several inches. They often present cavities and surfaces beautifully studded with transparent crystals of quartz. The edges of the slate are sometimes bent and distorted by the quartz dikes, showing the extreme heat and great force of the injected veins. The soil in this system of highlands consists chiefly of disintegrated slate, and is very fertile.

The second group of highlands, belonging to the Palmertown Mt. Range, occupy the towns of Fort Ann, Dresden, Putnam, and the E. part of Whitehall. They belong to the primary formation, their rocks consisting principally of gneiss, granite, sandstone, and impure limestone. Their sides are very precipitous and broken, and their summits are wild irregular masses of naked, barren rocks. The valleys between them are narrow and rocky, often bordered by precipices many hundred feet in height. The soil is cold and unproductive, like that of all regions of a similar geological formation. A narrow valley extending s. w. from the s. extremity of South Bay divides the group into two ranges. Saddle Mt., overlooking South Bay and 1000 ft. above tide, is the highest peak in the s. range; and Black Mt., 2878 ft. above tide, is the highest peak in the s. range. Diameter Rock, on the s. shore of South Bay, is 1300 ft. above tide.

sioners were Smith Thompson, Simeon De Witt, and Geo. Fibhitts. See Notes to N. Y. Session Laws, April 15, 1814.

<sup>1</sup> The original bounds of this co. were as follows:—All that part of the State N. of the present co. of Saratoga, and of a line extending from the mouth of Stony Creek 510 chains E; thence s. to the Batten Kil, and along that stream to the s. line of Primedown, and thence to "Cumberland" co. Its w line was the present w. line of Saratoga co. continued to Canada, and its E. line the W. lines of "Cumberland" and "Gloucester" cos. These limits embraced the w. half of Vermont, s. of the Batten Kil, and the present cos. of Warren, Essex, Clinton, and a part of Fronklin.

3 The act of cession, by commissioners appointed for the purpose, was dated Oct. 7, 1790, and the line was finally settled by commissioners from both States in 1812. The N.Y. commissioners

The Iludson River forms the s. half of the w. border of the co. A rich intervale, from half a mi. to a mi. in width, bordered by a series of clay bluffs 20 to 60 ft. high, extends along its course. Most of the other streams of the co. are tributaries of the Hudson, and among them are the Hoosick, Batten Kil, Moses and Fort Edward Creeks, and many smaller streams. Wood Creek1 is a deep, sluggish stream, flowing into Lake Champlain and draining the valley, which here extends from the lake to the Hudson. The soil along the valley is mostly a hard, stiff clay. The Mettowee, or Pawlet, and the Poultney Rivers, from Vt., are tributaries of Wood Creek. In the co. are several other streams important as mill streams.<sup>2</sup> Lake Champlain s, of Ticonderoga is scarcely more than a ship canal through a reedy marsh bordered by rocky cliffs. Lake George lies along the N. w. border of the co. Among the hills in the interior are several small lakes, the principal of which is Cossayuna Lake, in Argyle.3

The various branches of agriculture form the leading pursuits of the people. The principal grains raised are rye, spring wheat, oats, buckwheat, and corn. Peas, beans, flax, and potatoes are also extensively cultivated. Stock raising, dairying, and wool growing are also extensively pursued. The manufactures of the co. are principally along the Hudson and Batten Kil.

The county offices are divided among several towns. The courts are held alternately at Salem and Sandy Hill, and the clerk's office and co. poorhouse are located at Argyle.4 The jail is connected with the courthouse at Salem, and all prisoners sentenced for more than two months are sent to the penitentiary at Albany.

The principal public works in the co. are the Champlain Canal,<sup>5</sup> extending in and along Wood Creek and the Hndson to Greenwich; the Saratoga & Whitehall R. R., extending through Fort Edward, Kingsbury, Fort Ann, and Whitehall, with a branch to Lake Station and another to Castleton, Vt.; and the Rutland & Washington R. R., extending from Eagle Bridge, through White Creek, Jackson, and Salem, to the State line.

The first newspaper in this co. was established at Salem, in 1788.6

Upon the advent of the whites, few Indians were found within the limits of this co.; but Indian

At Fort Edward a dam 27 ft. high and 1900 feet long was built by the State in 1821, as a feeder to the canal, but, the Glens Falls feeder superseding it, it was sold to a company in 1840 and cut down to 16 ft. The Saratoga Dam (where the Champlain Canal crosses the Hudson into Saratoga (contest the champian canar crosses the Hudson into Saritors, co.) is 1390 feet long. Batten Kil is crossed by 9 dams. White Creek furnishes a large number of mill sites, once improved, but now mostly abandoned. Black Creek bas several valuable and improved mill sites. Mettowee or Pawlet River has also several valuable mill sites.

trails and implements of Indian art frequently found show that it had been inhabited at a former period. The n. portion of the eo., lying in the natural channel of communication between Hudson River and Lake Champlain, became the great highway of hostile parties passing between the Five Nations and the Canada Indians, and at a later day by the more formidable armies of disciplined troops in the struggles which ended in the conquest of Canada. The French made incursions upon the English and Five Nations in 1665, 1688, and 1693; and these were returned by attacks upon the French and Indians in Canada in 1691 and 1692. For several years after, the passage of small hostile parties was of frequent occurrence. In 1709, Forts Ann and Nicholson were erected by the English and garrisoned for the protection of the northern frontier; but upon the return of peace they were abandoned.2 Frequent incursions of small parties were made in the War of 1748, and many persons were murdered,—though no regular engagement took place. Again, during the French War of 1755, forts were built at Ft. Ann, Ft. Edward, and the whole region around the head of Lakes George and Champlain became the theater of stirring military events. The armies that attacked Ticonderoga, and those that finally effected the conquest of all the French posts upon the lakes, marched through this region; and it formed a portion of the great battle-ground between the armies of two nations contending for the sovereignty of a continent. In the summer and fall of 1777, upon the advance of Burgoyne, war again, for a brief space, spread terror and desolation over the whole region "Skenesborough" was burned and abandoned on the 7th of July, Fort Ann was taken on the 8th, Fort Edward on the 28th, and the country was overrun by the enemy soon after. On the 13th and 14th of Sept. the British army crossed the Hudson into Saratoga eo.; and about the 10th of Oct. Fort Edward was re-taken by the Americans, thus effectually cutting off the retreat of the army, already disheartened by their defeat at Bemis Heights. The surrender of Burgoyne put an end to the war in this section; and the subsequent history of the co. is but the record of the continued and progressive triumphs of peaceful industry.

ARGYLE<sup>3</sup>—was granted by patent, March 13, 1764, and formed as a town, March 23, 1786. Greenwich was taken off in 1803, and Fort Edward in 1818. It lies near the center of the co. Its surface is rolling in the N. and w. and broken and hilly in the s. and E. The highlands are divided into broad ridges with abrupt declivities. In the N. part Tamerack Swamp covers several hundred acres. The principal stream is the Moses Kil,5 which flows in a s. w. direction through near the center of the town. The other streams are small brooks, which flow into the Hudson, Batten Kil. and Wood Creek. Cossayuna Lake<sup>6</sup> is a beautiful sheet of water, 3 mi. long, situated in a narrow valley in the s. E. part of the town. It is everywhere surrounded by steep hill slopes, and contains several beautiful green islands. To the N. E. of this lake, high up among the hills, is Argyle Lake, a small sheet of water, half a mile in circumference. The soil of the town is generally a productive, slaty or gravelly loam. A mineral spring, 1 mi. N. w. from South Argyle, is said to resemble those at Saratoga. Argyle (p. v.) was incorp. March 27, 1838. It is the seat of the Argyle Academy. Pop. 375. North Argyle and South Argyle (p. offices) each contains about 20 houses, and The Hook 10. Argyle was conveyed to 83 families, and in 1765 the first settlement commenced.8 The family of John Allen, a tory living on Lot 25, was murdered by Indians belonging to Burgoyne's army, July 26, 1777.9 The first church (Asso. Ref. Presb.) was formed in 1793;10 Rev. Geo. Mairs was the first preacher.

<sup>1</sup> There were three distinct routes,-one from Fort Edward, down Wood Creek, with a portage of 6 to 10 mi., one from Fort Ann to the head of South Bay, and one from Glens Falls to Lake George.

4 This patent was granted to Scotch immigrants (who came over under Laughlin Campbell in 1738-40) and to their descend ants. It embraced 47,450 acres, and granted township privileges, Duncan Read, Neal Shaw, Alexander McNachten, (McNaughton.) and Neal Gillespie were appointed trusters. A stately avenue, called "The Street," 7 mi, in length and 24 rods in width, was bid out (on paper) and surveyed E, and w, through the center of the township, and lots were laid out on each side. In the rear farm lots were laid out, thus affording accommodations for proprietors and tenants. In the summer of 1764 this tions for proprietors and tenants. In the summer of 1764 this tract was surveyed and divided into 141 lots, in accordance with this plan, by Arch, Campbell, of N. J., and Chris, Yates, of Schenectady. The natural impediments in the way, however, precluded the possibility of building the street or in any way real-opposite its month.

<sup>6</sup> Called at different times "Long," "Leghrants," "McEachrons," Cowans," and "Big Lake." The name given on the map and in "Cowans, "Coverns," and "Big Loke." The name given on the map and in the text, after having gone out of use, was restored by Ir. Fitch in his survey. Cossayuna is said by the St. François Indians to signify "The Lake at our pines," and is highly expressive of its original scenery.

<sup>7</sup> Summit Lake is a picturesque sheet of water in the co., upon the very summit of the central range of hills. Two sawmills are supplied by its ontlet.

and Roger Read settled on the Batten Kil; and James Gilles, Duncan Taylor, and George Kilmer, near the center of the town. Many of the lots were never visited or claimed by their proprietors, and they were taken up by squatters. The first death was that of Mrs. Arch. Brown.

9 This family had been assured of protection by Eurgoyne.

Their murder, together with that of Jane McCren, had the ten dency to convert many persons who had hitherto been torics into active partisans in the American cause.

CAMBRIDGE—was incorp. by patent, July 21, 1761. It was formed as a town in Albany co. March 7, 1788, and annexed to Washington co. Feb. 7, 1791. White Creek and Jackson were taken off in 1815. The surface of the town is hilly in the x, and rolling in the s. The summits of the hills are 200 to 300 ft, above the valleys. The E, part embraces a portion of the valley of Owl Kil, which is celebrated for the beauty of its scenery. Upon the w. of this valley are high undulating hills, the broad sweeps of which show alternate patches of green woodland and cultivated farms; and upon the E. rise the Taghkaniek Mts., rough and broken, while the valley itself is very smooth and level. The other streams are Wampecack Creek, Whiteside Brook, and several other small brooks. The soil is generally a gravelly and sandy loam. Flax is extensively cultivated. Cambridge (p. v.) contains 100 houses and the Cambridge Washington Academy; Center Cambridge (p. v.) 13 houses; North Cambridge (p. o.) 10; and Buskirks Bridge<sup>3</sup> (p.v.) 15. The first settlers consisted of 30 families, who located in 1761, '62, and '63 and who each received 100 acres of land as a gift from the proprietors.4 Phineas Whiteside, from Penn., settled 8 mi, w. of the Colerain Colony, in 1766. The expedition against Bennington, under Baum, passed through the town Ang. 13, 1777; and the remnant of the fugitives returned on the night of the 16th. The first church (Asso. Presb.) was organized in 1789; Rev. Thos. Beverly was the first pastor.<sup>6</sup>

DRESDEN—was formed from Pntnam, as "South Bay," March 15, 1822; its present name was adopted April 17, 1822. It lies between Lake George and the s. extremity of Lake Champlain. Nearly its entire surface is covered by steep mountain ridges, several peaks of which are 1500 ft. above the lake. The declivities of the mountains are steep, sometimes forming perpendicular precipices several hundred feet high. Upon the side of Lake George the mountains rise abruptly from the very edge of the water; but upon the borders of Lake Champlain is a narrow strip of arable land. The principal mountain peaks are Black<sup>7</sup> and Sugar Loaf Mts. and Diameter Precipice. Pike Brook and the head branches of Mill Brook take their rise in these mountains. All of the surface in the interior is covered with forests or naked rocky peaks. The soil is hard and sterile, and is unfit for agricultural purposes. The town was principally conveyed to non-commissioned officers and privates of the Colonial British army; and settlement was begun about 1784, by Jos. Phippeny. at the foot of South Bay. Ebenezer Chapman, - Boggs, and Daniel Ruff came soon after, and settled along the bay and lake. Lumbering has formed a prominent pursuit. In several localities iron and other ores have been noticed, but none worked to any extent. The town is without a p.o. A bridge was built, at the expense of the State, across South Bay, near its outlet, in 1856.

EASTON—was formed from Stillwater and Saratoga, March 3, 1789, while a part of Albany eo., and so named from being the E. town in the Saratoga Patent. It was annexed to Washington co. Feb. 7, 1791. It lies upon the E. bank of the Hudson. A broad intervale extends along the course of the river, which is succeeded by a plateau region, embracing the central and s. portions of the town. The E. part is broken by several lefty hills. The principal highlands are Willards Mt.8 and Harrington Hill. The streams are Hudson River and Batten Kil,9 forming the w. and N. boundaries of the town, Kidney and Vly Creeks, and a few minor streams. Upon the E. borders of the town is an extensive swamp known as "The Vly,"10 The Di-on-on-dah-o-wa Falls, 11 upon <sup>1</sup> This patent embraced 31,500 acres, and was nominally conveyed to 60 persons, most of whom resided in Hebron, Conn. The real owners were but 6 in number, and of these 3 only were mentioned in the charter, viz.: Isaac Sawyer and Edward Wells, of Conn., and Jacob Lansing, founder of Lansingburgh. The other three owners—Alex. Colden, Wm. Smith, and Geo, Banyar - were connected with the Colonial Government.

The town included a portion of the Hoosick Patent.

Named from Martin Van Buskirk, who built the first bridge.

<sup>4</sup> The patent was conditional to the settlement of 30 families 4 The patent was conditional to the settlement of 30 tamilies within 3 years; and to meet this requirement the most inviting portion was surveyed, and 100 acres offered as a gift to each family that would remove thither. These lots lay in a double low, on both sides of Owl Kil. from below the "Checkered House" into the present town of Jackson. They embrace the several village precincts from Davis Corners to near Stephensons Cermers. Among the settlers were Jas, and Robt., sons of Ephraim Cowan, Jas, and John Cowden, John McClung, Samuel Bell, Col. Rair Geo. Gilmore, Geo. Duncan, David Harrow, Win. Bell, Col. Blair, Geo. Gilmore, Geo. Duncan, David Harrow, Wm. Clark, John Scott, and Thos. Morrison. A son of the last was the first child born of civilized parents in town. Hugh Kelso, a son of Col. Blair, was the first person who died in town. It is recorded that of these 30 families (who were for a time the most thrifty in town) all but two lest their property and died in poverty, mainly from intemperance. They were mostly from Colerain, Conn.

5 William Whiteside acquired the title to 3 lots, of 400 acres rich, of the finest land, and settled his sons (John, l'eter, Thomas, William, and James) upon large farms near him. These estates are all owned by his descendants at the present day. The remaining lands were mostly leased by the six proday. The remaining lands were mostly leased by the six proprietors at an annual rent of one shilling per acre; but, they being generally willing to sell at a sum equal to the present worth of the perpetual rent, most of the settlers have gradually acquired the fee simple of their farms. The first inn was of logs, on the site of the "Checkered House." and kept by Jas. Cowden. Philip Van Ness built the first sawmill and gristmill on Gordons Brook, near Buskirks Bridge. This neighborhood was called by the Indians "Tyo-shoke." and by them a field of 12 acres had been cleared there for corn. Other early settlers on the Hoosick Patent were Col. Lewis Van Wort and John Quackenbush.

Batten Kil, below Galesville, are 60 ft. high, and well worthy of note. The soil is an excellent quality of sandy and gravelly loam. Limestone of an excellent quality abounds in this town. Machinery, agricultural implements, and woolen goods are manufactured at Galesville. Easton Corners (North Easton p. o.) eontains 30 houses; Easton (p. v.) 17; South Easton (p.v.) 15; and Crandalls Corners 8. Parts of Union Village and Galesville1 are in this town. The date of the first settlement is unknown, but it was probably several years after the Saratoga Patent<sup>2</sup> was issued. In 1709 a fort<sup>3</sup> was built on the hill top, I mi. s. of Galesville, and a few families settled under its shelter; but the dread of Indian hostilities prevented the settlement from spreading. On the 30th of Nov. 1745, the enemy made a descent upon the place, killed 30 persons, and took 60 prisoners, including a portion of the garrison, who were decoyed from the fort by the Indians feign, ig to be wounded. The remaining part of the garrison burned the fort and unfinished blockhouses and withdrew, leaving the frontier unprotected. Settlers did not return until 1760.4 At Schuylerville is a bridge across the Hudson 800 ft. long. The first religious meeting (Quaker) was held in 1778. A Ref. Prot. D. church was formed in 1805; Rev. Philip Duryea was the first preacher.<sup>5</sup>

FORT ANN—was formed, as "Westfield," March 23, 1786. Hartford was taken off in 1793, and Putnam in 1806. It received its present name, April 6, 1808, from the old fort erected here in 1709. It lies s. of the southern extremity of Lake Champlain, and s. E. of Lake George. Its central and w. parts are occupied by the high and rocky peaks of the Palmertown<sup>6</sup> Mts., here divided into three distinct ranges,-Palmertown Mt., in the w. part, Mt. Putnam, in the center, and Fort Ann Mts., in the E. The extreme E. edge of the town is occupied by uplands belonging to the Cossayuna Diameter Rock and Buck Mt., on the line of Dresden, are the highest peaks, and are 1300 to 2500 ft, above tide. The valleys separating the ranges of the Palmertown Mts. are known as "Furnace" and "Welchs Hollow." The principal streams are Wood Creek, Ilalfway Creek, Furnace Hollow Creek, and Podunk Brook. The principal bodies of water are Orebed, Sly, Copeland, Hadlock, and Trout Ponds. The soil in the mountain region is hard and sterile, scarcely strong enough to support the natural growth of forest trees; but in the valleys it is a gravelly loam alternating with a stiff clay, Iron<sup>8</sup> and woolen goods are manufactured to some extent. Fort Ann' (p. v.) has 608 inhabitants; Griswolds Mills (p. v.) about 14 houses. West Fort Ann, (p.o.,) South Bay, Caues Falls, and Conistocks Landing (p.o.) are small villages. Fort Ann was one of a chain of military works erected in 1709, to facilitate the extensive operations then in progress against Canada.10 It stood upon the w. side of Wood Creek, about half a mile from the present village of Fort Ann, the Champlain Canal passing partly across the spot which it enclosed. It was built at the joint expense of England and the Colonies. Artillery Patent, covering the E. part of this town, was granted Oct. 24, 1764, to Jos. Walton and 23 other Provincial officers, in equal shares, irrespective of grade. Settlement was not generally begun until after the Revolution. An engagement occurred here, July 8, 1777, between the rear guard of the retreating American army, under Col. Long, and the advanced guard of the British, under Col. Hill.<sup>11</sup> In Oct. 1780, a blockhouse in this town was burned by the enemy. The first church (Bap.) was formed in 1789;12 Rev. Sherman Babcock was the first pastor.

French and Indians were sent to destroy it; but, learning that Col. Nicholson was posted here with a superior force, they returned. 'While the English were awaiting at this place the opening of a road and the construction of bateaux on Lake Champlain, a fatal sickness broke out in the camp, and great numbers died as if poisoned. In October Col. Nicholson returned with his crippled forces to Albany. Charlevoix states that this sickness was produced by the treacher yof the Indians, who threw the skins of their game into the swamp above the camp. It is more probable that it was a malignant describery caused by the malaria of the swamps and the extreme heat.

If the Americans were obliged to retreat in consequences of their amaunition giving out. They destroyed their works, and talked trees across the road and creek, obstructing the route to Fort Edward as much as possible. The removal of these obstructions caused a data of the consequence of their consequences and the fortunation of the consequence of the consequence of their few possibles. caused a delay of several weeks, which finally proved tatal to river, but toward the E. the surface rises to a height of 200 to 300 ft. and spreads out into a beautifully undulating upland. The Hudson, Moses Kil and Dead Creek are the principal streams. The soil upon the river is a mixture of heavy clay and alluvium, but farther E. it is a sandy or gravelly loam. In town are several extensive manufacturing establishments. Fort Edward (p. v.) is finely situated on the Hudson. Pop. in 1858, 1,565. The Washington Co. Seminary and Female Collegiate Institute,3 one of the largest academic institutions in the State, is located at this village. Fort Miller (p. v.) is situated on the Hudson, about 7 mi. below Fort Edward. Pop. 225. Fort Edward Center is a p.o., and Durkeetown is a hamlet. The first family that located in the town or co. was that of Col. Lydius, son of Rev. John Lydius, who, having acquired the title to Delliu's discarded patent, built a house, and engaged in trade with the Indians at what is now Fort Edward Village. 1 His daughter, Catherine, was born here, and was the first white child born in the co. Fort Nicholson was built in 1709, but was soon after abandoned. As a part of the plan of military operations against Canada, about 600 men, under Gen. Lyman, were sent forward, in June, 1755, to build a fort where Fort Nieholson had formerly stood, at the great earrying place to Lake Champlain.<sup>5</sup> Fort Edward was a very important depôt for arms and rendezvous for armies in the great expeditions against Canada; and it served as a vast hospital for the sick and wounded until 1760, when it was allowed to go to decay. During the Revolution it was again occupied by both British and Americans. Fort Miller is named from the fort built, about 1755, in the bend of the river opposite the village.<sup>6</sup> After the peace this town settled rapidly. Wm. Duer, son-in-law to Lord Sterling, was the pioneer of Ft. Miller, where he built a large house and sawmill. There are 6 churches in town.8

GRANVILLE-was formed March 23, 1786. It is situated upon the E. border of the co., N. of the center. Its surface is undulating and hilly. The ridges generally slope gradually to their summits, which are elevated 300 to 500 ft. above the valleys. Quarries of excellent roofing slate have been opened in different parts of the town.9 Wide intervales of excellent land extend along the course of Mettowee, or Pawlet,10 and Indian Rivers. The soil is a slaty and gravelly loam, and is particularly adapted to potatoes, large quantities of which are exported. A limited amount of manufactures11 is carried on in town. Granville12 (p.v.) contains 450 inhabitants: North Granville (p. v.) a female seminary, and 220 inhabitants; Middle Granville (p. v.) an academy and 800 inhabitants; and South Granville (p. v.) 111. The land in this town is embraced in several grants made to about 30 captains and lieutenants who had served in the French War. 13 Barnaby Byrnes Patent, of 2000 acres, in the s. E. corner, was sold to Kennith McKennith, a merchant of New York, who again sold it to Donald Fisher, a tailor of that city. Fisher induced several relatives of his to remove from Scotland and settle upon his tract. In the Revolution he withdrew to Canada, and his lands were confiscated and sold; but, owing to some informality, the

The murder of Jane McCrea took place July 27, 1777, near a spring, and beside a venerable pine tree a little E. of the village. This tragedy was at once reported throughout the country, and aided greatly to weaken the influence of the British, while it aroused the patriots to more desperate efforts in resisting the invaders. The old pine tree died in 1849; and in 1853 it was cut down and made into canes and hoxes as mementos of the event. The remains of Miss McC. are interred in the Union Cemetery.

7 He was the first State Senator from this co. Among the first settlers were Noah Payne, from Warren co., Conn., io 1766, Timothy Buel, and the Crocker families. Nath'l Gage was living at Ft. Miller when these families arrived. The Durkee, Saunders, and Bell families settled in the upper part of the town. The first one of these consisted of a father and 5 sons, from R. I. These settlers first took out titles under Lydius, but, finding them invalid, they bought of the Schuyler proprieters. no tradition of loss to the settlers from this cause,—whence it is inferred that Col. Lydius refunded whatever he may have received. Hugh Monroe, (owner of Monroes Island.) Patrick Smith, and Dr. Jas. Smith settled at Fort Edward about 1764. It was 4 sided, with bastions on 3 angles, the fourth being protected by the river. Its ramparts of earth and timler, 16 ft. high and 22 thick, were mounted with 6 camon and infield protected by the two. Its ramparts to earth and dome-left, high and 22 thick, were mounted with 6 cannon and in-closed several large buildings. Storehouses and barracks were built on Monroes Island, opposite. A band of swages attempted to surprise it in Ang. 1559, but were repulsed by Maj. Israel Pur-nan and his rangers. In the winter following, Putoam swed the fort from destruction by a characteristic exercise of cod intrepidity and daring. The fort accidentally took fire, and the trepanty and daring. GREENWICH—was formed from Argyle, March 4, 1803. It lies on the w. border of the co., in the N. angle formed by the junction of the Hudson and Batten Kil. Ranges of hills, 200 to 300 ft. above the valleys, extend through the central and eastern parts of the town. Bald Mt., near Batten Kil, is the principal peak. The declivities of the hills are so gradual that the surface appears to be rolling rather than hilly. Upon Batten Kil are two considerable falls, one of which is 75 ft. in height. The other principal streams are the Cossayuna, Rogers, and Stony Creeks and Livingston Brook. Cossaynna Lake extends into the N. E. corner of the town. The soil is a slaty and gravelly loam interspersed with patches of clay. The town is more extensively engaged in manufactures than any other in the co.4 Union Village, 5 (Greenwich p. o., ) on the line of Easton, contains an academy and I,173 inhabitants, 888 of whom are in Greenwich; Bald Mountain<sup>6</sup> (p. v.) 225 inhabitants; East Greenwich (p. v.) and Center Falls each about 100 houses; and North Greenwich (p. v.) 70. Galesville (p. v.) is a manufacturing village of about 40 houses, on the line of Easton. Battenville, (p. v.,) in the s. E. corner, contains about 200 inhabitants. Lakeville (Lake p. o.) is a hamlet. It is supposed that the first settlement was made by the Dutch, previous to the French War, a few families of them remaining at the time of the Revolution.7 About 1733 a large number of Scotch emigrants had come over under the promise of grants of land from Government,-which promise was not fulfilled. Jan. 5, 1763, three of these emigrants—Dunean, George, and Jas. Campbell, sons of Laughlin Campbell-petitioned for 100,000 acres; and on the 11th of Nov. following a patent of 10,000 acres was issued to the 3 brothers, their 3 sisters, (Rose Graham, Margaret Eustace, and Lily Murray,) and 4 other persons. This grant embraced about one-third of the town of Greenwich. The first church (Bap.) was organized in 1774; Rev. Leonard Bowers was the first preacher.8

HAMPTON—was formed March 3, 1786. It lies upon the E. border of the co., N. of the center. A range of hills, about 500 ft. above the valleys and for the most part covered with forests, extends through the central and eastern parts of the town. Poultney River, separating the town from Vt., is the principal stream. Along its course is a wide intervale of fine land. The soil is a gravelly learn interspersed with clay. The intervale is alike fertilized and desolated by the frequent overflows of the stream. Hampton Corners (Hampton p.o.) contains 20 houses, and Low Hampton (p.o.) 5. The greater part of this town was included in patents granted to Provincial officers. The N. part embraces about 2000 acres of Skene's Little Patent.10 The first settlement was made some little time before the Revolution, 11 by Capt. Brooks, Col. Gideon Warren, and — Webster. The first church (Prot. E.) was built at a very early date: 12 Rev. Stephen Jeweth, from N. J., was the first preacher.

HEBRON<sup>4</sup>—was formed March 23, 1786, and named from Hebron, Conn. It lies near the center of the E. border of the co. A broad mountain range extends through the center, occupying nearly one-half of its entire surface, and a series of high hills extends through the E. and W. The summits of the highlands are 300 to 500 ft. above the valleys and are mostly crowned with forests. The ranges of hills are separated by the valleys of Black Creek and its principal w. branch. The soil is a sandy and slaty loam, of a light, porous nature, easy of cultivation, and well adapted to resist the extremes of wet and drouth. In the hilly regions is considerable rocky waste land. In the N. and E. are extensive and valuable quarries of slate. North Hebron (p. v.) contains the North Hebron Institute and 12 houses; East Hebron (Hebron p. o.) 12 houses; West Mebron (p. v.) the West Hebron Classical School and 40 houses; Belcher<sup>6</sup> (p.v.) 20 houses; and Slateville (p.o.) 8. This town was embraced in patents granted to officers and privates who had served in the French War,—mostly to Scotch Highlanders belonging to the 77th Regt. of Foot. These grants were made so long after the war that those who were entitled to them never appeared to claim them. The first settlements appear to have been The first church made before the Revolution. The N. branch of the Taghkanick Range occupies the E. portion of the town, and several parallel ranges extend through the central and w. portions, rendering the entire surface very hilly. The summits of the hills are 300 to 800 ft. above the valleys and are generally crowned with forests. The declivities are often steep and rocky. The principal streams are Batten Kil and a branch of Owl Creek. In the valley between the hills that border immediately upon Batten Kil and those farther w. are several small lakes, known as Long, Big, Dead, and Little Ponds. These lakes are beautiful sheets of water, surrounded by hills, forests, and fine cultivated farms. The soil Jackson Center (Jackson p. o.) contains 16 houses; is a slaty loam and very productive. Coita, (p. v.,) on the line of Cambridge, about 30 houses; and Anaquassacook 12. Portions of this town and White Creek were embraced in the Anaquassacook Patent of 10,000 acres, granted May 11, 1762.8 The first settlers were James Irvine, Peter Magill, and John Miller, all of whom located in the s. part of the town.9 The only church (Ref. Prot. D.) in town was organized Dec. 31, 1833; Rev. Jas. W. Stewart was the first pastor. Geo. Law, one of the projectors and proprietors of the California line of steamships, was a native of this town.

KINGSBURY—was incorp. by patent May 18, 1762, and recognized as a town by the State Government March 23, 1786. It lies on the w. border of the co., N. of the center. Nearly all of its surface is level or gently undulating. A range of hills, rising about 150 ft. above the valleys, occupies the extreme E. edge of the town. The principal streams are the Hudson, in the s. w. corner; Wood Creek, upon the E. border; Halfway Brook, in the N. W. corner, and Moss Brook. At Bakers Falls, 10 npon the Hndson, the river shoots down a steep descent of ledges, in all 76 ft. in 60 rods, forming a scene of great beauty, and affording an extensive water-power. The soil along the valley of Wood Creek is a hard, stiff clay; in the other parts of the town, a sandy or gravelly loam. There are extensive quarries of limestone in town, furnishing an excellent building material; from these quarries was obtained the stone for the locks on the Champlain & Hudson Canal. Manufacturing is earried on to a considerable extent. Sandy Hill<sup>2</sup> (p. v.) has a population of 1,260. Moss Street contains 25 houses; Kingsbury (p. v.) 25; Pattens Mills (p.v.) 20; Dunhams Basin 10; Vaughns Corners 12; Adamsville (p.o.) 12; Langdons Corners 5; and Smiths Basin (p.o.) 8. Kingsbury Patent, containing 26,000 acres, was granted to Jas. Bradshaw and 22 others, from Conn., May 18, 1762. The first settlers were James Bradshaw, Albert Baker, and his sons Albert and Charles, from New York City.<sup>3</sup> A sawmill was built at Bakers Falls before the Revolution, and a gristmill in 1807. The town was the seeue of many an adventure during the French War,4 and the settlement was entirely broken up during the Revolution. Traces of a road cut by Burgoyne's army are still visible near Kingsbury. The first minister was Francis Baylor, a Moravian, about 1776. Meetings were held by the Prot. E. and the Bap, in 1795. Several noted men have been residents of this town.

PUTNAM7—was formed from "Westfield," (now Fort Ann,) Feb. 28, 1806. Dresden was set off in 1822. This town lies in the extreme N. end of the co., upon the mountainous peninsula between Lakes George and Champlain. The mountains are divided into two separate ranges by the valleys of Mill and Charter Brooks. The w. range of mountains rises abruptly from the surface of Lake George, and in the s. part of the town attains an elevation of 900 to 1,000 ft. above the surface of the lake. The greater part of the surface is rocky, broken, and unfit for cultivation; but sections of arable land extend along the valleys of the small streams and the borders of Lake Champlain. The soil is generally a hard, gravelly loam. Graphite of a fine quality is found in abundance. A small pond lies among the mountains, on the w. side of the town, 300 feet above Lake George. Putnam Corners, (Putnam p.o.,) containing about 10 houses, is the only village. The tillable lands were mostly granted to privates of the N. Y. Provincial regiments, and feeble settlements had probably commenced before the Revolution.<sup>8</sup> The first church (Asso. Presb.) was built in 1801;9 Rev. James Miller, from Scotland, was the first pastor. A private academy at Putnam Corners was established in 1854.

SALEM—was formed by patent Aug. 7, 1764, and was recognized by statute March 23, 1786. It lies on the E. border of the co., s. of the center. Its surface consists of moderately elevated ridges, separated by narrow valleys, all extending in a N.E. and S.W. direction. The hills are usually bordered by gradual slopes and their summits are crowned with forests. There is very little waste land in town. Batten Kill, forming the s. boundary, and Black, White, and Trout Creeks, are the principal streams. Lytles Pond, in the N. part, is a beautiful sheet of water lying in a basin among the hills and surrounded by forests. The soil is a rich, slaty or gravelly loam. Salem, (p. v.,) incorp. April 4, 1803, has 832 inhabitants; Shushan (p. v.) has 2 churches, 4 mills, and about 50 houses; and Eagleville, (East Salem p. o.,) Clapps Mills, and Fitch's Point have each 40 to 50 inhabitants. James Turner and Joshua Conkey, from Pelham, Mass., settled in 1761. They were joined, the next year, by Hamilton McCollister. In 1764 a patent of 25,000 acres was obtained,—one-half owned by a company of New England settlers and the other by Oliver De Lancey and Peter Du Bois, two Government officials.10 These last sold their share to Rev. Thos. Clark and his company of Irish and Scotch immigrants at a perpetual rent of one shilling per acre. The Camden Tract, on the E. part of the town, was granted to captains <sup>1</sup> The dam at Sandy Hill, across the Hudson, 1,200 ft. long and | Henry C. Martindale, of Sandy Hill. 10th high, furnishes water-power for several mills and a woolen factory. At Bakers Falls there are a paper mill and 2 gristmills. The lumber business of the town is very extensive and important, the sawmills being supplied with logs floated down trom the Upper Hudson. There are also in town establishments for the manufacture of pianos, steam engines, portable sawmills, &c.

 Among the other first settlers were Michael Hoffnagle, Solomon King, Oliver Colvin, and Nehemiah Seely.
 At one time 17 soldiers were taken prisoners by the Indians and carried to the present site of Sandy Hill Village. They control deliberately when their control deliberately. and carried to the present site of Sandy Hill Village. They were scated on a log, in a row, when their captors deliberately began to tomaliawk them, taking them in order from one end of the log. When all were killed but one, (John Quackenhoss, of Albany.) a squaw claimed him, and his life was spared. He returned after a few years of captivity, and resided near Hoosiek, in Cambridge. In Ang. 1758, Majs. Putnam and Rogers encountered a party of French and Indians in this town, during which engagement Putnam was made prisoner. The enemy were finally compelled to withdraw, with a loss of 90 meo

Lieut. Gov. Pitcher, for some time Acting Governor, was a citizen of this town. Hon. Wm. P. Lee, late Chief Justice and Chancellor of the Sandwich Islands, was a native of Sandy Hill.

8 The first sawnill was erected by Robt. Cummings, in 1802, on Mill Creek, I mi, from Lake Champlain. The first child born was James Jennings, in 1803; the first death was that of Anne Thompson, in 1804. Robt. Patterson kept the first school, in 1804. Many of the first settlers were Sociel, and among them were Obadiah Blake, Robt. Cummings, John Blair, Wm. Hutton, George Easton, Pelatiah Bughee, John Butterfield, and Josiah Clark. Josiah Clark.

<sup>10</sup> This patent was surveyed into 308 lots, and a large pine lot was reserved for the common benefit, and cut up into small lets for division; 3 lots near the center of the town were set apart to support the minister and schoolmaster.

11 The New England and Scotch settlers were mixed together in their settlements, and often on alternate farms; and, in consequence of the rivalry between the two parties of proprietors, the town was speedily settled. The New Englanders wished to call the town "White Creek," and the Scotch "New Ferth;" and <sup>9</sup> The censua reports 9 churches; 3 Bap., 3 M. E., Presh., the town was speedily settled. WHITE CREEK's—was formed from Cambridge, April 17, 1815. It is the s. E. corner town of the co. The surface of the s. portion is gently rolling, and the central and N. portions are occupied by the Taghkanick Mts. The summits of these mountains are rocky and broken and covered with forests, and their sides are bounded by abrupt declivities and perpendicular ledges. The principal streams are Hoosick River, Owl Kil, Pumpkin Hook, Center, White, and Little White Creeks. The upper conrse of Owl Kil is through a deep and narrow valley abounding with picturesque views. A small vein of lead has been discovered three-fourths of a mi. E. of Posts Corners. The soil is a fine quality of gravelly loam. More sheep are raised in this town than in any other in the co. Garden seeds and flax are largely cultivated. North White Creek (p.v.) adjoins Cambridge. White Creek, (p. o.,) Posts Corners, Center White Creek, (p. o.,) Ash Grove, Dorrs Corners, Pumpkin Hook, and Martindale Corners are hamlets. The Walloemsac Patent, lying partly in this town, on the s., was settled by the Dutch. Among the other grants were the Bain, Embury, Grant and Campbell, and Lake and Van Cuyler, Patents. A colony of Irish Methodists settled near Ash Grove about 1770; and here was organized the second M. E. church in America, by Thos. Ashton (from whom the locality was named) and Rev. Philip Embury. James and Thos. Morrison made the first settlement, near White Creek.6

WHITEHALL'-was incorp. by patent March 31, 1765, as "Skenesborough." Its name was changed March 23, 1786. It lies at the s. extremity of Lake Champlain. Its surface is monntainous in the w. and level and undulating in the center and E. Saddle Mt., upon the w. border, is nearly 900 ft, above the surface of the lake. The principal streams are Wood Creek, Mettowee (or Pawlet) and Poultney Rivers. Upon Wood Creek, near its mouth, is a fall which furnishes a valuable water-power. The soil of the greater part of the town is a hard, stiff clay and is best adapted to grazing. Considerable mannfacturing is carried on in town.9 Whitehall (p. v.) is situated near the mouth of Wood Creek, on Lake Champlain. The R. R., canal, and lake trade give this place commercial importance. The Whitehall Academy is in the E. part of the village. Pop. 3.225. This town was the scene of stirring military events during the French War. 10 The first settler was Maj. Skene, who located here, with 30 families, in 1761. Nominally associating 24 others with himself, he obtained a patent of 25,000 acres, March 31, 1765; and a patent of 9,000 acres in the town of Hampton and Whitehall, July 6, 1771, known as Skene's Little Patent. About 1770 he bnilt a massive stone house and barn, a forge, and one or two sawmills. He also built a sloop upon the lake, and a road, known as "Skenes Road," 30 mi. through the wilderness toward Salem. He appears to have been a man of great energy of character, and he endeavored to secure solid and permanent advantages to the infant settlement.11 Upon the approach of the Revolution, Maj. Skene espoused the royalist cause, and his house was taken by the Americans in May, 1775.12 In 1776 an American garrison was stationed here, and a small fleet was fitted organization. In 1769 a Presh, society was formed, Rev. John Harford first pastor. Their church, then unfinished, was fortified by Capt. Jos. McCracken in 1777, and soon after was burned by the enemy. There are now 7 churches in town; 2 M. E., Asso. Presb., Asso. Ref Presb., F. W. Bap., Presb., and Morav.

2 For a great number of years this school was one of the most noted in Eastern New York. A mong the &stinguished persons who have received a portion of their education here were Hon. Samuel Nelson, of the U. S. Supreme Court. Hon. John Savage, formerly Chief Justice of N.Y., and Rev. Dr. Bethune, of Brooklyn.

before. The census reports 8 churches in town; 2 Bap., 2 M. E., Friends, Presb. R. C., and Asso. Ref. Presb. 6 Among the other early settlers were Buel Beebe, Maj. John Porter, Sphraim, James, and Robt. Cowan. David Slarrow, Sam'l Clark, John McClung, Geo. Duncan, Robt. and George Gilmore, Wm. Eager, Wm. Selfrage, Sam'l Ball, and John Scott. The early white larger, with Sairage, said ball and John Scott. The early settlers in the E. part of the town were Thomas Ashton, Edmund Wells, John and Eben-zer Allen, David Sprague, Seth Chase, John Haroun, Thes. McCool, John Woods, Simeon Fowler, John Young, Josiah Dewey, and John Corey. John Rhodes built the first clothing works, at Pumpkin Hook.

9 The manufactures consist of lumber, machinery, vessels, boats, carpets, and sash and blinds. An extensive lumber trade is carried on with Canada and with ports on the Hudson, through Lake Champlain and the Champlain Canal.

10 Maj. Israel Putnam was stationed here in the summer of 1758, with 35 rangers, to watch the motions of the enemy and prevent the passage of small parties. A point—new known as Puts Rock—three-fourths of a mi. N. of the village, overlooking Puts Reck—three-tourths of a mit. S. of the village, overlooking South Fay, and completely commanding the passage of Wood Creek, was chosen, and a stone breastwork was built and con-ceded by bushes. Soon after the work was finished, a party of 500 French led by the partisan Mokang, upon a secret expedi-tion, attempted to pose up the creek in the night. They were received by a most destructive fire, and before they could recover from their surprise, one-half of their number were killed. Finding that the enemy bad landed below and that he was in danger of being surrounded. Putnam quietly withdrew, with no loss, and but two men wounded.

11 Maj. Skene become acquainted with this place while accompanying the expedition under Gen. Amberst, in 1755. Soon after be planted his first settlement, of 30 families, he was of liged to go to the West Indies; and upon his return in 1763 he found but 15 families remaining. He brought a number of slaves from that 15 families remaining. He brought a number of staves from the West Indies, and employed them and a large number of discharged soldiers upon his works. His house was 30 by 40 ft, on the ground, and 24 stories high; and his barn was 130 ft, long, with massive stone walls pierced with portholes. The other huildings in his settlement were a few frail houses belonging to his tenants.

out in the harbor and put under the command of Benedict Arnold. Upon the approach of Burgoyne's army, in 1777, the fort was blown up and the houses, mills, &c. were all burned.\(^1\) During the War of 1812 this place became an important depôt of military stores. The first steamboat on the lake was launched here, in 1809. The Champlain Canal was constructed to this point from Fort Edward in 1819, and finished to Troy in 1824.2 In 1806 Gen. Williams made arrangements for building a church, but died before he could carry them into effect. His son (Col. John Williams) and his widow earried out the design, and presented the building to the Asso. Presb. Soc. It was rebuilt in 1826.3

Maj. Skene the younger, 50 tenants, and 12 negroes were taken [ prisoners. The sloop was sent down the lake to Col. Ethan Allen at Shoreham, Vt. In the cellar of the house was found the body of the wife of the elder Skene, which had been preserved many years to secure to the hn-band an annuity devised to her "while she remained above ground." The Americans buried the body in the rear of the house.

WAYNE COUNTY.

This county was formed from Ontario and Seneca, April 11, 1823. It lies upon Lake Ontario, w. of the center of the State; is centrally distant 171 mi. from Albany, and contains 624 sq. mi. A series of bluffs 25 to 75 ft, high extends along the lake shore; and from their summits the surface rises in gradual slopes to the lake ridge, a distance of 4 to 5 mi. This ridge is 50 to 200 ft, wide on the top, and about 200 ft, above the lake. It declines toward the E., and upon the E. border of the co. it can scarcely be traced. The declivity of the ridge upon the s. is 8 to 20 ft.: and from its foot the surface gradually slopes upward to the surface of the limestone ridge, which extends E. and w. through the co. a little N. of the center and forms the watershed between Lake Ontario and Clyde River. The summit of this ridge is 140 feet above the lake ridge, 340 feet above the lake, and is about 3 mi, wide. It is highest upon the w. border of the co., and gradually declines toward the E.<sup>2</sup> From its southern edge the surface gradually declines to Clyde River and slopes upward from the river to the s. line of the co. South of the limestone ridge are numerons drift ridges extending N, and s, and from one-fourth to one and a half miles in length. The declivities are usually very steep, and the summits 40 to 100 ft. above the surrounding surface. They usually end in an abrupt declivity toward the N, but gradually decline toward the s. They are composed of clay, sand, and gravel, and seem to be deposits from great currents of water. Considerable marshy laud extends along Clyde and Seneca Rivers, and also through the co. N. of the lake ridge.

Ganargwa, or Mud Creek, enters the s. w. corner of the co. from Ontario, flows in an irregular but generally easterly course to Lyons, where it unites with the Canandaigua Outlet and forms Clyde River,<sup>3</sup> which continues eastward to the e. bounds of the co., where it discharges its waters into Seneca River. These streams receive from the n. West Red Creek, East Red Creek, and Black Creek, and from the s. numerous small brooks. The streams flowing into Lake Ontario are Bear, Deer, Davis, Salmon, Thomas, Wolcott, and Big and Little Red Creeks; First, Seeond, and Third Creeks flow into Great Sodus Bay. The principal indentations upon Lake Ontario are Great Sodus, East, Port, and Blind Sodus Bays. Great Sodus Bay forms an excellent harbor. Crusoe Lake, in the s. e. corner, is the only considerable body of water. The streams, in their course through the drift deposits and lake ridge, have usually worn deep ravines.

The lowest rock in the co. is the Medina sandstone, appearing upon the lake and in the ravines near it. It occupies a strip with an average width of 2 mi., widest at the w. Next above this is the Clinton group of limestone and shales, extending to the foot of the limestone ridge. Next above is the Niagara limestone, forming the summit ridge and occupying a strip about 3 mi. in width. South of this is the Onondaga salt group of red and green shales and gypsum, extending to the s. border and occupying nearly one-half of the co. The rocks are mostly covered by thick deposits of drift, and are only exposed in the ravines of the streams. Shells, marl, and muck are found in large quantities in the marshy regions. Weak brine and sulphur springs are found in various localities in the Medina sandstone and the red shales of the Onondaga salt group.

The soil derived from the drift deposits is generally a sandy or gravelly loam, with an occasional intermixture of elay. The soil along the lake shore, principally derived from the disintegration of Medina sandstone, is a reddish, sandy loam. At the foot of the mountain ridge, both N. and s., is a strip of very productive clay loam. In the valley of Clyde River the soil is principally a gravelly loam and alluvium. The marsh lands, when drained, are covered deep with a rich vegetable mold, which develops into the most fertile soil in the eo.

Agriculture forms the leading pursuit. The branches, in the order of importance, are grain raising, stock growing, dairying, and wool growing. Fruit is extensively cultivated, and is rapidly becoming one of the most important agricultural products. Few counties in the State surpass this in the quality or quantity of apples and peaches annually produced. A strip of land bordering upon Lake Ontario, and extending from Niagara River to the Oswego, seems peculiarly adapted to the cultivation of apples and peaches, and is rapidly becoming one of the most important fruitgrowing regions in the State. In Wayne co. $25,000 worth of dried fruit is annually prepared. Peppermint and tobacco are raised along the valley of Mud Creek.

The county seat is located at the village of Lyons, near the center of the co. The courthouse is a fine cut stone building, fronting Church St. It has an Ionic portico, and is surmonnted by a large dome. The jail is a commodious stone building, in the w. part of the village. It contains rooms for the jailer's residence, and is one of the best arranged and conducted establishments of the kind in the State. The county clerk's office is a fireproof building, fronting Pearl St., a little s. of the courthouse. The poorhouse is situated upon a farm of 130 acres 1½ mi. w. of the courthouse. The average number of inmates is 67, supported at a weekly cost of $1.55 each. A school is taught throughout the year. The farm yields a revenue of $1,400. The buildings are insufficient for the accommodation of the iumates; but the institution seems to be well arranged and well kept.

Six weekly newspapers are now published in the co.2

Arcadia, Palmyra, and Macedon. A ship canal ronte and a R. R. route have been surveyed, connecting the Erie Canal and Central R. R. with Lake Ontario.

The western 9 towns in this co. belonged to the Pulteuey Estate; the E. part, including Savannah, Galen, and portions of Wolcott and Butler, constituted a portion of the Military Tract. The intermediate portion, except the s. 3 tiers of lots in Rose, were compensation lands granted to the Pulteney Estate for the gore between the old and new pre-emption lines. The earliest white inhabitants were hunters and trappers. The first permanent settlements were made in 1789, at Palmyra, under the auspices of General John Swift, agent of a company of settlers from Conn.; and at Lyons, under Charles Williamson, agent for the Pulteney Estate.<sup>3</sup> From 1790 to 1794, colonies came in from R. I., Long Island, and Maryland. The settlements did not progress with great rapidity for several years, owing to the diseases which prevailed. The fear of Indian hostilities and of British invasion during the War of I812 greatly retarded settlement. On the return of peace, settlers began to arrive in considerable numbers, principally from New England and Eastern N. Y. The completion of the Erie Canal gave a new impulse to immigration; and in a few years the flourishing villages of Lyons, Clyde, Palmyra, and Newark were built up along its course. The N. Y. Central R. R., built through the co. in 1852-53, greatly benefited the co. and enhanced the value of the lands.

The most notable of the later incidents in the co. have been the rise of Mermonism in Palmyra,<sup>5</sup> and the commencement of spiritual rappings in Arcadia.6

ARCADIA—was formed from Lyons, Feb. 15, 1825. It lies on the s. border of the co., a little w. of the center. Its surface is a rolling region, broken by drift ridges. Mnd Creek flows E. through the town, N. of the center, and receives several small streams as tributaries. The soil is a sandy, gravelly loam, mixed with clay on the hills. Gypsum is found in the s. w., and marl in the center. Newark, (p. v.,) including Arcadia, (p. v.,) in the s. part, on the canal, was incorp. July 21, 1853, as Newark. It contains 7 churches, a bank, flouring mill, tannery, 3 furnaces, and several manufactories. It is a flourishing canal village and a station upon the N. Y. C. R. R. Pop. 2,042. Fairville, (p. v.,) about 5 mi. N., contains I church, a tannery, a limited amount of manufactures, and 159 inhabitants. Marbletown, near the s. E. corner, contains a church and 10 houses. Jessups Corners and Hydeville are hamlets. Settlement was commeneed in 1791, by Joseph Winters and B. Franklin.<sup>7</sup> The first church (M. E.) was organized in Roger Benton was the first settled minister, in 1806.8 A family named Fox, residing at Hydeville, in Areadia, first heard the mysterious sounds known as the "rappings" on the night of March 31, 1849. Investigations were made in regard to the origin of the raps, but nothing definite was settled upon. The family soon after removed to Rochester, the "raps" accompanying them; and hence the name "Rochester Rappings." A series of investigations was instituted, and the matter became public, some claiming for it a spiritual origin, but the great majority pronouncing it a humbug or delusion. From this source modern spiritualism originated.

BUTLER—was formed from Wolcott, Feb. 26, 1826. It is the center town on the E. border of the co. Its surface is diversified, level in the s. E. and rising into ridges in the N. W. The highest point is Armstrong Hill. The principal stream is Wolcott Creek, which rises in the N. E. and, flowing in a circuitons course, leaves the town near the N. W. corner. The soil in the valleys is a gravelly loam, and on the hills it is generally clay, with a tenacious subsoil. Lime is manufactured in the N. part to a limited extent. South Butler, (p. v.,) on the s. line, contains 5 churches, a classical school, several manufactories, and about 400 inhabitants. West Butler (p. o.) contains 10 houses; Westbury, (p. v.,) in the N. E. eorner, partly in the town of Victory, of Clyde. Some work has been done on parts of this route.

<sup>1</sup> In 1827, a charter was obtained for building a ship canal from the Eric Canal, at Montezuma, to Great Sodus Bay. from the leffe tranal, at Monorezuma, to Great Sodus Bay. Surveys were made, but no work was ever done. A new charter was obtained by John Greig, of Canandaigua, in 1836; and another by Gen. Wm. II. Adams, in 1851. The route named in the last charter is from Sodus Bay to the Eric Canal, a little w.

The Sodus Point & Southern R. R. was incorp. in April, 1852.
The road was to extend from Sodus Bay to Newark. The route

The road was to extend from Soulis Bay to Newark. An count has been surveyed, but no work has been done. A survey has slso been made for a R. R. from Clyde to Sodus Bay.

8 Mr. Williamson built roads from Palmyra and Lyons to Sodus Point; upon these the early settlers mostly located. He also laid out a city upon Sodus Bay, which has not yet been built.

4 The Maryland settlers brought with them several slaves; but it was soon found that slave labor was unprofitable.

HURON—was formed from Wolcott, as "Port Bay," Feb. 25, 1826. Its name was changed March 17, 1834. It lies on Lake Ontario, E. of the center of the co. A part of Great Sodus Bay lies in the N. w. corner. East Bay, in the N., and a part of Port Bay, in the N. E., extend into the town. Its surface is rolling, with a general northern inclination. In the w. and n. w., near Great Sodus Bay, are several tracts of swamp lands. The lake shore rises in a series of bluffs, the highest of which-Chimney Bluff-is 175 ft. above the lake, and Bay Bluff 120 ft. Several small streams flow n. through the town, the principal of which is Mudge Creek, which empties into East Bay. The soil is a sandy and gravelly loam, intermixed with clay in the s. North Huron (p.v.) contains 2 churches, a saw and grist mill, and 40 houses; South Huron (Huron p. o.) 1 church, a townhouse, and 20 houses. ## WESTCHESTER COUNTY.

This county, constituting one of the original divisions of the State under the English rule, soon after the first conquest, was organized Nov. I, 1683, with its present limits. It lies upon the E. bank of the Hudson, in the s. e. part of the State, and is bounded on the E. by Conn. and on the s. by Long Island Sound. It is centrally distant 105 mi. from Albany, and contains 525 sq. mi. The surface consists of several ridges of hills parallel to the river and separated by wide valleys. The hills are in two general ranges, the first extending along the river and the second along the Conn. line. They are subdivided into a great number of minor ridges and hills, all extending N. and s. The highest summits are 600 to 1,000 ft, above tide. The valleys, extending N. and s., are continuous, affording ample opportunity for the construction of roads and railroads; and they are generally bordered by gradually sloping hillsides.\(^1\) In some localities the hills are abrupt and rocky. The principal streams are Peekskill Creek, Furnace Brook, Croton, Pocantico, and Neperhan Rivers, and Tibbetts Brook, tributaries of the Hudson; Bronx River, Westchester and Hutchinsons Creeks, Mamaroneck and Byram Rivers, flowing into Long Island Sound; Maharness and Stamford Mill Rivers, flowing E. into Conn.; and Muscoot Creek, Plum Brook, and Titiens, Cross, and Kisko Rivers, tributaries of the Croton. The lakes are small bodies of water scattered through the hilly portions. The s. E. portion of the co., along the Sound, is deeply indented with bays and estuaries, which in some places are bordered by extensive marshes. Most of the streams which flow into the Sound afford, by the reflux of the tide, an intermitting hydraulic power, which is employed in several places.

The rocks of the co. consist principally of granite and gneiss, of many dissimilar varieties, and of white crystalline limestone. These rocks crop out upon the declivities and summits of most of the hills, affording an abundance of the best kind of building stone. The marble quarries at Sing Sing and other places are extensively wrought, their products affording one of the most valuable exports of the co. Traces of various kinds of ore have been discovered; but all search for profitable metallic veins has proved unsuccessful. Several mineral springs are found in different sections, the principal of which is the Chappaqua Spring, 3 mi. e. of Sing Sing. It emits sulphuretted hydrogen and is said to possess useful medicinal properties. The soil, derived principally from the disintegration of the primitive rocks, is light, sandy, and, naturally, only moderately productive; but, by a continued process of scientific culture, it has been rendered very fertile. Upon the Hudson and the Sound and in various other localities are drift deposits and alluvium, furnishing a much more productive soil. The people are principally engaged in gardening and fruit raising, fattening cattle, and supplying milk for the New York market. Bricks in immense quantities are manufactured along the Hudson for exportation. Other manufactures are largely carried on in the villages adjacent to New York.

This co. is distinguished for beautiful and picturesque scenery, noticeable in nearly every part. The highlands that border upon the Hudson afford an extended view of that river, the Palisades, and of the hilly country of Rockland and Orange. Along the s. E. border fine views are obtained of the Sound, the numerous green islands along the coast, and the adjacent shores of Long Island. In the interior the landscape is agreeably diversified by hills, dales, and clear, running streams. Many wealthy inhabitants of New York have erected beantiful villas and country residences upon the finest sites; and the hills of the co. are now studded with these splendid specimens of architectural art.

In the vicinity of New York are numerous small villages inhabited by mechanics and working men doing business in the city. These people go back and forth daily on the lines of railroad, or by steamboat, living in the country for the sake of economy. A considerable amount of manufactures is carried on at these suburban villages. A large transient population, mostly from New York, make this co. their residence during the summer months.

<sup>1</sup> The roads that cross the co. z, and w, are a constant succession of ascents and descents, while those extending w, and y through the valleys are nearly level.

The co. is a half-shire, the co. buildings being located respectively at Bedford and White Plains,1 The courthouse at Bedford is a wooden structure; and attached to it is a jail for the temporary confinement of prisoners. The co. buildings at White Plains are of granite, and are the most commodious and costly buildings of the kind in the State,2

The poorhouse is located upon a farm of 173 acres in Mount Pleasant, 5 mi. N. of White Plains. The average number of inmates is 225, supported at a weekly cost of  $68\frac{1}{2}$  ets. each. The farm yields a revenue of \$2,500. A school is kept throughout the year. The buildings are of stone; and the whole establishment seems to be well arranged.

The Hudson River R. R. extends along the river banks through Yonkers, Greenburgh, Mount Pleasant, Ossining, and Cortlandt. The Harlem R. R. extends N. through the central part of the co., extending through Morrisania, West Farms, Yonkers, East Chester, Scarsdale, Greenburgh, White Plains, Mount Pleasant, New Castle, Bedford, Lewisboro, and North Salem. The New York & New Haven R. R. extends from the Harlem R. R. at East Chester E. through Pelham, New Roehelle, Mamaroneek, Harrison, and Ryc. A branch road extends from the Harlem R. R. at Morrisania s. E. about 2 mi, to Port Morris. The other principal public work in the co. is the Croton dam and the great aqueduct which supplies the city of New York with water. Lines of steamers ply between New York and the various ports along the Hudson and East Rivers, affording cheap and easy means of communication with the great city.

Five newspapers are now published in the co.3

When first known to the whites, this co. was occupied by the Mohegans, who were divided into several bands or clans with distinctive names.4 They paid tribute to the Five Nations, and were known in early documents as "River Indians."

<sup>1</sup> At the organization of the co. in 1683, the courts were estabhshed at Westchester, and were continued there until 1750. court of sessions was held at East Obester for some time. By act of Dec. 16, 1758, the justices and supervisors were directed to select a new site for a courthouse, which was located at White Plains: and in that year, 1760, and 1762, £2,000 were voted to erect and finish it. It was used until 1776, when it was burned. By an act of May 1, 1786, £1,800 were appropriated for the erection of a courthouse at White Plains and another at Bedford. under the superintendence of Stephen Ward, Ebenezer Lock-wood, Jonathan G. Tompkins, Ebenezer Purdy, Thee, Thomas, Richard Hatfield, and Richard Sacket, jr. Prisoners had pre-viously been confined in the New York jail; and courts had for a time been held in the Presbyterian church of Bedford. Both buildings thus creeted are still standing, and owned by the co. A clerk's office was built at White Plants, in 1839, adjacent to the courthouse, in the old part of the village. The Provincial Convention held its sessions a few days in July, 1776, at the conrthouse in White Plans; and in front of it the Declaration of Independence was publicly read upon its receipt by that body. The building, and what remained of the village, were wantonly burned by a New England major on the night of Nov 5, 1776.2 An act passed March 30, 1855, anthorized the county trea-

2 An act passed March 30, 1855, authorized the county treasurer to long $25,000 for the erection of a new courthouse, jail, clerk's office, and surrogate's office, upon a site in White Plains, to be selected by the supervisors, and under a committee to be appointed by them. The present buildings were creeted in 1856-57, under the superintendence of Abraham Hatfield. States Barton, Wm. Marshall, jr., David Hunt, and Geo, C. Finch, at a cost of $1,20,000. They are build of granute quarried near the village, and form 3 buildings connected by corridors. The front part is devoted to the records of the clerk and surrogate, is fireward themshown and its surchous reasus are funished with. proof throughout, and its spacious rooms are furnished with iron cases for books and papers. The records have been re-cently bound, and put in complete order for preservation. The centry bound and put in compact that is a personner, sheriff's office and residence; and the rear building is the jail, connected with the court room only by a verandah. Prisoners may be with the court room only by a verandah. Prisoners in brought into court without liability to rescue by a crowd.

cells, 36 in number, are built in 2 tiers in a central block.

By an act of April 16, 1858, the office of Register of Deeds was created, to be filled by election trienmally. The act took effect Jan. 1, 1859.

Settlement began under the Dutch authority, in the sonthern part, and before the Revolution nearly every part of the co. had been occupied. A large part was embraced by the Cortlandt, Philipsburgh, Pelham, Scarsdale, and Fordham Manors. Of these the first sent a representative to the General Assembly, and the second was forfeited by the attainder of its proprietor in the The borough of Westchester, including the present towns of Westchester, West Farms, and Morrisania, was also represented by a member, and had a mayor's court. This co. was the scene of many events of great importance in the Revolution, and, from its occupying the middle ground between the opposing armies, was alternately overrun and pillaged by the refugees of both.<sup>2</sup> The southern part was taxed £2,000, May 6, 1784, to repay Revolutionary expenses.

BEDFORD3—was first formed under Connecticut, in May, 1697. Its rights were confirmed by New York in April, 1704; and it was fully organized as a town March 7, 1788. It is an interior town, lying N. E. of the center of the co. Its surface is elevated and broken by small hills and valleys, and is almost entirely available for agricultural purposes. Croton River forms part of the N. boundary; Maharness River flows through a small portion of the s. part; and Cross River flows through the N. E. corner. Byram Lake lies on the s. border. The soil is generally a good quality of sandy and gravelly loam, but stony on the hills. Bedford, (p. v.,) s. E. of the center, is surrounded by hills, one of which on the N. retains its Indian name of "Aspetong." The village is a half-shire, and contains a courthouse, 2 churches, the Bedford Academy, a Female Institute, and 30 houses. Bedford Station, (p. o., ) on the Harlem R. R., contains 10 houses. Katonah, (p. v.,) on Cross River, near its junction with the Croton, contains 30 houses. Mount Kisko, (p. v., ) a station on the Harlem R. R., on the w. border of the town, contains 200 inhabitants. Whitlockville is a station on the Harlem R. R. near the. N. border. The town was mostly included in a purchase made July 1, 1640, by Nathan Thrner, for New Haven, and sold the same year by the latter to Andrew Ward, Robert Coe, and 20 others, for £33. Other Indian purchases were made, the last of which was July 24, 1703.5 There are 8 churches in town.6

CORTLANDT'—was formed March 7, 1788. It lies upon the Hudson, in the N. w. corner of the co. Its surface is broken and hilly. The ranges of hills generally extend n. and s. and are separated by narrow valleys. The declivities are often steep and nearly precipitous. Anthonys Nose, on the N. line, 1,228 ft. above the river, is the highest land in the co. Although very broken, the surface generally is susceptible of cultivation. The principal streams are Croton River, flowing across the s. part, Furnace Brook, Peekskill Hollow Creek, and Gregorys Brook. The soil is generally a sandy and gravelly loam, with a strip of clay along the river. Among the mountains are found a variety of interesting minerals.9 Brick is extensively manufactured.10

1 These patents were granted as follows

Corthandt Patent was granted June 17, 1697, to Stephanus Van Cortlandt, with an annual quitrent of 40 shillings. It included the present towns of Cortlandt, Yorktown, Somers, and North Salem.

Philipsburgh Patent was granted June 12, 1703, to Frederick Philipse, at an annual quitrent of £4 12s. It included present towns of Greenburgh, Mount Pleasant, and Ossimug.

Pelham Patent was granted Oct. 25, 1687, to John Pell, and included the present town of Pelham and a part of New Rochelle.

Fordham Potent was granted in 1671 to John Archer, and iaportunan Forest was granted in 101 to John Archer, and la-childed 1,253 across in the present town of West Farms. Scarsdule Patent was granted March 2I, 1791, to Caleb Heath-cote, subject to an annual quitrent of £5. It included the present towns of Scarsdule, New Castle, North Castle, and a part of White Plains.

2 Two classes of brigands, equally destitute of principle, but - Two classes of brigains, equally assertine of principle, rapprofessing attachment to opposite interests, infested the co-committing atrochous crimes without punishment, and often preying upon their nominal friends with as little mercy as upon their avowed enemies. Of these, the "Cowloys" professed tory sentiments, while the "Skinners" were estensibly attached to the American cause. The two parties often operated in concert, the Cowboys bringing contraband goods from New York to exchange for the property plundered by the Skin New York to exchange for the property pinnered by the sameers; and, when a prefext was necessary, a skirmish would occur, and the goods from the enemy would be openly borne away, as if lawfully captured,—Bolton's Westchester, I, p. 211.

3 Named from Bedford-bire, England, whence many of the early settlers came. It formed part of the territory known as Rippowams. Privilege of plantation was granted under the present name by a court of election held at Hartford, Conn., May 11, 1682. In 1697 a patent was granted by Conn to the In 1700 the royal approval was obtained to the survey of 1683 and '84, by which Bedford and Rye were included in New York; and in April, 1704, a patent with town privileges was granted by that colony. In 1690 there were 31 proprietors residing in town.

4 County courts are held alternately here and at White Plains. The village was burned in the Revolution by a party of British light horse, on their route to Fairfield, Conn. By an act passed April 11, 1785, courts were ordered to be held in the Presb. church until the courthouse should be rebuilt, or till the fur-the roder of the Legislature.

The title to 5,115 acres of land in this town became invested in Jacobus Van Cortlandt at an early period. This estate was divided in 1743, Fred-rick Van Cortlandt receiving 1,424, Abram De Peyster 1,110, John Chambers 1,292, and Peter Jay 1,239 acress Cort John Lux a son, of Peter Jay became invested acres. Gov. John Jay, a son of Peter Jay, became invested with a large portion of the last mentioned allotment. The estate is still owaed by his descendants. On a tract known as "the Hop Grounds" are still living many families of the same name as the first purchasers. Among these are families named Green, Miller, Holme, Roberts, Ambler, Clark, Ayers, Westcott, Simpkin, Mead, Webb, Clason, and Higgins. Tradition locates in this town the scene of a bloody engagement fought in Feb. 1644, between the Dutch and Indians, in which 500 of the latter

Peckskill, (p. v., ) upon Peckskill Bay, in the N. w. part of the town, was incorp. April 17, 1816. It is situated in an elevated valley surrounded by heights which afford extensive views of the river. It contains 10 churches, the Peckskill Academy, 4 boarding schools, a bank, newspaper office, and several manufactories.2 It is connected by a steam ferry with Caldwells Landing, and by a daily steamer and line of sloops with New York. It is a station upon the H. R. R. R. Pop. 3,538. Verplancks Point, (Verplanck p.o.,) upon the Hudson, near the center of the w. border of the town, was laid out in 1836. It contains a church, steamboat landing, several important brick manufactories, and I,456 inhabitants.3 Croton (Croton Landing p. o.) is a R. R. station, in the s. part of the town. It contains 4 churches, a rolling mill, wire mill, and several brickyards. Pop. 400. Crugers' (Boscobel p. o.) is a landing and R. R. station, 4 mi. s. of Peekskill. Annsville, a small village on Peckskill Creek, contains a church and wire mill.6 Cortiandville, near the Van Cortlandt mansion, contains a church, a planing mill, and about 20 houses. Oregon, on the line of Putnam co., contains a rolling mill and a wire mill. Mount Airy, E. of Croton, is a hamlet. Croton Point is a peninsula in the s, part of the town, devoted chiefly to vineyards. Montroses Point is a peninsula s, of Verplancks and separated from it by Meanagh Creek. Daniel Birdsall, Nathaniel Brown, Joseph Travis, and Capt. Isaac Conklin settled at Peekskill, in 1764.8 There are 18 churches in town.9

EAST CHESTER<sup>10</sup>—was recognized as a town March 7, 1788. It is an interior town, lying in the s. part of the co. Its surface is broken by ridges extending n, and s, and separated by narrow valleys. Bronx River, 1 forming the N. boundary, and Hutchinsons or East Chester Creek, 12 forming a portion of the E. boundary, are the principal streams. The soil is a sandy and gravelly loam, with some alluvium along the river intervales. Marble is extensively quarried along the w. border, 13 The Barlem R. R. extends along the valley of the Bronx, and the N. Y. & N. H. R. R. crosses the s. part of the town at nearly right angles to the hills, requiring heavy cuttings and embankments. A portion of the territory of the town is public land, under the management of 3 trustees. East Chester, (p.v., ) at the head of sloop navigation on Hutchinson Creek, contains 2 churches and 551 inhabitants. Mount Vernon, (p. v.,) a station at the junction of the Harlem and N. H. R. R.s, was incorp. Dec. 13, 1853. It contains 4 churches, several private schools, and 1,161 inhabitants. West Monnt Vernou contains 630 inhabitants; East Mount Vernon 275 inhabitants; and Waverly and Washingtonville are suburban villages, inhabited principally by mechanics and men doing business in New York. Bronxville, (p. v.,) on the line of Yonkers, is a R. R. station, and contains a manufactory of carriage axles. Tuckahoe (p. v.) is a R. R. station, near the marble quarries. Burpos Corners is a small settlement on the N. border. Fleetwood and Jacksonville are places projected ment to 1,350 men, and turns out 80,000,000 to 90,000,000 of Bricks annually. The pressed brick made here are known in market as "Crolon fronts," and sell at from $8 to $0 per M. There is a small firebrick manufactory at Peekskill, using clay from N. J.

3 Named from the family of Verplancks, former owners. This point lies opposite Stony Point; and upon it Fort La Favette was erected during the Revolution. King's Ferry, a Favette was erected during the Revolution. King's Ferry, a part of an important military route, was between the two outs. The fort was captured by the enemy, under Sir Henry Clinton in person, June 1, 1779, but was abandoned Oct. 21 of that year. Col. Livingston held command of this place in 1780, at the time of Arnold's treason; and the headquarters of Gen. Washington were located here for some time. This locality was called by the Indians "Meanigh," and was sold to Stephanus Van called by the Imbans" Meanigh. and was sold to separate sold Cortland in 1683, with the lands E. Called "App magipogh." A small creek N. was called "Tammoosis." The purchase was confirmed by patent, with a quitrent of 2 bushels of wheat. 8 The first store was built by Daniel Birdsall, in the vicinity of the Middle Dock. Capt. Swim is said to have sailed the first sloep from Pemart's Dock, in 1773.—Bollou's Westlester, I. (2). Many stirring events of the Revolution occurred in this vici-inty, and the country suffered much from the enemy's incur-sions. In March, 1777, Col. Bird landed with 500 men, and the few Americans stationed here fired the storchouses and retired In Sept. 1777, the whole village was sacked and burned. Ed in Sept. 1773, the whole village was sacked and bucned. Edmund Palmer, a tory spy, was hanged on Gallows Hill, 2 mi/s, of the village; and Daniel Strang, another spy from the enemy, was excented on a pear tree near the present academy. John Paulding, one of the captors of André, was a native of this village, and received from the State a farm in this town. His remains repose in the Episcopal graveyard, 2 mi/s, of the village, where a neat monument was erected, at the express of the lage, where a next monument was erected, at the expense of the lage, where a next monument was erected, at the expense of the corporation of New York, in 1827; and the work was completed with imposing ceremonies Nov. 22 of that year. Gen. Pierre Van Corthault formerly resided 2 mi. N. of Peckskill; and at this place Gen. McDougd posted his advanced guard when the enemy took possession of Peckskill in March, 1777. East of the Van Cortlandt mansion stands St. Peter's Church, an old, di-lepedated building, erected in 1767. The united parishes of St. Peter's and St. Philip's were endowed by Col. Beverly Robinson, and the title was confirmed Mar. 27, 1794. The property has been sold by order of the court of Chancery, and the avails equally divided between the two churches.

The Indian title was acquired in 1654 and confirmed in 1654, 1666, and 1700. Thos. Pell, the purchaser, granted it to James Eustis and Philip Pinkney, of Fairfield, Conn., and their associates. In 1665, 26 persons signed a covenant for the security of their mutual rights.\(^1\) The settlers were incorp. by patent, March 9, I666,2 and for many years were engaged in a controversy with Westchester concerning the bounds of their grant. A house was fortified in Oct. 1675, as a place of refinge from Indians. The first schoolhouse was agreed upon in 1683; and the site has ever since been occupied for this purpose. A townhouse was voted in 1685. East Chester was celebrated for the interest it took in behalf of Leisler.3 The Cong. church of this town was formed in 1665; and a place of worship was built about 1700.4 The town suffered greatly in the Revolution, from its being the middle ground between the opposing armies. A farm of 252½ acres was granted in this town to David Williams, one of the captors of André, June 16, 1783. He afterward removed to Schoharie co., where he died.

GREENBURGH5-was formed March 7, 1788. It lies on the w. border of the co., s. of the center. Its surface is much broken by hills parallel to the Hudson, and separated by narrow valleys, through which flow several streams, the principal of which is Neperhan or Sawmill Creek. Hudson River forms the w. boundary, and Bronx River the E. The soil is clay and sandy loam. Several marble quarries are worked near the Hudson. Harts Corners, (Moringville p. o.,) a station on the Harlem R. R., is a hamlet; Middletown is a settlement below Tarrytown; Halls Cormers. a neighborhood in the N. part; Ashford, a settlement 3 mi. below; Abbotsford, a locality near Dobbs Ferry; and Greenville, a neighborhood in the s. part. Indian purchase was made in 1649. In 1662 Connecticut bought all the Indian lands w. to the North River, and in I681-82-84 Frederick Philipse bought the lands now included in this and other towns which, by Patent of 1693, were formed into the Philipsburgh Manor. In 1779 they were forfeited by the attainder of Col. F. Philipse and sold for small sums to the former tenants, 10 under a pre-emption clause in the general act of May 12, 1784, for the sale of confiscated estates. The census reports 6 churches in town. 11

Westchester Co., I.p. 1-63. This town was inhabited by a powerful tribe of Indians known as the Wickquocs-quicks, called by the English Wickers Creeks; and until the middle of the last century the natives were numerous. A cold blooded murder of an Indian was avenged 20 years afterward by his nephew, in Sept. 1691. The Dutch attempted to retaliate, but without success. In Feb. 1641, the Mohawks made a descent upon these Indians, who fled to the Dutch for protection. The soldiers of the fort by night crossed to New Jersey, where the Indians had assembled, and wantonly butchered nearly 100; and 30 were nurdered at Corleans Hook. This barbarity aroused 11 tribes to vindictive war, in which the Dutch settlements around Fort Amsterdam were laid waste. A peace was agreed upon April 22, 1643, but was not fully established for many years.

Mamaroneck Creek, forming the E. boundary, and its tributary, Sheldrake Creek, are the principal streams. The coast is deeply indented by several bays, which divide it into numerous peninsulas and headlands. Mamaroneck, (p.v.,) near the head of Mamaroneck Bay, is partly in Rye. It contains 2 churches, (Prot. E. and M. E.,) and several manufactories not at present in operation. Orienta,9 Washingtonville, Chatsworth,10 and Hickory Grove are village plats and prospective villages. Kelloggsville, on the line of New Rochelle, has an extensive tide mill. The Indian title was obtained in 1640 and in 1662. John Richhell received a ground brief from the Dutch, and letters patent from Gov. Loveluce, Oct. 16, 1668, to three necks of land, at a quitrent of 8 bushels of winter wheat. In 1700 Caleb Heatheote acquired title to most of the eastern neck, with other lands, which was confirmed March 21, 1701. A portion descended in marriage to James De Lancey, afterward Governor of the colony, and ancestor of the present Episcopal Bishop of the Diocese of Western New York. Settlement began about 1660; and the village of Mamaroneck is one of the most ancient in the co. The town records date back to 1697; they were suspended from April, 1776, to April, 1785. During this period numerous events of historical interest occurred in this town. The day before the battle of White Plains, Col. Smallwood surprised and cut off a large body of the enemy under Major Rogers, stationed upon Nelson Hill. Col. White, of the Continental army, was overtaken near this place by Lieut. Hickford, and some thirty stragglers, who had taken refuge upon the ice, were killed.

Early in the war a division of the American army was stationed here; but after the disasters of Long Island it retired northward, and British troops were posted there, but not without annoyance from partisan corps. The dwellings at Morrisania were burned the same day as was the conrthonse at White Plains.

MOUNT PLEASANT—was formed March 7, 1788. Ossining was taken off in 1845. It lies upon the Hudson, near the center of the w. border of the co. Its surface is broken by high ridges, the principal of which are Buttermilk and Chappaqua Hills. Bronx River forms the E. boundary; and Neperhan and Pocantico Rivers flow obliquely across the town. The soil is a clayey and sandy loam, well adapted to enlitivation. There are several marble quarries in town.3 Pleasantville, (p. v.,) near the N. line, contains 2 churches and 358 inhabitants. Unionville, (Neperhan p.o.,) a station upon the Harlem R. R. contains 97 inhabitants. mantown, on Pocantico River, in the s. w. part of the town, is a suburb of Tarrytown. It contains 5 churches, the Irving and Tarrytown Institutes, and about 1,500 inhabitants. Sleepy Hollow, Upper Cross Roads, and Lower Cross Roads are hamlets. This town was included in the Manor of Philipsburgh, granted to Frederick Philipse; and by his will, dated Dec. 9, 1702, he granted to his son Adolph the portion of the manor N. of Dobbs Ferry, including this town. The title descended to his son Frederick, and was forfeited by the attainder of a son of the latter of the same name in 1779. One of the principal grantees under the State was Gerard G. Beeckman. Many Revolutionary associations are connected with this town; and several encounters took place within its limits. The census reports 6 churches in town.6

NEW CASTLE<sup>7</sup>—was formed from North Castle, March 18, 1791. A part of Somers was annexed May 12, 1846. It is an interior town, lying n. of the center of the co. Its surface is much broken by hills having a general course a little E. of N., the principal of which are Mount Prospect and the Chappaqua Hills, terminating in Mount Kisko. The Neperhan, Bronx, and Pocantico Rivers rise in this town. Upon the borders are Chappaqua, Wampas, and Kirby Ponds, and Croton Lake. Chappaqua Sulphur Springs, 4 mi. N. E. from Sing Sing, have acquired a local notoriety. The soil is a gravelly clay and sandy loam. Mount Kisko (p. o.) is a small village and R.R. station, on the line of Bedford. New Castle (p.o.) is a small scattered village, upon Kirby Pond, near the line of Bedford. Chappaqua (p.o.) is a R. R. station, near the s. line. Sarlesville is a hamlet, near the center of the town; and here the town business is generally transacted. This town was included within Riehbell's purchase of 1660, and, with other lands, was sold to Caleb Heathcote, and was patented to him and 10 associates 10 Feb. 14, 1701. It was afterward known as the "West Patent of Northeastle," or simply "West Patent." Settlement began about 1720, or a little earlier. At the time of the Revolution it formed one of the precincts of Rye parish. It was greatly annoyed by sudden incursions of plundering parties; and St. George's church was for a long time occupied as a gnardhouse and hospital by the Continental troops. The eensus reports 5 churches in town.11

NEW ROCHELLE—was recognized as a town March 7, 1788. It lies upon the Sound, in the s. part of the co., and extends northward in a long, narrow strip. The surface is moderately

Davenports Neck, a peninsula containing 200 acres, and several fine islands in the Sound, belong to this town.2 Crystal Lake, E. of the village, is chiefly celebrated for its ice, large quantities of which are annually "harvested." The soil is fertile and peculiarly adapted to fruit raising.3 New Rochette, (p.v.,) upon an estuary from the Sound, in the E. part of the town, was incorp. Oct. 5, 1857. It contains 6 churches, several private schools, and about 2,000 inhabitants. A portion of the village and the lands surrounding it are occupied by elegant villas and country residences of persons doing business in New York. The steamboat landing is a half mile s. w. of the village, on a small island connected with the main land by a stone causeway. The village is a station on the N. Y. & N. H. R. B. Beechwood Cemetery, incorp. Jan. 30, 1854, lies a mile w. of the village. West New Rochette, Petersville, and Upper New Rochelle are scattered villages, mostly inhabited by Germans. This town was embraced in the Manor of Pelham, and was sold by John Pell, Sept. 20, 1689, to Jacob Leisler, for the settlement of a company of French Huguenots. These people are said to have been brought over in one of the king's ships, and to have landed on the N. E. part of Davenports Neck, then called "Bauffets" or "Bounfoys Point." They mostly purchased under Leisler in 1690. There were 23 freeholders in town in 1708. The town records commence Nov. 1, 1699, and until 1735 were kept partly in French. They were suspended from April 2, 1776, to June 24, 1783. A French church was organized in 1689, and in 1709 most of the members conformed to the Episcopal faith; and this denomination are now owners of property given by Pell. The Presbyterians also claim succession from the first French church, a part of the members of which did not conform.6

NORTH CASTLE7—was formed March 7, 1788. New Castle was taken off in 1791. It occupies a long, narrow strip on the E. border of the co., adjoining Stamford and Greenwich, Conn. Its surface is much broken by hills, particularly in the w. part. It is drained by Maharness, Byram, and Bronx Rivers and their branches. Rye Pond lies on the s. border; Byram Pond on the line of Bedford; and Wampus Pond on the line of New Castle. Cobamong Pond, a mile E. of Byram Pond, has no inlet and is very deep. The soil is clay and sandy loam. North Castle (p. v.) contains a church and a few honses. Armonk, (p. v., ) near the center, contains 3 churches, a woolen factory, and 20 houses. Kensico. (p. v.,) in the s. part, contains several manufactories and 103 inhabitants. Quarter Station is on the N. H. R. R., in the extreme s. part. The first settlements commenced at a very early period. The census reports 7 churches in town.12

NORTH SALEM<sup>13</sup>—was formed March 7, 1788. A part was annexed to Lewisboro in 1844. It is the N.E. corner town of the co. Its surface is hilly, the summits rising 100 to 300 ft. above the valleys. Croton River forms the w. boundary. Titicus14 River, a principal branch of the Croton, flows w. from Conn. through near the center. The valley of this stream varies in width from ½ mi. to 1½ mi., and is bordered by steep hills. Peach Pond, on the N. border, covers 400 acres.

OSSINING5—was formed from Mount Plensant, May 2, 1845. It lies upon the Hudson, N. of the center of the co. Its surface is mostly a hilly upland, the ridges extending parallel to the river. Prospect Hill is a commanding eminence on the s. line of the town. Pocantico River forms its E. boundary. Marble is extensively quarried, and traces of several metals have been found. The soil is a productive, gravelly and clayey loam. Sing Sing, (p. v.,) upon the Hudson, near the center of the w. border of the town, was incorp. April 2, 1813. It is beautifully situated upon ground gradually rising from the river to the height of 180 ft., and at most points affording fine views of Tappan Bay and the opposite shore of the Hudson. It contains 4 churches, the Mount Pleasant Academy, a female seminary, and several other popular female schools. Pop. about 3,500. This village is chiefly noted for being the seat of one of the N. Y. State prisons. The prison was erected at this place in I825, with a view of employing the convict labor upon the marble quarries. It receives convicts from certain southern and eastern counties, as specified by statute. Prospect Mill<sup>9</sup> is a scattered settlement along the s. border. Spring Valley, E. of Sing Sing, and Sparta, s. of Sing Sing, are hamlets. This town was included in the Manor of Philipsburgh, and was settled by the Dutch previous to the commencement of the last century. WESTCHESTER4—was organized as a town, Nov. 7, 1788. West Farms was taken off in 1846. It lies on the Sound, in the extreme s, part of the co. It is bounded on the w. by Bronx River, and on the s. and E. by the Sound. Its surface is generally low and flat along the coast and rolling further inland. Several bays and estuaries extend far inland and divide the land into several peninsulas and necks. The principal of the latter are Classons Point,<sup>5</sup> between Bronx and Westchester Rivers; Zeregors Point, next E.; and Throggs Neck, 6 a long and narrow promontory extending s. E. into the Sound. About 2,500 acres along Westchester River is a salt meadow, a portion of which is held as public property and managed by 3 trustees. The people are principally engaged in gardening and fruit growing. Westchester, (p. v.,) at the head of navigation on Westchester Creek, is a scattered village of about 1,000 inhabitants. Bronxdale, on the line of West Farms, has an extensive tape factory, a dye and bleach works, and about 400 inhabitants. Schuylerville, upon Throggs Neck, is a scattered village of 300 inhabitants. Integrity, near Bronxdale, has a tape factory. Connersyille, Wakefield, Centerville, and Unionport are modern villages. Fort Schuyler, upon the extremity of Throggs Neck, was begun in 1833; and in 1851 $848,013 had been expended upon it. The estimated cost of construction and repairs was then $873,013.7 The first settlement on Throggs Neck was made in 1642, by John Throckmorton and 35 associates, from New England, with the consent of the Dutch. The Indian title to the land was extinguished in 1643, by the Dutch, and a land brief was granted in that year, and another in 1652. The English began a settlement at Westchester<sup>8</sup> in 1642; but the Dutch, considering them intruders, arrested several of them, and in 1656 they surrendered themselves to the Dutch Government. The settlement was elaimed by Conn. in 1663; but the next year it came under the government of the Duke of York. A patent was granted by Gov. Nicoll, Feb. 13, 1667, and by Gov. Dongan, Jan. 6, 1686. A market was established at Westchester, May 11, 1693, to be held weekly: and the same year an annual fair was established, to meet alternately at this place and Rye. It was made a borough town April 16, 1696, with mayor, aldermen, and common eouncil, "according to the form of the best governed towns and corporations of the realm of England," and the right of holding a mayor's court, and a representation by one delegate in General Assembly. The De Laneey family, prominent officials under the Colonial Government, and loyalists of the Revolution, resided in this town. The first church (Cong.) was formed soon after the arrival of the first settlers.9

WEST FARMS—was formed from Westchester, May 13, 1846. Morrisania was taken off in 1855. It lies upon the Sound and along Harlem River, in the s. part of the co. The surface is rolling, the ridges extending N. and S. Bronx River forms its E. boundary, and Sawmill Brook flows through the center. Its soil is a gravelly and sandy loam, rendered very productive by scientific farming. West Farms, (p. v.,) a large village at the head of navigation on Bronx River, "Old Bet" with other animals soon after—imported formed the first traveling menagerie in the country, with which Van Amburgh, the Lion Tamer, was afterward associated. Thaddens and Gerard Craue, Lewis Titus, and John June, familiar to the public as enterprising showmen, were from this town and North Salem.

The last named is a station upon the Harlem R. R. Claremont is a small village on the line of Morrisania. The eastern part of the present town, originally known as "The West Farms," was patented April 25, 1666, to Edward Jessup and John Richardson, Indian purchasers.4 Fordham was bought by the Dutch in 1639, and in 1646 it was owned by Adrien Van der Donek. In 1671 John Archer, owner of 1,253 acres, obtained a patent under the title of the "Manor of Fordham." It passed to Cornelius Steenwyck, and was conveyed by his widow in 1694 to the Dutch church in New York, in whose possession it remained 60 years.5 The High Bridge of the Croton Aqueduct connects the s.w. corner of this town with N. Y. City and Macomb's Bridge, in the N. w. corner. Fort No. 8 was built upon the eminence N. w. of the Archer homestead in the Revolution; and its guns assisted in the capture of Fort Washington in 1776. It was demolished by the enemy Oct. 20, 1782. Fort Independence, on Tetards Hill, was dismantled in 1833. Prince Charles Redoubt and the Negro Fort of the Revolution were on the s. side of Valentines Hill. There are 9 chnrches in town.6

WHITE PLAINS—was formed March 7, 1788. It is an interior town, lying s. of the center of the eo. The surface is rolling and hilly. Mamaroneck River forms its E. boundary, and Bronx River its w. St. Marys Lake lies along its E. border. The soil is a clayey and gravelly loam. White Plains' (p. v.) is situated near the w. line of the town. It contains the old and new co. buildings, 3 churches, and several private seminaries. It is a station upon the Harlem R. R., and contains about 1,000 inhabitants. This town was purchased Nov. 22, 1683, by the inhabitants of Rye, and was settled soon after. In 1720 it was divided among 41 proprietors;8 and a charter was granted March 13, 1721, with a quitrent of 2 shillings 6 pence to every 100 acres. It embraced 4,435 acres. Many important historical events occurred in this town during the Revolution. The village was wantonly burned Nov. 5, 1776, by a New England major. The battle of White Plains was fought on Chatterton Hill, in Greenburgh, opposite, and within view of the village. There are 6 churches in town.9

YONKERS<sup>10</sup>—was formed as a town March 7, 1788. It is the most southerly town in the co. npon the Hudson. The surface is rugged and broken by several ridges extending N. and s. Vatentines Hill, the highest point, is 400 ft. above tide. Tuckahoe Hill, in the E. part, and Thirty Deer Ridge, extending into Greenburgh, are prominent points. The principal streams are Bronx River, forming the E. boundary, Spuyten Duyvil Creek, forming the S. boundary, Neperhan River, flowing through the center, and Sprain River and Tibbetts Brook. 12 The soil is a clayer and gravelly loam. The people are largely engaged in manufactures.<sup>13</sup> The heights along the river are studded with elegant country residences. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in busi-

YORKTOWN<sup>8</sup>—was formed March 7, 1788. It lies upon the N. border of the co., w. of the center. Its surface is broken and hilly. The Highlands lie along the N. border; and several points are elevated 600 to 1,000 ft. above tide. The principal stream is Croton River, flowing across the s. part. Moharsic Lake, 10 near the center, Mohegan Lake, in the N. part, and Magriganies Lake, in the N. E. corner, are small bodies of water. Crompond, (Yorktown p. o.,) near the center, Pines Bridge, (p. o., ) near the E. line, Jefferson Valley, (p. o., ) in the N. E. corner, and Shrub Oak, (p. e.,) near the N. line, are hamlets. A rolling mill, wire factory, gristmill, and sawmill have been erected 2 mi. w. of Croton dam. This town formed a part of Cortlandt Manor, and in the division of 1734 fell to the shares of Andrew Miller, Gertrude Beeckman, Cornelia and John Schnyler, Gertrude Verplanck, Elizabeth Skinner, John Watts, Philip Verplanck, and Susannah Warren. A Presb. church built at Crompond<sup>10</sup>about 1738 was burned July, 1779, and a committee in Congress in 1839 reported in favor of paying $3,500 for the loss, as the premises had been used as a storehouse by the Continental troops. Van der Donck subsequently took an active part in representing in Holland the interests of the colonists against the alleged tyraony of the West India Company and its servants, and finally succeeded in his efforts, notwithstanding the enmity of fior. He died in 1655, and his estate was afterward sold in detached portions by his widow. His settlement was laid waste by the Indians, Sept. 15, 1655, and prohably remained nuoccupied until after the English conquest. In 1672 Frederick Flypsen or Philipse, with Thos. Delaval and Thos. Lewis, bought 8,000 acres of Colen Douck, nearly all in the present town of Yonkers; and subsequently the former became sole owner to Kings Bridge. For one of these thirds he paid £530. These possessions were extended, by further purchase, to Croton and Bronx Rivers; and in June, 1633, the Lordship or Manor of Philipsburgh was erected, with all the rights, honors, or privileges enjoyed by the most favored, excepting that of representation in the General Assembly. He established a drawbridge tation in the General Assembly. He established a drawbridge of Spayter Dnyvil Creek, built a church, still standing, in Sleepy Hollow, and made other improvements. The Croton dam, at the head of the Croton Aqueduct, is in this town. At the top it is 106 ft, above tide and 55 ft, above the bed of the river; el feet wide at low water level, with openings of 90 and 180 feet for the passage of the surplus waters. Between these is a partition, forming the foundation of the gatehouse and sluiceway for relieving the structure from the pressure of the lake, and for the discharge of water during the pressure of the take, and for the discharge of water during repairs. The water flows over an ogeocorrived aproof cut stone laid upon hewn timber, and is received in a pond, formed by a second dam, 300 ft. below. The aqueduct is taken from the lake through a tunnel, on the side, 180 ft. long in the soft-rock; and the flow of water is regulated by a double set of metal. The dam was destroyed while building, in Jan. 1841; but the present structure promises to stand without injury, and almost without repair, to an indefinitely remote period. The surface over which the waste water flows is now much more ample than was intended before the accident in 1841. The pood has a capacity of 500,000,000 gallons.

Croton River was named Kitchawan, signifying a large and swift current. The bend west of Pines Bridge was named Keweghtegnack. The commissioners were obliged to purchase 900 acres of land overflowed by the dam, at an average cost of $500 per acre.

Formed since the census of 1855. This town is estimated to embrace 7,900 acres, and to contain 4,000 males and 4,150 females.

WYOMING COUNTY.

This county was formed from Genesee, May 14, 1841. Eagle, Pike, and a part of Portage were annexed from Allegany co. in 1846. It is an interior county, in the s. w. part of the State, separated from Lake Erie by Erie co., and from the Penn. line by Cattaraugus and Allegany. It is centrally distant 228 miles from Albany, and contains 590 sq. mi. Its surface is a broad, rolling upland, divided into ridges and broken by ravines worn by the streams. It has a slight inclination toward the N. The summits of the highest ridges are 1,200 to 1,500 ft. above Lake Erie and 1,700 to 2.000 ft, above tide. Several of the ravines in the N. are 1,000 ft. below the summits of the adjacent ridges. In the interior the ridges are broken, and the country begins to assume the hilly character which is mere fully developed further s. Genesee River, which forms a portion of the E. boundary, is bordered by steep bluffs 200 to 400 ft, high. Near Portageville the river descends from the plateau, in a series of three falls, to a depth of more than 300 ft, within a distance of  $2\frac{1}{2}$ mi. The water has worn a deep and irregular ravine in the shelving rocks, and the nearly perpendicular banks at the foot of the lower falls are 380 ft. high. The deep gorge, with the rapids and falls, form one of the wildest and most picturesque scenes in Western New York.<sup>1</sup>

The other principal streams are Cayuga, Tonawanda, Little Tonawanda, Oatka, East Coy, Wiscoy, Cattaraugus, and Buffalo Creeks. The valley of Oatka Creek, from near the s. border of Warsaw to the N. line of the co., is bordered by steep hills 400 to 1,000 ft. high. Silver Lake, in Castile, (the principal body of water,) is 3 mi. long and about ½ mi. wide. The rocks of this co. consist principally of the shales and sandstones of the Portage group. The summits of the southern hills are covered with the rocks belonging to the Chemung group. Thin layers of compact Portage sandstone are found in many parts of the co. and are extensively quarried for Upon the ridges little rounded eminences are frequently seen, appearing like drift hills: but upon examination they are found to be shale rock covered with a thin soil. Marl and muck are found in considerable quantities in the swamps. The waters of Silver Lake and of several of the streams are constantly depositing lime in the form of marl. The drift deposits in the co. are very extensive, and the soil in some parts is derived from disintegration. Upon the hills it is mostly a clay loam underlaid by hardpan, and in the valleys it is a fertile, gravelly loam and alluvium. The people are principally engaged in stock and wool growing and in dairying, for which the soil upon the hills is admirably adapted. Wheat, barley, corn, and fruits are largely cultivated in the valleys. Very little attention is paid to manufactures except such as are strictly necessary to an agricultural community.

The county seat is located at Warsaw.2 The courthouse is a commedious brick edifice, situated in the N. part of the village. The co. clerk's office is a fireproof building, adjacent to the courthonse. The jail is a wood building, arranged so as to enable the keeper to classify the prisoners rocks. An isolated mass of rocks, 15 ft. in diameter and 100 ft. high, known as "Sugar Loaf," rises from the river hed at the bend of the stream and receives nearly the whole force of the nend of the stream and reserves nearly the whose acres of the rushing water. It is bordered on one side by the present bed of the stream, and on the other by a deep chasm which separates it from the s. bank of the river. Within the memory of people now living, the river flowed over the precipice on the level of the rock which now forms its w. bank, and Sogar Loaf was an island. These fulls are accessible only from the w. The perpendicular

These falls are accessible only from the w. The perpendicular bank on the w, side of the river at one point is 380 ft high.

2 The commissioners named in the act to select the location were Peter K, feed, of Onondaga, Davis Hurd, of Niagara, and John Thompson, of Steuhen. The building commissioners were John A, McElweine, Paul Richards, and Jonathan Perry. TrumbullCary, Esq., of Batavia, gave to the co. an ample public square upon which to creet the public buildings. The first courts were held at a public house at East Orangeville, in June, 1841, and the first monthing of the Bard of Supervisors was at the same above. first meeting of the Board of Supervisors was at the same place. The first co. officers were Paul Richards, First Judge; James Sprague, Peter Patterson, Jos. Johnson, Associate Judges; W. Riley Smith, District Attorney; N. Wolcott, Co. Clerk; W. R. Groger, Sheriff; and Harvey Putnam, Surrogate.

<sup>1</sup> The Upper or Horse-Shoe Falls are about three-fourths of a mi. | 1 The Upper or Horse-Shoe Falls are about three-fourths of a min-below Portageville. The name is derived from the curve in the face of the cliff over which the water flows. For a short distance above the edge of the precipice the water is broken by a succes-sion of steps in the rock, forming a series of rapids. The height of the fall, including the rapids, is about 70 ft. The Middle Falls are about one-half mi, further down the river. For 2 or 3 rods above the edge of the cliff the water is broken into rapids, and then in an unbroken sheet it pours down 110 ft. into a chasm below bounded by repredicting leibres. A cave, called the then in an unbroken sheet it pours down late it. Into a case, below, bounded by perpendicular ledges. A cave, called the "Devil's Oven," has been worn in the rocks under the w. bank, near the bottom of the falls. In low water 100 persons can be seated within it; but when the river is high it is filled with searce within it; but when the river is high it is filled with water, and is only accessible by bouts. The Lower Falls consist of a series of rapids one-half mi, in extent, with an aggregate full of 150 ft. For about 2 mi, below the Middle Falls the river pursues a winding and rapid course between high, perpendicular walls; then descends in a succession of steps almost as regular as a staircase, dives under a shelving rock, shoots out in a narrow pass not more than 15 ft. wide, rushes down a nearly perpendicular descent of 20 ft., strikes against the base of high rocks standing almost directly in its course, whirls back, and, furning at nearly right angles, falls into a deep pool overhung with shelving according to law. The poorhouse is situated on a farm of 97 acres near the w. border of Orangeville, 9 mi. w. of Warsaw. The average number of inmates is 73, supported at a cost of 75 cts. per week each. The farm yields a revenue of about $300.2

The Buffalo, New York & Erie R. R. extends s. E. through Attica, Middlebury, Warsaw, Gainesville, Castile, and Genesee Falls, crossing the Portage Falls and connecting with the N. Y, & E. R. R. at Hornellsville. A R. R. ronte has been snrveyed, and a road-bed graded, from Attica s. w. to the Allegany River.3

There are 5 weekly newspapers published in the co.4

The eastern tier of towns in this co., with the exception of a portion of Castile, belonged to the Ogden, Silver Lake, and Cotringer tracts of the Morris Reservation, and the remaining parts of the co. to the Holland Land Purchase. The Gardeau Tract, containing 17,927 acres on both sides of the Genesee, was reserved for Mary Jemison (the "old white woman") by the Seneca Nation in their treaty with Robert Morris in 1797. About one-half of this tract lies in the present town of Castile. Upon this tract Mary Jemison and her descendants continued to reside until 1816, when she sold all but 2 sq. mi. on the w. side of the river to Mieah Brooks and Jellis Clute. The remaining 2 mi. she sold in 1831 to Henry B. Gibson and Jellis Clute, and removed to the Cattarangus Reservation. The first white man that lived within the limits of the co. was a tory, named Ebenezer Allen, who in consequence of his crimes fled from Penn. and joined the Indians about 1780. He located upon the Genesee, and for a time lived upon the lands of Mary Jemison. He afterward built a saw and grist mill on the present site of Rochester, removed thence to Oatka Creck, and thence to Canada. The first permanent white settlers were John Tolles, Jacob Wright, Nathaniel Sprout, and Stephen Crow, in 1802. The settlements increased rapidly, and in a few years most of the best lands of the co. were taken up. Most of the early settlers were from New England; but the later immigrants have principally been Germans.

<sup>6</sup> The parents of Mary Jemison emigrated from Ireland in 1743, and Mary was born during the voyage across the ocean. The family settled upon the western frontiers of Penn., where they remained in peace until the hreaking out of the French War in 1754. In 1755 a party of Indians visited the settlement and took the family prisoners, and on their retreat murdered all but Mary, then a girl of 12 or 13 years. She was carried captive to an Indian settlement on the Ohio, and adopted by two captive to an indian settlement on the Ohio, and adopted by two women who had lost a brother in the war. She grew to woman-hood among the Indians, adopted their habits and customs, was twice married, and had 8 children,—3 sons and 5 daughters. After the Revolution she had an opportunity to return to her white friends; but she preferred to remain with her husband and children. She was greatly beloved by the Indians, and highly respected by the whites who became acquainted with her. She retained her knowledge of the English lunguage, and to the last remembered the scale instructions of her wather to the last remembered the early instructions of her mother, and the last counsel which that mother gave when they were taken captive and the designs of the Indians to number the father and mother became manifest. ## YATES COUNTY.

This county was formed from Ontario, Feb. 5, 1823, and named from Joseph C. Yates, then governor. Barrington and Starkey were added from Stenben, April 6, 1824. It is centrally distant 172 mi. from Albany, and contains an area of 370 sq. mi. Its surface consists of a series of ridges extending from Steuben co. in a northerly direction, and gradually declining from a height of about 1,700 ft. above tide, upon the s. border, to a level of the undulating region near the foot of Seneca Lake. The first or most eastern of these ridges lies between Seneca and Crooked Lakes, and occupies the towns of Barrington, Starkey, Milo, Torrey, and a part cf Benton. The highest summit is about 900 ft. above Crooked Lake and 1,200 above Seneca. The slopes are generally gradual and the inclination uniform. The second ridge occupies the high peninsula between the two branches of Crooked Lake, and extends N. through Jerusalem, finally losing itself in the rolling upland of Benton. The s. part of this ridge is known as "Bluff Point," from its abrupt termination. It is about 400 ft. above the lake. The third range lies between the w. branch of Crooked Lake and Flint Creek, and occupies the w. part of Jerusalem, the E. part of Italy, and the s. E. part of Potter. The highest summits in the s. are about 700 ft. above the lake. A fourth ridge lies between the valleys of Flint Creek and West River, and extends n. through the w. part of Potter. A fifth range occupies that portion of Middlesex lying between West River Hollow and Canandaigua Lake. The declivities of the last two ranges are mostly very steep; and their summits are 800 to 1,000 ft. above the valleys. The uplands, except in the extreme w. part, are smooth and arable to their summits. The valleys between them are wide and exceedingly fertile, and the N. part of the co. is a fine rolling region.

The lowest rocks in the co. are the upper series of the Hamilton shales, cropping out on the lower course of the Crooked Lake Outlet. Next above these, upon the same stream, appear the Tully limestone, Genesee slate, and Portage groups. The first of the three, furnishing lime, is the most valuable mineral in the co. The Portage group near Penn Yan furnishes a good quality of flagging stone, and is extensively quarried for that purpose. The shales and sandstone of the Chemung group occupy the summits in the s. part of the co.; calcareous tufa is found upon Crooked Lake Outlet, and marl in the swamps near the foot of the lake. Iron pyrites have been found in considerable quantities at Bluff Point. The soil for the most part consists of a fine quality of gravelly loam, intermixed with clay and the disintegrated shales of the Portage group. It is well adapted to either tillage or pasturage.

The principal streams in the co. are Crooked Lake Outlet, Keshong Creek, Big Stream, Rock Stream, Flint Creek, and West River. Seneca Lake, forming the E. boundary of the co., is 447 ft. above tide, and Canandaigua Lake, forming a part of the w. boundary, 668 ft. Crooked Lake,1 near the center, two-thirds of it lying within the co., is 718 ft. above tide and is 18 mi. in length. Its N. part is divided by Bluff Point into two branches, each of which is from one to two mi. wide. Owing to the depredations of the midge winter wheat is less grown than formerly, while spring grains, root crops, stock, wool, and fruit are much more extensively and profitably produced. The outlet of Crooked Lake affords large water power for manufacturing purposes,—as yet but slightly improved.

The county seat is located at the village of Penn Yan, on the line of Milo and Benton. The first courthouse' and jail combined was erected in 1824; and in 1834 it was burned. In 1835 a new brick courthouse was built, on a public square, at a cost of $12,000. A jail, detached, was erected the same season. The latter was destroyed by fire in Feb. 1857, and was rebuilt the same year, at a cost of $10,200. A clerk's office was erected some years previous, upon the public square

3 The first court was held at the house of Asa Cole, in Penn Yan, on the first Tuesday in June, 1823. The first board of supervisors met at the same place. The first conficers were William M.Oliver, First Judge; James Taylor, Dist. Atty.; Abraham with the other public buildings, near the center of the village. The co. poorhouse is located on a farm of 123 acres in the town of Jerusalem, about 5 mi. s. w. of Penn Yan.\(^1\) The average number of inmates is 86, and they are supported at a weekly cost of $1 40 each. A school is tanght in the honse during a portion of the year, and religious services are held occasionally. The Crooked Lake Canal extends along the ontlet of Crooked Lake, and enters Seneca Lake at Dresden. It opens a direct water communication with Yates co. and the N, portion of Steuben, and affords an easy and cheap means of transportation. The Elmira, Jefferson & Canandaigna R. R. extends through the co., E. of the center, connecting with the N. Y. C. R. R. at the N. terminus and with the N.Y. & E.R.R. at the s. These two works of internal improvement furnish market facilities equal to those generally enjoyed by the interior cos. of the State.

Three newspapers are published in the co.2

The early history of this co. is intimately associated with the history of the "Friends," a religious sect founded by Jemima Wilkinson.3 This singular woman took the name of the "Universal Friend," and was regarded as a prophet by her followers, among whom were persons of respectability, wealth, and influence. At a general meeting of the sect, in Conn., in 1786, it was resolved to emigrate to some unsettled region and found a colony where they might live in peace and in the undisturbed enjoyment of their religious opinions. Three of their number were delegated to seek out a proper location.' They proceeded to Penn., went up the Susquehanna River, and followed the route of Gen. Sullivan to Seneca Lake, where they finally determined to locate. In June, 1787, 25 "Friends" set out for the land of promise by the way of the Mohawk Valley. They settled about I mi. s. of the present village of Dresden, the location being fixed upon from its close proximity to the fine waterfalls upon Crooked Lake Outlet.<sup>5</sup> During the fall they prepared the land, and in the following season sowed it with winter wheat, which they harvested in 1789; and this was the first wheat crop raised in Western N.Y. In 1789, Wm. Potter and Thos. Hathaway, two of their number, purchased of the State 14,000 acres of land lying between Seneca Lake and the Pre-emption Line, and subsequently Thos. Hathaway and Benedict Robinson purchased the town Jerusalem of Phelps and Gorham.<sup>6</sup> In 1789, Jemima and a large number of her followers

The Democratic Organ was commenced in 1844 at Penn Yan by Harvey L. Winants, and published about 2 years.

The Penn Yan Telegraph, da., was issned from the office of The Whig. for 6 mos. in 1846.

The Dundee Record was commenced at Dundee, Jan. 25. 1844, by Gifford J. Booth. Edward Hoagland succeeded to its editorship in 1847, John J. Diefendorf in 1853, and B. S. Bruner, its present publisher, in 1857.

Jamima Wilkinson was the daughter of Jeremiah Wilkinson.

R. I. Greer, She was one of a family of 12 children and had a R. I. farmer. She was one of a family of 12 children and had little or no advantages of education. In her 20th year she had a severe attack of fever; and for some time her life was despaired of. Upon her recovery she claimed that she had heen raised from the dead.—that her carnal existence was ended and henceforth her fife means the properties of the the was to be spiritual and divine.—and that she was endowed with the power of prophecy. She soon commenced traveling and ex-horting, and succeeded in converting many persons, among whom were several substantial New England farmers. The following description of her person is copied from "The New Haven Gazette and Connecticut Magazine." dated March, 1787. "She is Gazette and Connecticul Magazine," dated March, 1787. "She is about the middle size of woman, not genteel in her person, rather awkward in her carriage; her complexion good, her eyes remarkably black and brilliant, her huir black and waring with leautiful ringlets upon her neck and shoulders. Her features are regular, and the whole of her face is thought by many to be perfectly beautiful. As she is not to be supposed of either sex, so this neutrality is manifest in her personal appearance. She wears the neck and wrists. Her outside garment is a robe, under which it is said she wears an expensive dress, the fashion of which is made to correspond neither with that of man nor woman. Her nuderstanding is not deficient, except touching her religions fa-naticism. She is very illiterate, yet her memory is very great; artful in discovering many circumstances which fall out among her disciples. On all occasions she requires the most extra-ordinary attentions that can be bestowed upon her; one or more of her disciples usually attend upon her and perform the most menial services. Her pronnuclation is after the peculiar dialect of the most illiterate of the countrypeople of New England. Her preaching has very little connection, and is very lengthy,—at times cold and languid, but occasionally lively, zealous, and animated."

When she first arose from her bed of sickness, she assumed that there was once such a person as Jemima Wilkinson, but that she died and went to heaven, after which the Divine Spirit reanimated that same body and it arose from the dead; now, this divine inhabitant is Christ Jesus our Lord, the Friend to all mankind, and gives his name to the body to which he is united, and thereand gives mis mane to the cony to which he is minute, and therefore body and spirit cone ionjointly is the "Universal Friend." She assumed to have two "Witnesses," corresponding in all respects to those prophesied in Rev. chap. xi. from 3d to 13th verses These were James Parker and Sarah Richards. During her whole life she never yielded the pretensions which she at first made; and her whole career had the merit of consistency. Among the principal peculiar tenets of the sect was the strict enforcement of the Shaker doctrine of celibacy as indispensable to a pure life. The meetings were conducted after the manner of the Quakers, the whole congregation often sitting in perfect silence for an honr or more.—See Turner's Hist, of The Philps and Gorham Purchase, This extraordinary woman exerted a strong influence over her followers, who gratuitously planted and hoed her corn, sowed and reaped her wheat, and cut and gathered her bay, always having care to be of no trouble or expense to the Friend upon having cars to eo in the trouble of explose to the Friend upon these occasions. On one occasion she addressed, through an interpreter, a band of Oneidas who had encamped near her settlement on their way to a treaty, endeavoring to convince them that she was Christ. They listened with apparent attention, and, when she had finished, une of the chiefs arose and delivered a short address to his countrymen. She requested to have it interpreted to her,—when the savage contemptuously replied in broken English, that if she were the character she assumed to be, she would have understood the poor Indian as well as any one. She died July 1, 1819, and her sect has long since been broken up.—Hudson's Life of Jemima Wilkinson.

For a time the colony flourished; but soon neighbors began to arrive, and jealonsies were engendered, and a series of persecutions commenced, which seriously retarded the progress of the colony and embittered the last days of the "Friend."1

BARRINGTON—was formed from Wayne, (Steuben co.,) April 6, 1822. It lies upon the E. bank of Crooked Lake, in the s. part of the co. Its surface consists principally of a high ridge, sloping gradually upward from Crooked Lake to a height of 600 to 800 ft. Big Stream flows through the s. E. corner, in a deep ravine bordered by steep declivities. From Crocked Lake the ascent is nearly uniform for 2 miles; and the summit of the ridge is rolling. The soil is a slaty gravel mixed with clay, and is generally productive. Barrington, (p. v.,) near the center, contains 1 church and 25 houses. The first settlement was made in 1800, by Jacob Teeples.3 The Rev. Jas. Osgood (Bap.) was the first preacher. There are two churches in town; Bap. and M. E.

BENTON'—was formed from Jerusalem, Feb. 12, 1803, as "Vernon." Its name was changed to "Snell" April 6, 1808, and to Benton April 2, 1810. Milo was taken off in 1818, and a part of Torrey in 1851. It is the N.E. corner town of the co. Its surface is rolling and gradually descending toward the n. and E. From Seneca Lake the land slopes upward for a mile, and to a height of about 300 ft., where it spreads out in a beautiful undulating region. The valley of Crooked Lake, 200 ft. below the summits of the table land, extends about 1 mi. iuto the s. part of the town. Keshong Creek passes through the N. E. corner. The soil is clay along the lake, but upon the hills it is a deep, rich, clayey and gravelly loam, well adapted to almost every branch of agriculture. Bellona, (Beuton p.o.,) situated on Keshong Creek, in the N. E. part, contains 2 churches, (pop. 205;) and Benton Center (p. v.) 2 churches and 28 dwellings. Fergusons Corners (p. o.) is a hamlet. The village of Penn Yan lies partly within this town. The first settlement was made in the spring of 1789, by Levi Benton, from Catskill, Greene co. The first religious meetings were held in the barn of Levi Benton, in 1792, and were conducted by Ezra Cole. There are now 4 churches in town.<sup>6</sup>

ITALY—was formed from Naples, Feb. 15, 1815. It is the s. w. corner town of the co. Its surface consists of three distinct ridges, each attaining an elevation of about 1000 ft. above Canandaigua Lake. These ridges are divided by the valley of Flint Creek-known as Italy Hollowand West River Hollow. The valleys are generally narrow and bordered by steep and often precipitous sides. The summits of the ridges are broken uplands. The soil is a slaty and gravelly loam and is best adapted to pasturage. Italy Hill (p. v.) is situated in the s. E. corner; and Italy Hollow (p. o.) on Flint Creek, s. of the center. The first settlement in the town was made by John Mower, at West Hollow, in 1793.7 There are 4 churches in town.8

JERUSALEM—was organized Jan. 1789, and Benton was taken off in 1803. A small part of Steuben co., in the forks of the lake, was annexed Feb. 25, 1814. It lies on the w. bank of Crooked Lake and is the central town in the co. Its surface is divided into two distinct ridges by the w. branch of the lake and its inlet. The E. ridge terminates on the s. in Bluff Point, a promontory, 8 mi. in extent, lying between the two branches of Crooked Lake; and it extends on the N. into the town of Benton. It is about 400 ft. high and 1½ to 2 mi. wide, and is bordered by steep declivities. The continuity of this ridge is broken by a remarkable depression extending Gorham, in selling a picked township, to require the purchaser to draw for another township at the same price. Robinson and to draw for another township at the same price. Robinson and Hathaway, after purchasing Jerusdem, drew what is now the town of Geneseo, Livingston co. The Friend objected to her people 'trading and lanying property at a distance,' and, fearing her displeasure, they prevailed upon Mr. Phelps to release them from the bargain, which he was quite willing to do, as he had accertained the value of the township."—Turner's Hist.

from the head of the w. branch of Crooked Lake E. to the E. branch. The highest point in this valley is about 70 ft. above the lake. The ridge on the w. rises gradually for 3 or 4 mi, and attains a height of about 700 ft. above the lake, where the surface spreads out into a rolling upland. The soil is a gravelly and slaty loam, and is well adapted to both pasturage and tillage. Branchport, (p. v.,) situated at the head of the w. branch of Crooked Lake, contains 3 churches and about 55 houses. Kinneys Corners (Bluff Point p. o.) is situated in the E. part of the town; Shermans Hollow and Yatesville are p. offices. The first settlement was made by Jemima Wilkinson, in 1789. In that year crops of wheat were harvested in the town, and a mill was erected that made flour the same season. The first, and for a long time the only, religious services in town were conducted by Jemima, at her own house. There are 4 churches in town.2

MIDDLESEX—was formed in 1789, as "Augusta." Its name was changed April 6, 1808. Potter was taken off in 1832, and a part was annexed to Potter in 1856. It is the N. w. corner town, lying upon the E. bank of Canandaigua Lake. Its surface consists chiefly of high ridges separated by narrow valleys. The summits are 500 to 600 ft. above the lake. The valley of West River divides the ridges, and the valley of a small stream known as Boat Brook divides the w. ridge into two peaks, the n. of which is known as "Bare Hill." The soil is clayey on the summits of the hills, and gradually changes to a deep gravelly loam in the valleys. Near Federal Hollow, a mile from Rushville, is an inflammable spring.3 Middlesex Center (Middlesex p.o.) contains 3 churches and 20 dwellings. Overackers Corners is a hamlet. The first settlement was made in 1789. Judge Potter, one of the surveyors of Phelps and Gorham's purchase, was the original purchaser of the town, and took an active part in its first settlement.4 Many of the first settlers were adherents of Jemima Wilkinson; and for a considerable time there was no other religious association in the town. There are now 4 churches.<sup>5</sup>

MILO—was formed from Benton, March 6, 1818. A part of Torrey was taken off in 1851. It lies on the E. border of the co., between Seneca and Crooked Lakes. Its surface rises from Seneca Lake in a gentle and gradual slope for 2 mi., where it attains an elevation of about 400 to 500 ft. From this summit the land spreads out into an undulating region, gradually declining on the w. to the valley of Crooked Lake. The soil is principally a gravelly loam, with some clay in the vicinity of Penn Yan and on the shore of Seneca Lake. Penn Yan, 6 (p. v., ) the county seat, was incorp. April 27, 1833. It is situated at the foot of Crooked Lake, and is an important station on the Elmira, Jefferson & Canandaigua R. R. A daily steamer connects it with Hammondsport, at the head of Crooked Lake. It contains 6 churches, a high school, 2 newspaper establishments, and a bank. Pop. 2.277,—2,114 in Milo, 163 in Benton. Milo Center (p. v.) contains 150 inhabitants; and Himrods Corners (Milo p. v.) 78. The first settlement was commenced in the N. part, by the followers of Jemima Wilkinson, from R. I., in 1787.8 The first religious services were conducted by Jemima Wilkinson. There are now I0 churches in town.9

POTTER<sup>10</sup>—was formed from Middlesex, April 26, 1832, and part of Middlesex was annexed Dec. 18, 1856. It lies near the center of the N. border of the co. Its surface is hilly in the s. w., and rolling in the center and N. Flint Creek, the principal stream, flows northerly through near the eenter of the town. A swamp of 1 to I mi. wide extends along its course for 8 mi. N. of Potter Center. The soil is a slaty loam in the s. w., and a gravelly and sandy loam, with an intermixture of clay, in the remaining parts. Rushville (p.v.) is partly in Gorham, Ontario co., but principally in the N. W. part of this town. Pop. 583,—408 in Potter, I75 in Gorham. Potter Center (Potter p. o.) contains 20 houses. Voak is a p. o. on the line of Benton. Settlement was begun in 1788, by the followers of Jemima Wilkinson. The most prominent among them were William Big Stream Point (p. o.) and Shannons Corners are hamlets. Settlement began in 1800.6 Rev. Mr. Clark conducted the first religious services, in 1808. There are 8 churches in town.

TORREY'—was formed from Benton and Milo, Nov. 14, 1851. It lies upon the E. border of the co., on the shore of Seneca Lake. Its surface consists of a slope rising from the lake to the w. border, to an elevation of 400 to 500 ft. Crooked Lake Outlet flows through a deep, narrow, and rocky valley. Its whole fall from Crooked to Seneca Lake is 271 ft. The soil on the lake shore is clayey, and in the center and w. a sandy and gravelly loam. West Dresden<sup>8</sup> (p. v.) is located on Seneca Lake, at the terminus of Crooked Lake Canal. It is a landing for the Seneca Lake steamers. Pop. 365. The town was settled by the followers of Jemima Wilkinson, mostly from New England, in 1787. Jemima was the first preacher. There are now 2 churches in town; Presb. and M. E.

PUBLISHERS OF THE

NATIONAL SERIES OF STANDARD SCHOOL BOOKS.

THE National School Series is prepared by the best educators in the country, and designed with special reference to the thorough Education of the Youth of our land. Great care has been taken to exclude sectional or sectarian matter, so that the series is regarded as truly the NATIONAL SCHOOL SERIES. The favor which these books have received from all parts of the United States warrants the Publishers in calling upon their friends to examine each of the works comprising this series, (provided they have not already done so,) with a view of making them their STANDARD TEXT-BOOKS. The following is a part of the series:-

The National Series of Arithmetics and Mathematics. By Professor Charles Davies, LL.D., formerly of the United States Military Academy, and now of Columbia College. (The standard of New York, Baltimore, New Orleans, Buffalo, Rochester, Milwaukee, and other large cities.) # FORT EDWARD INSTITUTE.

AT FORT EDWARD, WASHINGTON CO., N. Y., ON THE RAILROAD.

REV. JOSEPH E. KING, A.M., PRINCIPAL.

This Institution was opened December, 1854, since which time the Regents' Annual Reports show it to have been the BEST SUSTAINED BOARDING SEMINARY IN THE STATE.

Nearly every county in the State, and two-thirds of the States of the Union, have been its patrons. The following are senis of the grounds of its claim to the popular favor :-

on the grounds of its caum to the popular favor:—
Its substantial brick buildings, well guarded against fire, and which, by the central position of its common Dining Hall Chapet, and an ample suit of class rooms, accessible respectively to the two separate departments by distinct entrances, are most admirably adapted to the safe and successful co-education of Indies and gentlemen, the two departments being at all hours absolutely under the control of the Faculty. Also its noble Library and Apparatus.

ITS LIBERAL PROVISION FOR THE ABLEST INSTRUCTION

In each branch and department of study; three professors and teachers being devoted exclusively to the common Euclish studies, two each to the Mathematics and Classics, one respectively to Commercial Instruction, to Natural Science, to Medical Languages, and to Painting, while no less than four have in charge the department of Music. Bare facilities are thus attorded to prepare for teaching; while desirable situations are procured for young ladies who graduate in the prescribed Course of Studes. It is a part of the well established system of this Christian Institute, to conserve and promote the health, manners, and morals of its punils. The Principal wishes it distinctly understood that he becomes personally responsible to parents for the moral at described species rooms, plainly but suitably furnished; and wholesome and sufficient Board, of a quality and variety satisfactors to its rations.

ITS REMARKABLY MODERATE RATES.

To many families the difference in the cost of maintaining a son or daughter at home or at this Institute, would be sea only appreciable. One hundred and three dollars per year, pays for Board, intriished room, fuel, washing and tuition in common 1 mass. Extra branches at corresponding rates. A student may enter for a single term, or at any time in the term and pay but the residue only.

There are three terms of fourteen weeks each. Winter Term opens December 1st, 1859; Spring Term opens March 25d, 1860. Full Term opens August 16th, 1860. For circulars, or for rooms, apply to the Principal.

TESTIMONIALS OF EXAMINING COMMITTEES.

Rry, Ww. Scott, of Montreal, Secretary, 1855. The Committee found the buddings, in their construction and specific arrangements, better adapted to their purpose than any other ever visited by them.

Rev. S. Washburn, of Troy, Secretary, November, 1856. We were highly gratified with the good order and decorum apparent were dignly guardened of the Institute.

REV. M BATES, of Schenectady, Secretary, March, 1857. There is, we think, no Institution, not wholly devoted to this object, where equal facilities are afferded for acquiring, at trilling expense, a thorough business education.

Prof. John Newman, A. M., of Union College, Secretary, Nov. 18, 57. The Committee have found the most satisfactory evidence in its able Board of Instruction and Government, its skillful finanrial management, as well as in the extent and sterling character of its patronage, that the Fort Edward Institute is a signal success.

While the Institution is in all departments worthy of entire confidence, the Committee feel called upon to mention the department of Music and that of Painting, as decidedly superfor to any thing we have ever heard or seen in any similar Institution. Rev. J. K. Chersman, of Schenectady, Secretary, July, 1857. The gastronomic department, under the care of Mr. A. K. H. Atun, the Steward, is finely managed. An abundant supply of we'l cooked food is provided.

Rev. R. H. Robinson, Secretary, Saratoga Springs, Nov. 25. 1888. The peculiar energy of the Principle pervades every department of instruction, embracing eighteen teachers i number sufficient to permit a subdivision of classes, so that none need be neglected. Many students have conservated their young hearts on the altar of Christianity, and will go forth with young nearts on the data of thistanaty, and was got a to-word great power, rightly directed, to bless the church and the world Paus, C. T. Lewis, A.M., Troy University, March, 1850. The practical drill was admirable. Attention had been given to the powers of ready and neat expression, but the basis lay in a clear comprehension of facts and principles, for which good language was made an ornament, not a substitute. Perhaps no teature of the exercises was more charming than their entire forness.

which was at once transparent and unobtrusive.

This institution, in its plan and arrangements, has regard to the physical as well as the moral and intellectual training of its members.

THE COURSE OF INSTRUCTION

Is liberal and thorough, such as experience has proved to be most effectual for this purpose. By it, students are prepared for any class in college, for the scientific schools, or for commercial life. The

ANCIENT LANGUAGES

are taught critically and with a view to sound scholarship and not to mere superficial aequaintance. The

MATHEMATICAL COURSE

is extensive. The preparation of pupils who have passed through it, and their success elsewhere, gives the best evidence of faithfulness and skill in this very essential department of instruction. Very many are the unsolicited testimonials received on this point. Special attention is given to the

MODERN LANGUAGES:

French, Spauish, and German form an important part of the course of study, and are taught as spoken languages by well qualified masters. The

also, in its elements, as well as in its higher departments, receives more than ordinary notice, and is not made subordinate to any other study.

MORAL AND RELIGIOUS TRAINING

is earefully regarded, as in every well ordered household; but no interference is attempted with the peculiar tenets of any faith. Seats are provided for the pupils in both the Episcopal and Presbyterian Churches.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION.

The complete arrangements made for this generally neglected object, and the success that has attended them, deserve to be specially noticed. Under their influence, we have seen the delicate and almost puny

The infantry and artillery drills; and, while these receive a minuteness of attention not often given to them, and are so used as to produce physically a permanent effect, they have no tendency to create a desire, as experience has shown, for a military life. The system, as here arranged, has been chosen for the great benefits that result from it. But, although a military school, the institution, it must be distinctly understood, is not for the training of those who are vicious or unmanageable under any other system. Should any of this class, by accident or misrepresentation, ever be received, they will, on the manifestation of such character, be at once returned to their parents. The feelings of the principals, not less than their intimate relations with their pupils, look to other associations and other results. Confidence, patience, and kindness on their part, truthfulness, honor, and generous sentiment on the pupil's, are the basis and the bond of union between them. No boy who is insensible to considerations of this kind is desired in the school, nor can be long remain connected with it.

Pupils are received whenever a vacaucy occurs; but, as the number is limited and places are usually filled in advance, applications, to prevent disappointment, should be made as early as possible.

Further information may be obtained from the gentlemen named as references, or by addressing the principals.

BROOKLYN HEIGHTS, L. I.

This Institution claims to give to females all the advantages for thorough and complete education that are enjoyed by the other sex in our best appointed Colleges.

It is liberally endowed, and is under the patronage of the State.

Its location, in the city of Brooklyn, opposite New York, enables it to command all the educational resources of the metropolis; while no country village is more quiet, beautiful, or healthy.

THE COURSE OF INSTRUCTION

Is under the direction of A. Crittenden, A.M., who has devoted his whole life to female education. He is assisted by twenty-four professors and teachers; and the course of instruction embraces the modern languages, with Latin, the various branches of Literature, History, Mathematics, Chemistry, Natural, Moral, and Intellectual Philosophy, Music, Drawing, Painting, &c. &c.

THE LABORATORY

Is a model of its kind, and furnished with every necessary article of apparatus.

THE OBSERVATORY

Has an excellent achromatic telescope of six inches object glass. It is equatorially mounted, moved by clockwork, &c.

THE CABINETS

Are amply provided with minerals, shells, &c. One or two articles of apparatus particularly arrest the attention of the observer,—one of Ross's Compound Microscopes, which magnifies 1800 diameters, also Barlow's large Planetarium, eleven feet in diameter.

The accommodations for pupils from abroad are intended to afford all the comforts of home, and to secure for them social, intellectual, and moral culture.

DESIGN.

The object of this chain of Colleges is to prepare young men in an essential manner for the duties of a business life, in giving them a thorough knowledge of the sciences which secure that end.
